WHAT GLITTERS MAY NOT BE GOLD, BUT FUN

Gold Medal For DeMont In Olympics

Lad Wins 400 Free Swim Race

MUNICH (UPI) — Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, a young lad who swam in the 400-meter freestyle event at the Olympic trials just to get ready for his specialty, the 1,500 meters, today won an Olympic gold medal in the 400-meter event.

The 16-year-old DeMont, still with another year to go at Terra Linda High School, edged Brad Cooper of Australia by one one-hundredth of a second to win the race in Olympic record time.

Steve Genter of Lakewood, Calif., finished for his third medal of the games.

DeMont overtook Cooper on the final leg and just did edge him at the final touch in a time of 4:00.26. Cooper, who had set the previous Olympic record of 4:04.6 in this morning's preliminaries, was caught by the electronic clock in 4:00.27.

DeMont's performance shattered the Olympic record of 4:09.0 set 1968 in Mexico City by Mike Burton. He missed the world record by 15 hundredths of a second. The record of 4:00.11 was set at the Chicago trials by Kurt Krumpholz of UCLA during one of the heats. Krumpholz failed to make the Olympic team when he was sixth in the finals.

The youngest male member of the U.S. team, DeMont wasn't expected to score this well in the 400 meters since his specialty is the longer 1,500, the metric mile. His best chance for a gold medal was to be in the longer race, trials scheduled Sunday and the finals Monday.

RICK DeMONT
Unexpected gold

At the trials in Chicago, DeMont surprised the swimming experts by finishing second in the 400-meter freestyle, lowering his best time from 4:06.0 to 4:01.2. He won the 1500 meters there with a time of 15:52.91, breaking the old world record of 15:57.1. His previous best had been 16:03 5. The decision to swim the 400-meter event at the trials was made by DeMont and his coach, Don Swartz, just the night before the event.

For the U.S., at least, DeMont's split second victory today balanced the scales after Tim McKee had lost out on the gold medal in last night's 400-

BESIEGED EMPIRE: THE PATRICK STORY

Suits And Countersuits

By DAVID DIETZ
(Last of four articles)

Amid a blizzard of suits and countersuits, William Penn Patrick's empire is entangled in what is virtually a nationwide legal fray that shows no sign of conclusion.

Indeed, there are signs that authorities may step up their assault.

From Marin to New York, the Patrick conglomerate is under attack by the federal and state governments. In some cases, he has counterattacked with his own lawsuits, claiming malicious prosecution and abuse of governmental process.

And he vows to keep operating as usual. "I'm fighting a battle for the unborn . . . this is a battle for real freedom — to do your own thing and do it honestly," he says.

So assured of success is Patrick, moreover, that he says his empire, growing around the world, will be worth $1 billion in five years. He has placed the current value at $150 million.

While authorities have kept Patrick busy, so have dissatisfied clients of a Patrick project called Leadership Dynamics Institute. Not a pyramid company, it was at first established as a motivational training program for sales people in the empire.

Up to $1,000 is charged for a four-day "seminar" which several clients charged in lawsuits included slappings, forced nudity and other bizarre experiences.

It has been offered to the public but still draws largely on Patrick sales people and their families.

LDI has an affiliate for youth, a training and fitness program conducted at the Patrick empire's 2,600-acre ranch near Lakeport. It was in its first year of operation this summer when Kimberly Ann Allen of Bel Marin Keys, 15-year-old daughter of a Holiday Magic vice president, collapsed on a survival hike several weeks ago. She died later in a hospital from complications arising from heat exhaustion.

A 12-year-old companion was hospitalized the same day, but the Lake County sheriff's office has closed the cases, saying there is no suspicion of foul play.

Numerous suits have been filed against LDI by people claiming to have been beaten, compelled to perform unnatural sex acts and placed in coffins and on crosses. The most recent action was by two Wisconsin women seeking $250 million in damages for mental and physical suffering.

Four earlier suits, including one by an Ohio accountant for $2 million, have been settled out of court. The accountant, Richard E. Shafer, received $40,000, while the three other actions each were settled for $25,000.

Although it has been operating since 1970, when the first class was conducted in Atlanta, LDI recently stirred worldwide controversy and interest as a result of an investigation by a London Daily Mail reporter who attended one of the seminars.

"I and others were punched, kicked, vilified in gutter language, doused with jugs of ice and water — and told it would help us become business tycoons," the reporter wrote in a series that stirred England's Parliament.

Schafer had said in a deposition he was accused of being a homosexual, forced to wear women's clothes and that a Tampax was forced into his rectum.

Patrick, who originated the course with Ben Gay III, former Holiday Magic president, stoutly defends it. The purpose is to force people to erase their "self-pity, guilt feelings and hatreds," he said.

He added, "We do have some weird forms of motivation, but anybody can take anything out of context and make it evil . . . They say we are sadists and that pisses me off."

"I found out what it means to care for, respect and love myself and others," said a Stamford, Conn., man in one letter.

Gay said the original idea was to "teach leadership" with a profit motive in mind. (Patrick told the I-J that up to 3,000 persons have taken the course.)

Gay, former LDI president who led numerous seminars, told of accidents in which he suffered two chipped teeth and

Plane Crash Kills Petaluma Woman

Mrs. Nelson, 33, was found dead at 7 a.m. today in the wreckage of their small rented plane half a mile west of Old Adobe School in Petaluma.

The Nelsons — parents of four children — lay undiscovered in the plane wreckage all night following the 9:30 p.m. crash, while searchers combed an area miles away.

Sonoma county sheriff's deputies said the couple took off in a rented Piper Cherokee 180 aircraft from Petaluma Skyranch Airport at 7:30 p.m. They flew to Napa for dinner, and were apparently trying to find the airport in heavy fog when the plane crashed.

Police received five calls from residents of the area who reported hearing what sounded like an airplane crash, but the search was concentrated in the wrong area.

A deputy found the wreckage at 7 a.m. today and said Mrs. Nelson appeared to have been dead for several hours.

The deputy said Nelson was conscious although his head was bleeding profusely. Nelson was in surgery at Hillcrest Hospital, Petaluma this morning where he was reported in "fair" condition, with severe head lacerations, and a possible broken wrist.

A hospital spokesman said it was "a miracle he's alive" after the crash.

Fischer's Lifelong Chess Goal Realized

REYKJAVIK (UPI)—Bobby Fischer, whose bold style and capricious temperament forced the world to take a new look at the ancient game of chess, realized his lifetime goal of becoming the first official American world chess champion today. in an anti-climactic telephoned resignation from Russia's Boris Spassky in the 21st game.

Spassky called arbiter Lothar Schmid to resign less than two hours before the scheduled resumption of the 21st game which was adjourned in Fischer's favor after 40 moves Thursday. The Russian grandmaster had spent the night analyzing the game in futile search of a way to save a draw and his title.

Still to be resolved, however, was the $1.75 million breach of contract lawsuit filed by movie producer Chester Fox against Fischer, whose protests prevented cameras from filming the games.

Schmid and International Chess Federation President Max Euwe, the last non-Russian to hold the championship, hastily arranged a coronation ceremony in the playing hall.

They raced to Fischer's hotel to tell him he was the new world champion. Fischer asked for confirmation of his victory in writing from Spassky.

With the pieces still on the chessboard from last night, Schmid returned to his desk and waited. Fischer charged in 16 minutes late.

Holidays Will Bring A Short Work Week

For many public servants in Marin and Southern Sonoma, next week will have only three working days, thanks to Labor Day on Monday, and Admission Day observed the following Friday.

On the more widely observed Labor Day, city and county offices, banks, libraries, stores, and most businesses will close, and there will be no mail delivery.

Parking meters in San Rafael and Mill Valley will not operate Monday or Saturday, while meters in Sausalito will operate both holidays.

The Independent-Journal will publish on both days.

Meetings of official bodies scheduled for Labor Day have either been canceled or postponed. These are:

Two More Candidates File For College Board

Two more candidates filed papers this morning for the November 7 election to two vacant seats on the Marin Community College District Board, the county elections department said today.

Their filings brought the total of definite candidates to eight, with only hours to go before the 5 o'clock deadline.

Meanwhile a ninth avowed candidate, Gregory C. Fearon of 62 Hillside Avenue, San Rafael, was engaged today in attempting to find someone to cosign a note to borrow the $400 needed to put his qualification statement on the sample ballot.

Fearon, a College of Marin student and former student body president, has appealed to the State Supreme Court a prepayment requirement for the statement.

Fearon said he would file candidacy papers before 5 p.m. with or without the $400.

Turtle is an administrator for Marin County Schools and the Family Therapy Institute of Marin. He is a trustee for Marin Open House, a community drug treatment program in San Rafael, and on the executive committee of Festival Theatre Foundation, San Anselmo.

He is a member of the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club, Marin Alternative and Common Cause.

Balmy Weather For Labor Day Weekend

The recent balmy-to-warm weather that Marin and other Bay Area outdoor fans have been enjoying most of each day will probably continue throughout the Labor Day weekend holiday, according to the weatherman.

Daytime highs — in the 60s at Marin and other beaches and ranging to the mid-80s inland — will be bracketed as usual by morning and evening by fog or low clouds.

Attorney Seeks Seat On Marin Hospital Board

A Larkspur attorney, Martin E. Barrett of 324 Wilson Way, today filed candidacy papers for the Nov. 7 election for one of two seats on the Marin Hospital District Board, the county elections department reported.

His filing ensures at least something of a fight in the election — only the two incumbents, George E. Croke and Dr. Bradford Simmons, had so far filed.

Barrett, 39, was unavailable for biographical information this morning.

Both vacancies on the hospital district board are for four year terms. Deadline for filing was 5 p.m. today.

Federal Pay Hikes Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—As an anti-inflation move, President Nixon has deferred for three months federal pay raises for 3.6 million military and civilian employes.

Nixon said the pay increases would violate the guidelines of his economic stabilization plan since federal employes received raises of 5.5 per cent Jan. 1. He deferred the increases due Oct. 1 until Jan. 1, 1973.

On other economic fronts Thursday, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson criticized Sen. George McGovern's proposals for tax reforms and defense spending cuts.

Peterson said in a statement that McGovern's plan to trim $30 billion from the defense budget was "simplistic."

Shultz told a news conference that the stock market and business investment would be hurt if McGovern became president and imposed his plans to tax capital gains—income from stocks, bonds and other fixed assets—at the rate of ordinary income.

The first $100 of capital gains income is tax free and of the balance only 50 per cent is subject to federal income tax.

Two of McGovern's top advisers responded to Shultz' charges at another news conference.

"The effect of tax rates on investment is, in my opinion, very small," said Joseph Pechman of the Brookings Institution and a member of McGovern's economic advisory staff.

Ted Van Dyk, head of McGovern's issues team, said the Democratic campaign staff had asked ABC, CBS and NBC for free time on television next week for a Nixon-McGovern debate on the economy.

The White House issued the text of Nixon's message to Congress about federal pay. The President was in Hawaii when it was released.

Nixon's action was expected since he had said last December when he approved the pay increases that he would postpone the October adjustments.

The pay hikes were scheduled to take effect Oct. 1 under a provision of the 1970 Comparability Act to equalize pay of government and non-government workers doing similar jobs.

Dayan States Peace Possible With Egypt

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Thursday night Israel can come to terms with Egypt on a partial peace agreement but not with Jordan unless King Hussein softens his stance.

Dayan said Egypt wants Israel to withdraw from the east bank of the Suez Canal— and Israel is willing to do so, but it is not willing to vacate the West Bank of Jordon and East Jerusalem, as the Jordanian king wants.

In Beirut, the newspaper An Nahar reported the Soviet Union is seeking to establish a united Arab front which will embrace Syria, Iraq, and the Palestinian resistance movement to counter increased American influence in other parts of the Arab world.

The newspaper quoted "circles close to Soviet sources" in Beirut for its report.

An Nahar said this was one of the reasons Kremlin leaders dispatched a special envoy to Damascus with an "important" message to President Hafez Assad of Syria.

In other Mideast developments, a delegation from the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party will visit Cairo soon to assess the future of Russo-Egyptian relations, according to diplomatic reports reaching London. Sources said there were uncertainties in the committee and in the ruling circles of the Soviet East European allies, on party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev's explanation of Russia's pullout from Cairo.

The Beirut newspaper Al Anwar today quoted Syrian Economic Minister Mustafa Hallaj as calling for an Arab boycott of American economic interests. The paper said that during a Beirut meeting with Lebanese and Egyptian economy ministers, Hallaj asked for "an embargo on all American interests in Arab countries including petroleum trade, investment, banks and security companies."

In Cairo, Ahmed Khatib, the Prime Minister of the Federation of Arab Republics, said today the presidents of Egypt, Syria and Libya will meet in the Egyptian capital in October to discuss the liberation of Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

Dayan, speaking to foreign students in Tel Aviv, said "I think the Egyptians want us to withdraw (from the Suez Canal) and I think we should not insist on staying."

"The question is the framework—the kind of agreement about this withdrawal--and I think such an agreement can be reached," he said.

"The (Sinai) desert can serve as a buffer between us," he said.

As for Jordan, he said, King Hussein would make peace with Israel only if Israel withdraws from the occupied West Bank of Jordan, including East Jerusalem.

Dayan said Hussein's stance was "unacceptable."

"If I have to choose between peace with full withdrawal or no peace but we stay where we are, I would choose no peace," he said, adding:

"We should control the West Bank, and the Arabs there should stay Jordanian citizens and maintain close contact with Amman. This goes for the Gaza Strip as well...

"I want Jews to have the right to settle in Judea and Samaria (the West Bank), everywhere in Judea and Samaria."

Eagleton Says Clark Not Duped

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI)—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., said Thursday night he doesn't think Ramsey Clark "was duped" on his recent trip to North Vietnam, but believed the former attorney general made an "improper trip."

Eagleton, subbing for Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver—the man who replaced him on the ticket— also said it would have been preferable if Pierre Salinger had not made his trip to Paris on Sen. George McGovern's behalf.

"I don't think Ramsey Clark was duped," Eagleton said while here for a campaign fundraising dinner for Democratic gubernatorial nominee Daniel Walker. "He made an improper trip at an improper time."

Shriver was invited to the dinner, but had to cancel his appearance because of a strategy session in Washington with McGovern.

The Missouri senator said, "I think it would have been better if those trips had not been made"—referring to the trips by Salinger and Clark.

Pressed to explain what he meant by the statement, Eagleton said, "It's self explanatory." He added, however, that he did not think the trips abroad have hurt the Democratic nominee's chance of getting elected in November.

"I think the campaign is in better shape at this juncture than it was after the August, 1968 convention in Chicago," Eagleton said.

Salinger, press aide to former presidents Johnson and John F. Kennedy, met with the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris on McGovern's behalf.

Meany Lashes Out At Nixon, McGovern

WASHINGTON (UPI)—AFLCIO President George Meany charged in a Labor Day statement today the administration has held down wages while allowing prices and profits to "skyrocket."

The leader of 13.6 million union members said President Nixon's economic policies amounted to a "double standard" which labor would not accept.

But Meany refused to relent in his hostility to Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern. He said the AFLCIO would concentrate upon electing a "Congress that is friendly to the interests of working people regardless of who occupies the White House over the next four years."

And although Meany did not mention MVovern by name, he said working people were not about to be "shunted aside in the interest of any privileged elite."

"They will not blindly support those who assault their most deeply held values, demean their intelligence, scorn their organizations, laugh at their patriotism or sneer at their way of life," Meany said.

Meany's statement attacked Nixon's economic and other domestic policies but was not as sharp in its criticism as the statement he issued for Labor Day, 1971. In that statement, he attacked Nixon by name.

Meany faulted the administration for unemployment, saying it was "a tragic human waste" for 5 million Americans to be unemployed. He said economic controls should be "equitable and across the board."

"Wages have been held down, but prices and profits have been allowed to skyrocket," Meany said. "Employers, naturally, are only too happy to police wage controls—but no effective machinery was ever set up to keep prices in check."

He said prices and profits and other forms of income should be controlled as wages are controlled or the entire controls program should be abolished.

Other union leaders and Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson also weighed in with statements in advance of the national holiday Monday:

—Hodgson, the administration spokesman, said American workers had made "impressive economic and social gains" since Labor Day, 1971. He said the rate of inflation was down, employment up, unemployment down and productivity and purchasing power of average wages up. He said manpower programs had been improved by his department and a new job safety law had been implemented further, adding that the administration looked forward "to even greater achievements."

—Steel Workers President I. W. Abel said U.S. workers were "living in a split-level economy." He said the "rich are getting richer, middle income people are squeezed, conditions grow even worse for those in the lowest income bracket."

—The National Labor Committee for McGovern-Shriver, an organization that supports the Democratic ticket in opposition to Meany's no endorsement policy, said that "when you go shopping you're lucky to get 80 cents worth for your dollar. While prices and company profits keep climbing, there's a lid on wages and salaries."

—Communications Workers President Joseph A. Beirne, who also is secretary-treasurer of the McGovern-Shriver labor committee, said he anticipated the administration would be putting out "half truths, deceptions, and outright lies" designed to convince workers that things had improved for them. "But the plain fact is, and it is becoming clearer each day, that the Nixon administration is the creature and the servantof big business," Beirne said.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

New Assignment

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Alfred M. Worden, the last remaining spaceman among three who were reprimanded for taking unauthorized stamped envelopes on the Apollo 15 flight to the moon, has been ordered out of the astronaut corps.

Worden was transferred to California where he will work as a research engineer and test pilot in a scientific outpost within the space program, the space agency announced yesterday.

Worden and Apollo 15 crewmates David R. Scott and James B. Irwin began their moon journey July 26, 1971, the fourth manned lunar flight and the first to the Hadley Rille and Appennine Mountains.

But they were later reprimanded by NASA for taking 400 unauthorized envelopes with them on the mission. Stamped with commemorative space postage and postmarked Cape Kennedy, some of the envelopes were later sold by a West German stamp dealer for $1,500 each.

Beaten Youth Dies; Father Is Charged

CHICAGO (UPI)— Johnny Lindquist never got back to the small Wisconsin farm and the lake where he first caught a fish. The battered 7-year-old died Thursday in a West Side hospital.

He had been unconscious since July 28 from a beating he received after he was taken from the foster home in Wisconsin and returned to his natural parents.

Johnny, who had spent most of his life in foster homes, had been living with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Karvanek, Tigerton, Wis., for almost four years when a court order forced him to return to his natural parents in Chicago.

"When his parents wanted him back, I knew he had to go. I tried to make it easy. I told him John, you have to go back, your father loves you. But he ran to the top of the stairs and cried," Mrs. Karvanek said.

"He said 'I'm never going back.' At night he'd pray, 'please God, don't let them take me back'."

But in late March the Karvaneks drove Johnny back into the city. "We never saw him again until after the beating. He looked so small in the hospital. All bruises and so thin. But I still had hope. I thought it would work out and he'd come back home to the farm. I was vowing to fatten him up," she said softly.

Johnny was beaten July 28 after he said he wanted to go home to the Karvaneks, police said. He was taken to St. Anne's Hospital in a coma. Doctors performed emergency surgery for severe brain damage.

After he was admitted, Johnny's two brothers and two sisters were placed in foster homes. The move was ordered after one of his sisters, Julie, 2, was injured when she fell from a window in the Lindquist apartment. Her mother was not home.

The Lindquists were barred from visiting Johnny at the hospital. Mrs. Karvanek, who has no children of her own, came daily to sit with Johnny. "I talked to him all the time about the farm. They told me hearing is the last sense to go. Sometimes I thought he almost smiled at me. I don't know if he ever heard me," Mrs. Karvanek said quietly.

"Johnny was a good son. He was 3 when he came to live with us. It seemed he was always there. Johnny loved that farm. He loved to fish with Robert (the Karvanek's other foster son). He loved baseball. He could hit every ball.

"He was a good kid. Respectful. We were so proud of him. I don't think I ever saw a kid so good. No, I'm not saying he was perfect. He was a boy, but a good boy.

Protection Plan Wins Approval

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has approved a comprehensive plan to clean up California's ocean waters and prevent their pollution by sewage, mercury and DDT.

The new, stringent standards are designed to make the waters pure enough to swim safely anywhere along the coast up to 1,000 feet out to sea and 30 feet under the water.

The state Water Resources Control Board, which developed the lan over an 18-month period, estimated that $870 million would be required for construction of sewage treatment and other pollution control facilities.

Most of the sum will be borne by local governments with private industry carrying $100 million of the burden.

"This plan greatly strengthens California's water quality standards and has set a precedent for far-sighted standards development," Paul DeFalco Jr., regional EPA director, said in a letter to Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"The ocean plan will prove to be of great value in conserving the high quality of coastal waters for future generations of Californians," DeFalco said.

Currently, 55 municipal plants and 34 industries each day dump more than 1.2 billion gallons of waste into the ocean, about 30 per cent of the national total, the state water board said.

The new standards require secondary treatment of sewage before it can be pumped into the ocean. Municipalities may apply for state and federal aid to pay for up to 80 per cent of the cost of new facilities.

About 85 to 95 per cent of substances such as arsenic, mercury and DDT will be required to be removed from waste with no variances permitted.

Barred outright will be discharges of high-level radioactive waste, radiological chemicals, biological warfare agents and municipal industrial sludge.

The new standards will be phased in beginning next year. Enforcement will be up to the state. EPA approval of the new plan was announced Thursday.

Probation Given For Sex Offense

Curtis Phillip Wall, 63, of Novato, yesterday was declared by a Marin Superior Court judge not to be a sex offender who should be hospitalized.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner made the decision after reviewing reports by three doctors who declared Wall did not need treatment.

The judge then placed Wall on probation for five years and sent him to jail for 30 days.

Japan-U.S. Talks Wind Up Today

HONOLULU (UPI) — President Nixon wound up his meetings with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka today, assured that Japan's warming to Red China would not affect U.S. Pacific bases, and steps would be taken to correct trade deficits.

A joint statement, to be issued following the final session between the two leaders, was said to contain agreement by Japan to increase purchases of U.S. goods by $1.1 billion within a year and a pledge to take longer-range action to increase American imports.

The two scheduled a final, wind-up session before Nixon presides over a change of command ceremony at the headquarters of U.S. forces in the Pacific and heads back to the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler told newsmen Nixon was assured during the initial three-hour meeting with Tanaka that Japanese moves toward establishing diplomatic relations with Peking would not affect current defense commitments.

Japan and the United States are jointly committed to the defense of Taiwan, and concern has been expressed in some quarters that the move by Japan to establish diplomatic relations with Peking would force them to abandon their treaty obligations to the Chinese mainland regime's arch-enemy.

This would affect the U.S. military bases in Japan and Okinawa which are considered vital facilities both for the defense of Taiwan and for prosecuting the war in Vietnam.

But a compromise apparently was agreed on by which Japan generally reaffirmed its commitment to the existing defense alignment without specifically referring to Taiwan or Vietnam.

"We are satisfied that Japan will not act in any way adverse to our mutual interests," Ziegler said. "We are confident that nothing they will do will affect the mutual security treaty."

He said agreement had been reached to continue close consultation as both nations move to improve their relationships with China. He also said Tanaka had accepted an invitation to make a formal visit to Washington sometime early next year.

Douglas James Schuler, 19, who has been charged in Marin Municipal Court with possessing stolen property, told the Independent-Journal the rifle belonged to a friend who was in the car and that the weapon had been in his (Schuler's) possession for more than a year until the friend took it back recently.

Schuler lives at 545 Olive Avenue.

CHESS

who had come thinking they would see chess, burst into wild applause and shouted, "Bobby, Bobby."

Fischer, who learned the game at the age of six and vowed at nine he would be the world champion, looked shy for the first time in the marathon duel and quietly toyed with his fountain pen.

Schmid moved forward to the edge of the stage and announced:

"Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Spassky resigned game 21 by telephone to me at 12:50 p.m. This is a legal way to resign. Mr. Fischer has won the 21st game and is winner of the world championship match."

The crowd again went wild, standing in the seats, shouting, cheering, stomping. Fischer looked out at the crowd, then down at his feet, walked over to sign his scoresheet and almost ran out.

Fischer, whose 24-hour Sabbath began at sundown, returned to his hotel and closed himself in his room.

Euwe said Spassky realized the game was lost because he had sealed the wrong 41st move at adjournment Thursday night. Russian sources said the champion had sealed his bishop up to queen seven.

"He should have played king to rook three and he would have got an easy draw," Euwe said. "Fischer is a worthy world champion but I hope he will give Spassky the return match he deserves."

Russian chess sources said Spassky was not concerned or upset. "He went out together with (his seconds Eyfim) Geller and (Nikolai) Krogius."

Schmid smiled broadly and said after the brief ceremony, "Well, thank heavens its over. I had a notion Spassky might call me."

"He called me personally and told me he wanted to resign which is the correct way to do it," Schmid said. "I think his position was hopeless but there was no trace in his voice that he was depressed."

Incumbents File For Board Posts

With the deadline for filing for the Nov. 7 election just hours away, two incumbents on the Strawberry Recreation District board were the only persons who had filed by midday today for two seats on the board.

The county elections department reported that candidacy papers had been returned by Jane Brown and Manuel K. Lehua.

Lehua, 50, of 226 Reed Circle, is seeking a second term on the board, having first been elected in 1968. He is a fireman with the San Francisco Fire Department.

Mrs. Brown, a housewife, who lives at 140 Richardson Drive, was appointed to the recreation district several months ago to fill a seat vacated by the resignation of director James K. Garner.

Deadline for filing is 5 p.m. today.

Anonymous Tip Leads To Capture

An anonymous tip led San Rafael police today to the capture of a San Quentin inmate who failed to return to the prison Tuesday evening after being temporarily released to look for work.

Police were watching all entrances to San Rafael from Highway 101 this morning on a tip that James N. Litteral 26, was heading toward the city in a green mustang.

Litteral, accompanied by Charmaine Marie Payne, 18, was spotted at 2 a.m. as he left Highway 101 at the San Quentin Y overpass. He was followed to the parking lot of the Bermuda Palms motel where he was stopped and asked to identify himself.

According to police, Litteral first gave his name as Ron Hubbard but a tatoo on his arm gave him away.

Police reported that a hunting knife with a 10 inch blade, and six 12-guage shotgun shells were found in the Mustang.

Litteral, who was due for parole Nov. 2 after serving five years of a six-months to 15-year sentence for second-degree burglary, was returned to San Quentin.

His companion was not charged.

EMILE J. LARROUY
Favorite of children

OBITUARIES

Emile J. Larrouy Dies At 72

Emile J. Larrouy, who endeared himself to scores of children while a custodian in the San Rafael school system, collapsed in a San Rafael store and was pronounced dead yesterday at Marin General Hospital.

The 72-year-old Larrouy, a popular man who worked at various schools, had retired in 1965 after 14 years service.

Born in Herre, Basque, Pyrennes, France, he was affectionately known as "Frenchy" to the students he watched come and go. On his 65th birthday prior to retirement, pupils at West End School, where he last worked, feted him.

He once said of the occasion, "When they see me, they say, 'Happy Birthday, Mr. Frenchy,' and they give me a big stack of cards."

Larroy, who lived at 5 Dolores Street, San Rafael, came to San Rafael 46 years ago. He worked for laundries and at the Elks Club as a custodian before going to work for the city school system.

Upon retiring from his school job, Larroy worked at small custodial and maintenance jobs.

He held honorary membership in the San Rafael Parent-Teacher Association.

Larrouy is survived by his wife, Elise; three daughters, Lucy (Vickie) Pedroli and Valerie Henry of San Rafael and Helen Neal of Petaluma; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. tomorrow at St. Raphael's Church. Rosary is to be recited at 8 p.m. at Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

MINNIE CRENSHAW

Minnie Crenshaw, 94, longtime Petaluma resident, died yesterday at a local convalescent hospital after a lengthy illness.

Mrs. Crenshaw was born and reared in Washington and had lived in Petaluma for many years.

MRS. PETERSON

Funeral for Bertha O. Peterson, 78, former Novato resident, was held today in Petaluma.

Mrs. Peterson died Tuesday at a local hospital after a brief illness. She was born and reared in Chicago and had lived in California for 15 years.

Mrs. Peterson lived in Novato for 13 years and had moved to Petaluma two years ago. She was the wife of the late Frank Peterson and lived at 242 Wilson Street.

She is survived by a son, Conrad Peterson of Petaluma; a brother, Tomine Olsen of Petaluma; four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

Constributions may be made to the American Cancer Society or to any charity.

HENRY VLAHOS

Funeral for Henry P. (Hank) Vlahos, former San Rafael resident, was held today at the Chapel of the Hills in San Anselmo.

Vlahos died yesterday at home in Torrance, California of an apparent heart attack. He was 51.

He had lived in San Rafael for 10 years before moving three years ago to Torrance. He was plant superintendent for the Hedwin Plastics Corp. in Torrance.

He was a native of Monessan, Penn. and had lived in California for 13 years.

He is survived by his wife, Vi Vlahos of Torrance; a daughter, Mrs. Marilyn Hendrickson of Novato; a son, Perry James Vlahos of Sausalito; his mother, Mrs. Perry Vlahos of Cleveland, Ohio; five sisters, Mrs. James Tsantilos of Phoenix, Arizona, Mrs. Peter Peponis of Dublin, Ohio, Mrs. James Peppas, Mrs. Tom Cyrus and Mrs. Peter Karales, all of Cleveland, Ohio; a brother, James Vlahos of Cleveland, Ohio and two grandchildren.

Burial will be in Mount Tamalpais Cemetery in San Rafael.

broken ribs, but said he defends the motivational aspect of the program.

So sincere was his support, Gay said, that his wedding present to his sister was four days at LDI. "It's a tremendous experience," he said.

But Gay said the program has changed of late, and he doesn't like it. The money-making aspect, he says, is emphasized more than the development of leadership.

Holiday Magic, meanwhile, is or has been the target of state actions in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan and Minnesota, according to a February 1972 report of the Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Patrick, according to the report, has won or at least stalled further action in Arkansas and Illinois (where he has countered with a $45 million action), while in Maryland, Holiday Magic has changed its marketing plan to conform with state securities laws.

In addition to Illinois, Patrick said he is planning suits against the national Better Business Bureau growing out of what he calls an unobjective, self-serving approach by the organization.

In California, where suits now are pending against Sta-Power and Alexander Taylor Inc., Holiday Magic was enjoined in 1967 from making false or misleading statements in connection with recruitment of distributors; required to limit sale of distributorships, and ordered to pay a civil penalty of $35,000.

In response to an I-J inquiry, Herschel Elkins, chief of consumer fraud in the state attorney general's office, said he didn't know at present if Holiday Magic was in compliance with the recruitment requirements.

Elkins said that, although it's entitled to under the court order, his office hadn't checked Holiday Magic's books in four years. A report on operations was received some time ago from the company, indicating nothing was awry, he added.

Of the actions pending against the two Patrick companies in California, the Alexander Taylor matter is closest to decision. The state, seeking a preliminary injunction against the company in Marin Superior Court, says agreements between distributors and the company come under the state's franchise investment law, meaning that a prospective recruit should be supplied with full and accurate financial information about what he is getting into.

The suit also claims that Alexander Taylor is an "endless chain" as defined in the state penal code — a statute, incidentally, passed by the Legislature as a result of the 1967 Holiday Magic judgment.

The company argues that its distributors are independent contractors, meaning there is no franchise relation. On the endless chain complaint, the firm says it is "insulated against saturation" of the market because of the provision there may be no more than one consultant or senior consultant for every 12,500 persons.

The Sta-Power action, pending in Marin as well, is based on similar points.

(The state attorney general, meanwhile, has gained injunctions against the Glenn W. Turner pyramid empire, while Bestline products last year agreed to a court judgment that places more stress on product sales and requires the firm to furnish earning statements to prospective participants.

(Patrick resents any association with Turner, a former Holiday Magic distributor. He said Turner "copied part" of the Holiday Magic marketing program and "turned it around" into an "irresponsible" scheme.)

At the federal level, the Federal Trade Commission is conducting a series of nationwide hearings into Holiday Magic. The FTC claims the firm has misrepresented potential earnings to prospective distributors, misrepresented the ease with which a person can supposedly build a distributorship and that it charges different prices to distributors who compete in product resale.

Patrick, who told the I-J the FTC is "spending tax money to put out propaganda which they have no way to prove," appeared when the hearings were convened in San Francisco last November. He took the Fifth Amendment when asked about his dealings with the company.

While the Securities and Exchange Commission hasn't yet moved against Patrick, it may do so. A commission spokesman in San Francisco noted that the SEC has filed suit in Oregon seeking to enjoin Turner's "Dare to be Great" organization from violating the registration and antifraud provisions of U.S. securities laws.

The SEC charges in the Oregon action that agreements between Dare to be Great and its distributors are really securities that must be registered with the federal government. What it means is that, similar to California's franchise investment law, pyramid companies "must present a fair picture of opportunities and risks," the spokesman said.

Meantime, the spokesman acknowledged that the commission was looking into another aspect of Holiday Magic, involving allegedly unreported transfer of unregistered stock in the cosmetic company's Mexican operation four years ago and again recently.

The I-J also has learned that legislation restricting operations of pyramid companies is to be introduced in Congress within a few weeks. Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., has said he will author the measure, although its scope remains secret.

A spokesman in Mondale's office would describe it only as in the nature of a "felony criminal statute."

Meantime, Patrick, of whom Gay said, "Give him an idea and he'll have a corporation formed by noon," refuses to budge under the barrage. This, despite what a former associate says must be an outpouring of "unbelievable" legal fees.

Patrick says his programs are helping black people who wouldn't otherwise find business opportunities, noting that a black man is president of one of the pyramid companies, Ameriprise, dealing in home care products. Patrick says his system is "more sophisticated and more durable" than other marketing plans. And he says that "when my final epitaph is written, I know what it's gonna say, because I know what I stand for."

In an appraisal he might apply to his entire conglomerate today. Patrick once said:

"We are like the river that rushes down the mountain. If a large boulder, a tree or the side of the mountain gets in the way, it moves over or runs around it — definitely, forcefully and without stopping.

"There is no feeling in that river. It moves fast because it is in a hurry to get where it wants to go. And if you listen carefully, you will hear it sing a little song of happiness as it rushes along and leaves the obstacles behind.

"That is the spirit we feel in Holiday Magic. And you will find it all summed up in our slogan — 'Holiday Magic Loves You.'"

Nixon To Pin Medal On Retiring Admiral

HONOLULU (UPI) — Adm. John S. McCain Jr., retiring commander of U.S. Naval forces in the Pacific, receives the Distinguished Service Medal today from President Nixon. The 61-year-old admiral served as commander in the Pacific theater since July 31, 1968.

Adm. Noel Gayler, 57, takes over McCain's job of commanding the 85 million square mile Pacific military area, which extends from the West Coast of the Americas to the Indian Ocean and from the Aleutians to the area of the South Pole.

Many Cars Failing N.J. Smog Tests

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—Cars are flunking the nation's first state inspection test for pollution at almost twice the rate that was originally predicted.

The New Jersey Division of Motor Vehicles, which began testing autos for faulty exhaust systems July 5, said Thursday 18 per cent of the vehicles tested in the first month failed to meet the newly established emission standards.

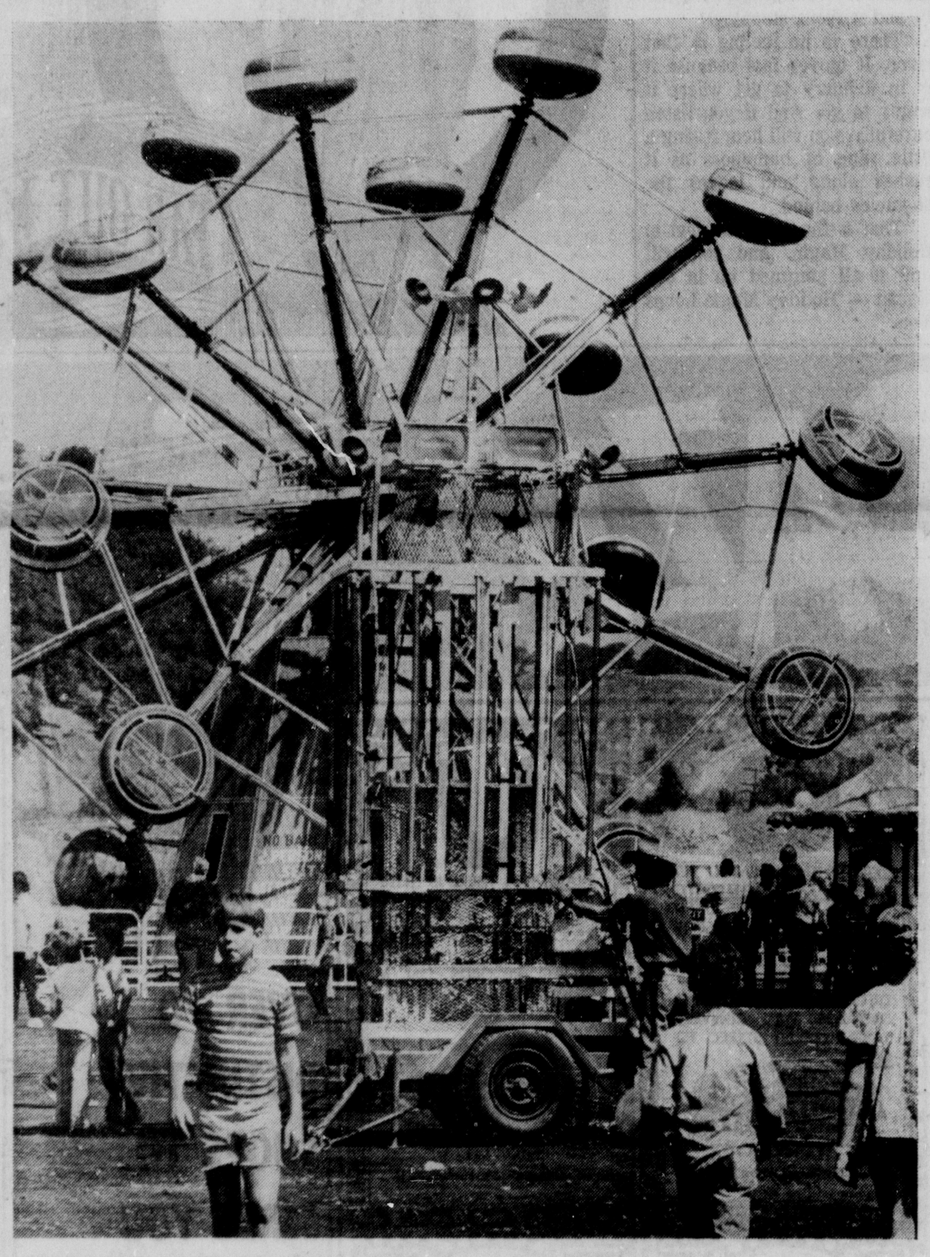
Fun's All There At The County Fair

JUDGE'S SCRUTINY — Framed by colorful flower displays, a smiling judge likes what she sees. These entries were ultimate winners in the arrangement competition, then left for county fair spectators to admire. The floral hall is a popular attraction each year.



'ROUND AND 'ROUND — For the youngsters, the county fair offers spinning, bumping, jostling rides, such as this device that sends fairgoers high over the Civic Center grounds in dizzying repetition. More rides are offered at this year's event.

WHOOOSH — With each hair-raising revolution, the thrills and chills mount for a group of youngsters sampling a ride on the fair's opening day. For many, it's hang on tight, close your eyes and hope for the best!

A NEW FIRE DEPARTMENT FOR FAIRFAX?

Plans prepared by architect Donald K. Olsen call for a new 5,500 square-foot fire department building (left) and expansion of the Fairfax police department-city-hall offices (right) on the corner of Bolinas Avenue and Park Street. The city's present fire facility (outlined with dashes) at the Bolinas-Park intersection would be demolished except for rear portions which would accommodate police expansion. A police parking area with an entrance on Park Street (bottom shaded area) is also proposed. A new footbridge (top) would link the facility to Andy Peri Park. A public hearing on the proposal — estimated to cost about $230,000 — is scheduled for 8 p.m. Sept. 19 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Singing Protest Of Hotel Ouster

HONOLULU (UPI)—The convention of humanistic psychologists, ousted from the plush Kuilima Hotel by the summit conference of President Nixon and Japan Premier Tanaka, put on a singing protest Thursday.

A group of delegates strolled troubadour style through the press room of the Waikiki Sheraton Hotel singing softly, "All we are asking is give peace a chance."

Three military guards at the White House Press room at first blocked the demonstrators, but then decided to allow them to perform.

Stone Age Man 'Shadow' Shown

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Smithsonian Institution put on display today the "shadow" of an Old Stone Age hunter who died in Spain 30,000 years ago.

The grave of the hunter was found in a cave near Santander, Spain, in 1969. It was one of the handful of burial sites of Old Stone Age men discovered.

GOP Hopefuls Eyeing 1974 California Posts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republican politicians eyeing a 1974 race for California governor or the Senate have quietly agreed to stay off the running track until after the November election.

This doesn't mean they can't get into the starting blocks and wait, and many are doing just that.

But it does mean they have agreed to avoid any premature party bloodletting that might jeopardize President Nixon's chances of carrying his native state over Democrat George McGovern.

The pact was disclosed Thursday by presidential counselor Robert H. Finch and confirmed by other sources, including a key Nixon campaign official who asked not to be identified.

Finch, who resigned as California lieutenant governor in 1969 to become Nixon's first HEW secretary, is one of those eyeing a gubernatorial or Senate race. The 46-year-old Republican said he probably will decide by next June whether to run for one of the offices.

The agreement has been informally referred to as "The Mitchell Edict" because it was first suggested by former Nixon campaign chief John N. Mitchell at a meeting last October of leading California Republicans and potential 1974 candidates.

Basically, the agreement does not forbid potential 1974 candidates--such as Finch, Controller Houston I. Flournoy, Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger or Gov. Ronald Reagan—from engaging in normal politicking, such as public speech making.

But it does refrain them from lining up private support among party leaders, strengthening campaign organizations and soliciting commitments for financial contributions.

"We have kind of an agreement among Republican wouldbe candidates, including the governor, that we'll avoid any warfare or jockeying around until after we get this job done," Finch told the Sacramento Rotary Coub in reply to a question about his own political future.

Finch said he intends to campaign in 32 states for Nixon this fall, return to Southern California and begin practicing law late this year and then seriously consider the 1974 races.

Flournoy also told UPI, "Nobody's going to be doing anything to jeopardize the President's chances of carrying California. But once the election is over there will be a lot of options exercised. Then you begin to talk openly about running and try to get people to support you."

Finch said "what California does in 1974 will be critical" because as the nation's most populous state it "will dictate more about what happens (politically) in 1976 and beyond than any other state in the union."

Then, leaving little doubt about his own aspirations, Finch told the Rotarians: "I want to be part of that."

School Taxes Adopted By Marin Supervisors

The Marin County Board of Supervisors in a lightning session yesterday adopted Marin County school tax rates as well as a few in Southern Sonoma County which affect some Marin residents.

The board made no change in the tax rates as computed by Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell and reported in Wednesday's Independent-Journal, according to assistant board clerk Francelle Warner.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors also:

NOVATO CREEK — Awarded a $8,578 bid to Joseph Giorgio and Sons for work on a retaining wall along Novato Creek.

STAFFORD LAKE — Applied for a federal grant to acquire the Leveroni property at Stafford Lake Park.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Civic Center.

Car Is Stolen

Redevelop Pact For Agency, Committee

A two-year agreement between the Marin County Redevelopment Agency and its project area committee — a community group formed to advise in redevelopment matters — was approved last night by the agency.

Under terms of the contract, the agency will pay the committee up to $45,000 over the two years in exchange for certain services, according to George H. Gnoss Jr., board chairman.

He said the committee's responsibilities will include assisting the agency in reviewing redevelopment proposals and helping developers to establish programs to provide job training and employment for community residents during redevelopment construction.

The group also must put out a newsletter informing residents on redevelopment matters, hold informational community meetings and bring resident opinion on redevelopment back to the agency.

Gnoss said the agency will oversee the committee's budget and expenditures.

Jail Sentence In Manslaughter

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court yesterday placed Eric Ansley Van Horn, 21, of Mill Valley, on probation for five years and sent him to jail for six months for a misdemeanor charge of manslaughter.

Van Horn had earlier admitted he had been drunk when an accident occurred in which a friend was killed.

Van Horn was the driver of a pickup truck that went over an embankment on a Muir Woods road on March 25, killing a passenger, 19-year-old Eric Bryant Satterlie, also of Mill Valley.

Fair Winners Are Announced

This year's five-day fair, larger and more diversified, attracted 5,823 adults and children for the opening day compared to 4,086 last year.

Yesterdays crowd included 1,913 adults, 1,053 persons aged 12 to 18, and 2,857 children under 12.

Opening day activities at the fair included the judging of horticulture and floriculture entries as well as the presentation of a larger carnival area boasting a ferris wheel, children's circus, funhouse, children's rides and a kiddie train.

The large professional gardens, an annual feature of the fair, also were unveiled, as were the juried art and photography shows in the auditorium exhibition hall.

A high point for youngsters will be turtle races scheduled for the outdoor stage at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

There will be 14 races, divided into two categories, with a trophy for the winner of each race. No entry fee is required, and children who do not own a turtle but who wish to participate may purchase an entry before the races begin.

Winners of yesterday's judging of horticulture and floriculture entries in the fair were:

Behr Supports Early Education

State Sen. Peter H. Behr yesterday carried a plea for restructuring of California's primary education to nearly 200 Marin school administrators.

Behr spoke on "Early Childhood Education — Life Begins at Four" at the fall luncheon of the Marin County School Administrators Association in the San Geronimo National Golf Club restaurant.

Quoting liberally from the report of State Supt. Wilson C. Riles's Task Force on Early Childhood Education, he urged that kindergarten and primary grades be restructured into an ungraded program staffed with parents and young people in addition to the teachers, to provide a ratio of one adult to every 10 pupils.

Such restructuring is the aim of Senate Bill 1302 by State Sen. Melvyn S. Dymally, D-Los Angeles, for which Behr made his pitch.

Dymally's bill also calls for starting children to school one year earlier than now — at the age of 4. The bill has passed both houses of the Legislature, but was amended in the Assembly. The start at 4 years old, Behr reported, was amended out.

The Marin senator opened his remarks by disclaiming expertese in education matters. Later, however, he denounced as "badly researched" an article in Phi Delta Kappan by Raymond Moore, professor of education at Andrews University in Michigan, which cited dangers of too-early schooling.

The drawbacks cited by Moore, said Behr, "simply do not apply" to Superintendent Riles's early education plan as embodied in Senator Dymally's bill.

Advocating schooling at 4 years, Senator Behr asserted: "It is impossible for any home to provide as much intellectual stimulation as the schoolroom."

He noted that Supt. Clifford W. Campbell of Dixie School District, president of the administrator group, had pointed out that spending on the additional year of school for 4-year-olds as set up in the bill "is only half as much as we spend on each kindergarten child in our district."

But, Behr said, the Assembly has deleted the 4-year-old pro-The bill is now back in the Senate to await concurrence in the Assembly amendments.

A high school principal raised the question of whether pouring additional state money into the early childhood program would deprive the schools of revenues for upper grades and high school.

Behr said he hoped it would not.

Mexican Flag Flies On Catalina Island

AVALON (UPI)—The flag of Mexico still flew over Catalina Island today and the "invaders" who came to claim it from the United States were still encamped on a hill overlooking Avalon.

They have become a tourist attraction.

The invaders—24 men and one woman—are members of the Brown Berets, a militant Mexican-American group. When they appeared on the holiday island off the coast of Southern California Wednesday, they claimed it as Mexican territory.

Wearing military style uniforms of green pants, khaki shirts, brown berets and ammunition belts—but no weapons—the group was mistaken for invading Mexican army troops when it first drew up in formation on the road between Avalon and the airport.

"This is Mexican territory," declared the leader of the group, David Sanchez, 26. "We are claiming all of the channel islands. They are all Mexican territory."

The "invaders" admit they have no connection with the Mexican government.

The Brown Berets argue that when the United States acquired Mexican territory after the Mexican-American war, the settlement covered land to the Pacific Ocean—so the islands offshore were not covered, and should still belong to Mexico.

The counterargument is that Mexico ceded California to the United States, and the islands were considered part of California.

The activists were given permission to stay and camp on the island.

Islanders, learning the group had no food or money, began bringing them lunches. Watermelon was donated for dinner their first night.

Tourists visiting the island drive up in rented jeeps to see the "Mexican army camp." Sightseeing buses have added the camp to their itinerary.

"They've been very well behaved, very orderly and have been received by us as visitors. They are most welcome," said Raymond Rydell, mayor of Avalon. Rydell was executive vice chancellor of the California state college system before retiring to Catalina and has some experience in dealing with young militants. He urged a lenient approach to the Brown Berets.

Residents make jokes about "occupied Catalina" and paying their taxes in pesos.

There are about 300 Mexican-Americans living on the island, but the Brown Berets found it difficult to whip up much fervor for a revolt.

One of the "troopers" questioned 9-year-old Johnny Machado, who came to watch their drill, and was horrified that the little boy speaks no Spanish.

"You can't even pronounce (your name) right," he exclaimed. "Man, you gotta learn Spanish. What's your school like? Any bilingual classes?"

Metropolitan Displays A Game Of War

SHAKESPEAREAN — In this 19th century set made of jasper, the figures are taken from Shakespeare. The set is colored lilac and gray, and is considered an outstanding example of the ceramic medium.

By DIANA LOERCHER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — "Chess is a game of war played on a marked surface between symbolic armies of a certain composition, usually, but not always, two in number. Although there are other games of a warlike nature, with pieces being besieged or captured, in chess the opposing sides represent the four main branches of a military force once used in a certain part of the ancient world: chariotry, elephant corps, cavalry, and infantry."

So writes Charles K. Wilkinson, curator emeritus of Near Eastern Art at the Metropolitan Museum, in the introduction to "Chess: East and West, Past and Present."

This catalog, a definitive analysis of the history of chess and chess sets, was compiled in 1968 as a companion to an exhibition by the same name, drawn primarily from the Metropolitan's Gustavus A. Pfeiffer collection and mounted at the Brooklyn Museum.

On the occasion of the Fischer-Spassky contest for the world championship, which certainly bears out the game's original war analogy, the Metropolitan has installed a small but worthy version of the earlier exhibition, which is on display through November.

A case of early Islamic chessmen and another of medieval pieces complement the main exhibition, which consists of a room filled primarily with complete and incomplete 18th- and 19th-century sets from Germany, Austria, France, Italy, Russia, China, and Japan.

In the Junior Library there is a special display of chessmen with particular appeal to children — the Alice in Wonderland set is the most charming.

It is generally agreed that chess originated in India around the sixth or seventh century and then spread to Persia. One of the most intriguing explanations of its genesis is a legend in Firdausi's "Shahnama," the famous Persian epic poem.

Firdausi describes a battle between two Indian princes, half brothers called Gow and Tolhand, who went to battle for possession of the crown with the understanding that the goal was to capture rather than kill. But when Tolhand saw his army defeated and found himself trapped, he died on his war elephant.

According to a paraphrased Firdausi account: "When Gow ... brought the news of Tolhand's death to his mother, she, grieving, blamed him for his brother's death. Gow swore that his brother had not been harmed and when his mother asked him to explain how, then, he had died, Gow asked that a board be brought and that pieces of ivory and teak be carved. Then, by means of the game of chess, Gow showed his mother how the armies moved, and how in the end, hemmed in on all sides, Tolhand had died of exhaustion and despair. And so, in chess, checkmate occurs, when the king, like Tolhand, is in a position from which there is no escape."

By the ninth century chess had spread to Europe via Arabia. The Moors introduced it to Spain and the Saracens to Italy, while it also filtered eastward into the Orient. Chess met with religious disapproval from the medieval Christians, just as it had from the Muslims, because it was associated with dice, a game of chance. A Lombard friar by the name of Jacobus de Cessolis wrote an allegorical defense of the game in the late 13th century. "The Game and Pley of the Chesse." published by Caxton's Press in 1474, is, according to one source, the second book printed in the English language.

The game has remained remarkably consistent throughout the ages. Even its name in English and European languages evokes the original Sanskrit "chaturanga," (the four members of the army) and the Persian "shah," meaning king. As for the chessmen themselves, Mr. Wilkinson explains that they have always tended to fall into one of two main groups:

"In one, the pieces embody the names they bear. The king is a miniature royal figure, the elephant is an elephant, the pawn is a little foot soldier. In the other group the pieces are distinctive arbitrary forms, recognizable to the players who use them but meaningless to those unaccustomed to them. Such are usually termed 'conventional' sets ... There is some reason to believe that both types of chessmen have been used from the game's earliest days."

Some striking examples of both types are on display at the Metropolitan. There is of course overlapping, for in some sets the pawns are not representational while the pieces are, or more commonly an entire set may be abstract, with the usual exception of the knight.

The representational sets tend to be the more curious. Their themes are often taken from famous battles or conflicts, such as the Battle of Austerlitz, the Christians vs. the barbarians, the Italians vs. the Ethiopians (with Mussolini as the Italian king and Rome as the queen), the Indians vs. the English, the cowboys vs. the Indians, the threshers vs. the mowers, and even the blondes vs. the brunettes. A contemporary counterpart now on sale in Brentano's here is the Republicans vs. the Democrats.

The most didactic set is a 1928 Russian one of Communists vs. capitalists in hard-paste porcelain colored with enamel. The capitalist king is depicted as death and the queen as a decadent Fortuna with a cornucopia full of gold. The pawns are in chains. On the Communist side the king is a blacksmith and the queen a peasant woman, while the pawns are reapers. All the castles, are of course, boats, a Russian chess idiosyncracy that has yet to be satisfactorily explained.

The evolution of other pieces in Europe tended to be universal, with the horse becoming the knight, the counselor becoming the queen, the rook becoming the castle, and the elephant becoming the bishop — surely the most dramatic metamorphosis — though France is an exception, unaccountably transforming the elephant into the fool or court jester.

Of course some sets do not derive from war, such as John Flaxman's figures from Shakespeare, or the whimsical Eskimo pieces carved from walrus ivory or horn. The Chinese sets offer amusing noncombative but historical variations. While the Chinese and Japanese themselves play with tiny tablets of unadorned wood inscribed with the name of the figure, the Chinese sets for foreigners are figurative and elaborately carved, with Napoleon or Edward VII often appearing as the king.

Chess has survived the centuries as durably as war itself and can be an artful sublimation of combat. It seems no coincidence that Napoleon was a chess fanatic. Some psychologists attribute motives of unconscious hostility to devotees of the game. Certainly all competitive sports and games can in some way be linked with aggressiveness. But chess is unique because it does not merely represent war' it is war but on a cerebral rather than a physical level.

AFRICAN SET — This 20th century set comes from Nigeria. Kings and queens are similar, the kings being distinguished by a "robe" of cotton. The board is dyed goatskin.

CARVED FROM IVORY — This Eskimo chess set, made in the 20th century, is carved from walrus ivory. Note the knight is a dog, and the rook is an igloo.

Fujiyama's Offers Followers Of Japanese Cuisine Ideal Selections

Just as there are those who hold out strongly on the merits of European cooking, there are others who believe that the Japanese methods of food preparation are without peer.

And some of them are very insistent about it. I ran into one gentleman at the Fujiyama in San Rafael the other evening, who probably hasn't missed taking in a Japanese restaurant in the west between the Canadian and Mexican borders. And he gives them odds over most other food institutions, too. (No, he is not a Japanese).

Incidientally, he rated the Fujiyama quality-high on his list, which I was glad to hear, since I have not done enough coverage of Japanese restaurants to make close comparisons.

I can say that I do find certain Japanese foods very pleasing to the taste and I enjoy periodical ventures into this field of gourmanderie. For example, the beef teriyaki prepared at the Fujiyama by owner-chef Akitoshi Takazawa is truly amazing. It is prepared almost as thin as paper, but somehow he manages not to overcook or undercook it.

There are other beef entrees to tempt you — sukiyaki and mizutaki — or you can venture into the field of seafoods with sashimi (ocean fresh raw tuna), tempura (shrimp and vegetables), salmon teriyaki and fried breaded prawns, or chicken teriyaki and a few others on which I have yet to experiment. And there is a good accompaniment of side items — soup, salad, rice and vegetables.

Aside from the fact that the Fujiyama (located on the Miracle Mile) is Marin's only fully Japanese restaurant, you will find it an especially interesting and colorful little spot to visit.

If you are already up on your Japanese food customs, undoubtedly you will want to remove your shoes and sit at one of the low tables on the raised section at one end of the dining room. Since I am not exactly built for a cross-legged position on a floor mat, I prefer the conventional western table and chairs.

Now featured as the Saturday night entertainer here is pretty Sophie Yamamoto from San Francisco, who sings and accompanies herself on the piano. She has a nice voice and quite a repertory of Japanese songs which I did not realize could be so well adapted to our own style of music.

Atsuko Nakamura, who previously performed on the koto Saturday nights, should be back soon — but she will then play on Friday nights, making two evenings of live entertainment a week.

Ordinarily closed on Mondays, the Fujiyama will serve dinners on Labor Day from 5 to 9:30 p.m.

AFTER SEPT. 8, Senor Alfredo's Mexican Restaurant in San Anselmo will discontinue serving lunches. This appears to be in anticipation of plans to shift some of the help here to Santa Rosa where owner Al Barthel has another restaurant now under construction.

SOPHIE YAMAMOTO
Fujiyama entertainer

Completion is not expected until next month and an opening is not anticipated until the middle of November — but advance planning has to be made.

The Santa Rosa restaurant will be much larger than the one in San Anselmo and will set a pattern for more Senor Alfredo restaurants throughout the state. If it is successful, two more places will be opened next year, including a second restaurant in Santa Rosa of the hof brau type to be called the Casa de Anza.

This waterfront restaurant with the inspiring view has been a very smooth operation — testimony to what can be accomplished by skilled restaurant people with long experience. (They also have Tarantino's at San Francisco Fisherman's Wharf.

And the Spinnaker has brought many new visitors to Marin County.

THE DEMAND for properly trained personnel in the food service business is high and the field is an extensive one.

Marin Dining And Wining

Besides covering an infinite variety of restaurants, it extends into hotels, country clubs, yacht clubs, institutions and even steamship and airline food operation and management.

Indeed, you will find that many successful restaurateurs have had much of their training and credits in these related activities. And, as in the restaurant business, skill and hard work are demanded, offering many opportunities for those of professional caliber.

A case in point would be the Marin Country Club at Novato, now owned by the Lear Siegler Corp. It is, of course, primarily operated for the benefit of its members. But what many Marinites do not realize is that it does cater to the public insofar as group lunches, dinners, wedding receptions and other large affairs are concerned, where the serving of food and drink is involved.

It handles all the way from 50 to 300 persons for these social occasions and also accepts business groups for lunches and dinners.

Since it is a very scenic place, with a beautiful outlook over the golf course and surrounding hills spotted with fine homes, its huge dining area and outside terrace are much in damand. Prices are commensurate with those in regular restaurants, as food costs and overhead are comparable.

Management personnel here has all the necessary experience for such occasions. Manager Gene Marshall was trained in his profession in Europe. Food and beverage manager Bob Rossi (the one to contact for arranging banquet affairs) has been in large scale food and drink operations in several levels for many years, including having his own place at one time in San Francisco. Chef Bob Witt is recently from the Colorado resort country.

THE RESTAURANT CONVENTION in San Francisco early this week was an amazing maze of new equipment and food specialties. I can see that a restaurateur carried away by the many temptations could have gone broke in his first half hour on the floor.

Marin and Sonoma County food people were there, along with their counterparts from throughout the west. Former Marin chef Jean Joaquin (now a food consultant) directed several activities. Former Holiday Inn maitre d' Pierre Bitterer (now at the Mark Hopkins) was a guest panelist. Deer Park Villa, Le Camembert and Senor Alfredo of Marin had their menus on display.

Exhibits featured everything in hardware, soft ware and bills of fare to set up dining room, kitchen or refrigeration plant. There were dispensers and disposers; dishes, fishes and French quiches; jars of mayonnaise, hollandaise and giveaways; freezers, squeezers and other novel teasers; slicing machines, dicing machines and ice machines; new ideas in automation, sanitation and escalation; free tips, nips and sips. No one was allowed to go out uninformed, hungry or with their thirst unquenched.

You could find walk-in boxes luxurious enough to set up for housekeeping; dishwashers that looked like cooking ranges; and dazzling ranges fit for public display in any restaurant instead of being relegated to the kitchen.

Something new you may soon see at bars is the automated drink dispenser, with portion control. Some versions automatically ring up the charge as soon as the glass is filled. The idea is to make sure there's no leakage in the cash register. Naturally the cost of all this equipment is high and many proprietors look instead of buying.

But in another 20 years you may not recognize a restaurant as it is today — which isn't too important as long as the food is just as good.

NOW OPEN at the corner of Lincoln Avenue and Third Street, San Rafael, is the new Jess Coleman Restaurant and Recreation Center.

Hours are from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. for lunches, dinner and snacks — later on Friday and Saturday nights. The attraction here is family entertainment and eating at reasonable prices — the entertainment being billiards and pool.

It's spacious and attractively laid out. You should visit it.

Justice Is Neither Swift Nor Sure

"Many people, though not all, will be deterred from serious crimes if they believe that justice is swift and sure. Today no one thinks it is. If there is a general impression that the administration of justice is not working, one important result is that the deterrent effect of law and punishment is impaired and lost." — Warren E. Burger, chief justice of the United States Supreme Court.

AN EXCELLENT example of what Chief Justice Burger was talking about is provided by the case of "hippie prophet" Donald C. McCoy Jr. and 10 of his "followers" at the now-defunct commune he headed at Rancho Olompali near Novato.

These 11 were among more than a score of residents arrested on marijuana and narcotics charges in a sheriff's raid on the commune on Jan. 14, 1969. McCoy and the 10 others subsequently engaged William O. Weissich as defense counsel.

They were indicted by the grand jury on March 20 of that year, arraigned four days later, and entered pleas of not guilty on March 28. Trial was set for Aug. 4, 1969.

On the day set for opening of trial, attorney Weissich filed a motion to suppress evidence, based in part on the fact that the raid had resulted from a tip to law enforcement officers by an informant whom the district attorney refused to identify.

That motion was heard before Judge Joseph G. Wilson in Marin Superior Court on Sept. 11, 1969. When the district attorney's office again refused to identify the informant, Judge Wilson threw out the case.

DIST. ATTY. Bruce B. Bales next day appealed the action to the District Court of Appeals. It took over 14 months — until Nov. 26, 1970 — to rule on the appeal. On that date the appellate court overruled Judge Wilson and returned the case to Marin County for trial.

The defense promptly petitioned for rehearing by the appellate court. This time, there was no delay. The appellate court on Dec. 10 refused a rehearing.

Back at the Marin County Hall of Justice, however, nobody seemed to be in any hurry. The appellate court order reposed somewhere in the county clerk's files. There was no request for a new trial date.

On Feb. 8, 1971, defense counsel filed a motion to dismiss on the grounds that McCoy and his followers had been denied the prompt and speedy trial guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Instead, Judge Wilson then set a hearing for March 21 on the remainder of Weissich's motion to suppress evidence.

AFTER THAT hearing, nothing happened — for 17 months.

And on Aug. 21 of this year — 1972 — Judge Wilson dismissed the charges, agreeing that the defendants had been denied their rights to speedy trial.

Of the delays totaling 41 months from the time of plea to the time of dismissal, 38 months are chargeable to the courts themselves — 14 months to the appellate court and 24 months to the Marin Superior Court.

So it was the courts that denied the speedy trial. It is the courts that must bear the blame.

Democrats 'Gone To Pot' With Marijuana Plank

By RUS WALTON

California's Democratic leadership is going to pot.

I hate to say that; but facts are facts.

The particular plank in question opposes mandatory felony prosecutions for the use and possession of that mind-altering weed. The fact that the Democratic leadership also adopted a plank to lower the drinking age to 18 is disturbing, too. But, that's another issue.

COULD IT BE that by taking the soft approach on marijuana, the Democratic leadership is pandering the youth vote; the 18-year-old, first-time voters? Scads of young people will no doubt turn out to vote "Yes" on this November's initiative to legalize marijuana. Could it be that the Democratic candidates figured "if we play this think smart, we can get them to vote for Democrats as well as marijuana"?

Is the Democratic leadership, in other words, taking a soft stand on the use and possession of marijuana in an effort to win some elections? If so, I think that is a pretty high price to put on winning.

Certainly they are going against the wishes of the vast majority of their own party. All the public polls indicate that Californians — Democrats and Republicans alike — favor harsher, not softer, controls and penalties for the use and possession of pot.

And they are going against the wishes of a large number of young people in this state. Surveys indicate some 35 per cent of the 18-21 age group oppose softer controls or legalization of marijuana. Already there is a sizable group of young Californians working against the passage of the marijuana initiative. They are pushing for a "No" vote on the legalization of the weed.

THERE ARE SOME who excuse their support of the legalization of marijuana on the basis of a recent report by the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. What those persons fail, or refuse, to keep in mind is this: the report warned that major social problems were likely to arise should the availability of marijuana be suddenly increased.

Much of the soft approach to marijuana is based on some fantasies which are destroyed by fact. For example:

FANTASY — marijuana should be legalized because it is not a narcotic.

FACT — while it is true that pharmacologically marijuana is not a narcotic, physicians warn that it can have extremely harmful mental effects. One noted UC researcher has stated that continued use of marijuana can result in a "chemical frontal lobotomy".

MY STRONG OPPOSITION to the legalization of or leniency toward marijuana was harshly reinforced by something which hit close to home the other week.

A friend of our teen-aged son committed suicide. He drove the family car into the garage, locked the door, and let the engine run until it was all gver. He had been high on acid. At 20, his brain had been eaten away.

His father found him in the morning.

How did it start? It started with marijuana. Just an occasional smoke, a now-and-then joint, to be part of the group. And then came the amphetamines, and the acid — the LSD and the STP. The hallucinatory trips. The uppers and downers. The tortured mind . . . and a car with its engine running in a closed garage on a trip to the dead end of the road.

LAW ENFORCEMENT officers, narcotics agents, physicians and psychologists will tell you — if you care to listen — that marijuana is so bad because it is often the entering wedge, the beginning, the start of a psychological addiction that can lead to the use of hard narcotics.

Certainly that is not what the Democratic leadership wants. How could they take the soft approach to marijuana? Let them look at their own sons and daughters and ask themselves that question.

Dollar Mansion Should Be Preserved

As a native of San Rafael, I want to add my name to the thousands of San Rafael and Marin County residents protesting the proposed change in zoning allowing for the development of condominium and town houses on the Dollar Estate. It is a beautiful, historical landmark and should be preserved. The mansion could be used as a senior citizens' center, museum, or headquarters for various social service agencies, as has been suggested by many interested people in the community.

I recommend that the members of the San Rafael Planning Commission vote against the proposed change in zoning after the moratorium is lifted.

There are very few historical landmarks left in Marin County. The Dollar Mansion should be preserved, not destroyed.

Columnist Confused On Candidate Schmitz

Marquis Childs indulged in "verbal over-kill" in castigating the American Party presidential candidate, Congressman Schmitz (I-J, Aug. 22).

Another intellectual baloney fed to us by Childs is his flat assertion that Schmitz's advocation of "abolishing the Federal Reserve Board and returning to the gold standard" is tantamount to "repealing the 20th Century." Yet, for instance, the very advanced and enlightened country of Switzerland has no Federal Reserve Board and backs up 85 per cent of its currency with gold!

To discerning people Childs and his ilk are laughable. For they see clearly that the difference between McGovern and Nixon is only in degree, and not substance. To many of them Schmitz may come handy on Nov. 8.

Here Comes Candidate With New Platform

I have just had my hair cut and I want to run for President. Here are the things I will do —

Vietnam: I will bring all of our troops home from Southeast Asia immediately. If those Commies want to fight let them come over here.

Second thing: Everybody will have work. That doesn't mean you will be paid on schedule, but you will be free to play income by ear. There will be no more strikes. If you feel you are being underpaid you can go out on your coffee break or lunch hour and beg for quarters on the street. They do it all the time in Rome. You will not only be absolved of all social stigma, you will be contributing to the cultural revolution.

Taxes will be a matter of choice. If you don't want to pay you sign a form stating that you do not intend to apply for welfare. Nothing else.

A month's supply of food stamps will be sent to you automatically. If you return them you are tacitly implying that (1) You might join a march of some kind, (2) You reserve the privilege of writing to your congressman, (3) You dig Jane Fonda.

A regular television channel each night will feature Russian and Chinese bedtime stories.

Finally, in tune with the New Majority, I will no longer address you as fellow Americans. Hereafter I will call you my children or, on special occasions, simply mes engants. Fun huh?

Reader's Version Of Middle East Status

Joseph C. Harsch in his editorial (I-J, Aug. 26) distorted the truth when he falsely claimed that "Sadat of Egypt has been frantically signaling his desire for a settlement with Israel, while Israel is fearing peace."

The truth is that Sadat rejected Israel's latest proposals for negotiations and for interim settlements. Sadat threw the Russian advisers out because he was not given all the weapons for an attack on Israel. Sadat states now that he will fight the inevitable war against Israel without Russia's help. He says that he prefers bloodshed to the status quo, that one million Egyptians will be sacrificed to reconquer every inch of the Sinai Desert.

Is this what the Christian Science editor Joseph C. Harsch calls Sadat's frantic signals for peace?

It is quite obvious that Mr. Harsch would like the U.S. to gain a foothold in Egypt and that Israel should pay the price for this.

I think it would be better for world peace and for the people of the Middle East if both superpowers would agree among each other to stay out of Egypt.

Joint HAFB Use Not In Taxpayers' Interest

Regarding your Aug. 24 article by Mr. Farrara reporting on County Aviation Commission meeting: If, as Mr. Schwarzer contends, it will be a "long time" before air traffic builds up (with joint use of Hamilton AFB) it would seem to be in the interests of the taxpayers to proceed to the county airport — Gnoss Field.

Also how can highway congestion and pollution be eliminated in Marin by turning the traffic north to Hamilton instead of south to San Francisco? In the interest of reporting "the facts" please inform the public they will still have to drive to SF or Oakland for flights other than north or south of Marin.

Above all, let us not delude ourselves about "no cost to the taxpayers" as proponents of joint use would have us believe.

Small State Advantage Won't Guarantee Conservative Nominee

WASHINGTON — The Republicans are getting ahead of themselves. They are looking to 1976!

Some are saying that by a contrivance which gives a delegate advantage to smaller states which go Republican, the GOP will for sure pick a right-of-center presidential nominee four years hence.

Many words were written to this effect during and after the Miami Beach convention.

THEY'RE EYEWASH. They're plausible nonsense. Some of my colleagues added to the nonsense because there was so little controversy to write about.

It is quite true that the traditionally conservative, less populous states get a special break in future delegates if they carry the state for a Republican president, senator or a majority of congressmen. But this is a minor side matter when it comes to nominating the next national ticket.

It won't insure the nomination of a Republican conservative in 1976.

It won't guarantee the defeat of a Republican liberal in 1976.

It won't significantly help Spiro Agnew get the nomination in 1976 — even if he proves to be a conservative.

NOTHING IN MODERN political history suggests that the traditional delegate advantage which the GOP gives to the smaller states has ever been a substantial factor in nominating a conservative over a liberal Republican.

This advantage has alway been there, but it did not keep the Republican party from nominating a whole sequence of left-of-center Republican candidates from 1940 to last week.

The roster of liberal Republican nominees is pretty high, but there has been only one right-of-center GOP nominee from the past nine Republican conventions. Wendell Willkie, who voted for Franklin Roosevelt in 1936, took the nomination against all opposition from party regulars in 1940; Tom Dewey took it away from Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio in 1944 and from Sen. John W. Bricker of Ohio in 1948. General Eisenhower won over Senator Taft in 1952 and was unopposed in 1956. Richard Nixon has been given three presidential nominations and each time he had a more progressive political record than before.

The edge in delegate numbers, which the GOP gives to the smaller states, did not keep the nomination from these eight — and won't keep another like-minded nominee from getting it in the future. Neither did this delegate advantage give the nomination to Barry Goldwater; he would have received it anyway.

ALL OF THE Republican leaders at Miami Beach who favored the preferential delegate allocation for the smaller states were Agnew supporters. They simply wanted to retain that delegate advantage.

There seems little doubt that Vice President Agnew will be seeking the 1976 presidential nomination. He has been quite frank about this. He said he wouldn't have run again as vice president if he did not have a 1976 expectation. No commitment by him is yet in order but he is keeping his options open.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON

Brundage Fought Losing Fight For Amateurism In Olympics

WASHINGTON — Avery Brundage has departed, yet the Olympics go on. It turns out the egocentric and idealistic Chicagoan was not the games personified after all. He was just their conscience.

Bifocaled, octagenarian millionaires are out of place in the games of today. So, perhaps, is conscience. At any rate Brundage's leaving ends an era, and it should end some other aspects of the Olympics we all had come to think of as permanent if illogical fixtures.

BRUNDAGE DID NOT retire as president of the International Olympic Committee because his committee overruled him by ousting Rhodesia this year to avoid a boycott by black African teams and possibly by blacks on the United States team. But the ruling and the resignation came in that sequence, and that was appropriate. His final words were, "It was a blatant intrusion of politics."

He was right, and the committee was wrong. Politics intruded and prevailed, no matter that in spirit those threatening boycott were justified. By letter they were wrong, and by letter is the way Brundage ran things for 20 years. By letter he had upheld his own idealistic vision of an Olympic tradition free of politics and of professionalism.

Despite persistent East-West and later racial conflicts, he largely succeeded until now against the first enemy. But against professionalism, he has succeeded only by the letter of the rules. In spirit, amateurism in the Olympics is a sham, giving rise to a third enemy worse than either of the other two — hypocrisy.

Though I have no illusions that it will be, that hypocrisy should be the first casualty of the post-Brundage Olympics. Let us acknowledge the facts as we all know them to be.

IT IS NOT chauvinism to say that whenever the United States outpoints the Soviet Union in the current games it is doing so with its right hand tied behind its back. The Russians themselves know this, and the non-official ones say so. All the world knows it — that the Russian athletes in the games are professionals and the Americans are amateurs, and that the best, most experienced American athletes in major sports are openly professionals who are forbidden to compete.

While this truth is widely known, it was spelled out in new detail just before these games opened in a series by Dean Mills, Moscow correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. The Soviet government not only supports its "student," "soldier" or "factory worker" athletes all year round and pays their expenses, it maintains that doing so is another proof of their political system's superiority. Beyond that, the government takes its own propaganda so seriously that it makes each athlete in international competition responsible for upholding the image of the Socialist system.

Thus, Mills writes, "When the Russians were badly stung in the Mexico City Olympics, it was almost a national crisis, something on the order of a disastrous grain harvest." Leonid Brezhnevhimself ordered creation of a new sports committee headed by Sergei Pavlov, former head of the Young Communist League and a tough comer in party circles. Pavlov demanded that the number of Soviet entries in this year's games be multiplied — all, of course, at government expense. Thus about 600 Russian competitors are at Munich.

THIS IS NOT to argue that the Russian individual or team that defeats an American at Munich does not deserve to win. It is to point out that in many cases there are a half-dozen athletes or a dozen teams back home in the States that could have won easily but were prevented from competing by the rules on professionalism. That there is no such thing as an avowedlyprofessional athlete in the Soviet Union, thus every man and woman and team can go to the Olympics, merely underlines the hypocrisy.

Neither is this to argue that all American amateurs are simon-pure. There are all kinds of expense-account subsidies, among other possible expediencies, that make life more convenient for big-name stars. There are scholarships and allowances for promising seven-footers. These are exceptions, however. In Russia, every member of the women's volleyball squad and the most obscure left-handed pistol shooter is on full subsidy for the full year — for a full career if he is good enough, rather than just through his bachelor's degree.

It would be heretical to suggest that all American athletes be paid by the state, although most of us would be willing to have our taxes pay Olympic expenses for our team rather than have it go begging every four years. It would be foolish to dream that at this late date we could force the Russians and their comrades to live up to our own amateur standards.

But it would be practical and realistic to realize that our standards essentially are those of Avery Brundage, who was born back in the first administration of Grover Cleveland, and that this is 1972 and the next Olympics will be in 1976 — and between now and then we should make a serious effort to open those games to every athlete, no matter whether he is paid secretly or brazenly. Any American politician with sense enough to add the cause of an open Olympics to his portfolio of issues will find the public is listening especially close this week.

Carmel May Have Solved The Problem Of Tourist Influx

Marin cities whose residents and officials complain about being overrun by tourists might take a lesson from the City of Carmel, which may finally have hit on the way to discourage visitors once and for all.

Carmel's solution to the "tourist problem" is an unfriendly little pamphlet passed to those arriving in that fair city for the first time.

Called "The Price of Peace," the leaflet is chock full of helpful hints designed to make the visitor feel he has just entered a place where he is not wanted, or maybe Russian-occupied Czechoslovakia.

Visitors are informed they cannot: camp or sleep on beaches, in cars, campers or trailers; use vulgar, profane or abusive language; ask for money; sell anything; make too much noise; stand around and block the sidewalks or streets; use fireworks, etc., etc.

A prohibition on sitting or lying on the grass in parks is crossed out since the supreme court recently ruled Carmel's "anti-loitering" ordinance unconstitutional, much to the chagrin of city fathers.

Actually, more disturbing than the long list of what one can't do in Carmel is the rather nasty tone of the pamphlet. Some examples:

"Swimming? Some people insist on doing it, even though we have posted our beaches as unsafe. We don't advise it, but we won't stop you. If you do get into trouble while swimming, we probably won't rescue you either."

"Use whatever language you want in communicating with your friends, but if you get careless or carried away and your language starts a fight, you are in trouble."

THE LEAFLET'S TONE is downright insulting to the average citizen who does not normally go around breaking laws or disturbing the peace. Also, isn't there something dismaying about traveling to a place and immediately encountering a list of all the things you aren't supposed to do in that city, presented in a way that makes you feel unwelcome?

If enough people become incensed by the pamphlet and pass the word along, it may be that Carmel will someday no longer have to worry about the tourist influx.

Then what will happen to the city government which is supported by revenues from the business community — money obtained from those unwelcome tourists? And what will happen to all the visitor-oriented businesses that have applauded city efforts to "get tough" with visitors?

"The price of peace" may be greater than the city government or the businessmen realize.

THE INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL lost a customer the other day, but the man's reason for cancelling the paper was worth the price of the subscription.

The call was taken by the Mill Valley office's Joan Herrell, who reported (when she could stop laughing) that the subscriber was highly irate. "I've told that paper boy time and time again to take off the front page of the paper before he delivers it, but he still brings me the whole paper," the caller charged angrily.

The man went on to say he absolutely did not want to read (or even see) the news of the day and could not continue to subscribe to a paper which insisted on providing that news. "All I want to read is the funnies," he snapped, "so cancel my subscription."

China Sends Affirmation Of Support

HONG KONG (UPI)-The Chinese Communist leadership today reaffirmed to North Vietnam the support of the Chinese people in the Indochina War and said Hanoi's forces were developing triumphantly despite increased U.S. air and naval attacks.

Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, together with acting Chairman Tung Pi-wu, Chairman Chu Teh of the National People's Congress and Premier Chou En-lai, today sent a message to the North Vietnamese leaders greeting the 27th anniversary of the founding of North Vietnam.

The message, broadcast in full by Peking Radio and the New China News Agency, said:

"At present, the Vietnamese people's war against U.S. aggression end for national salvation is developing triumphantly and the whole situation in Indochina is excellent.

"The South Vietnamese armed forces and people have launched fierce offensives in various battlefields, dealt heavy blows to the U.S. imperialist scheme of 'Vietnamizing' the war and scored splendid victories.

COUNTY COMMENT

By WILLIAM D. (BILL) FUSSELMAN

Taxpaying Homeowners Now Need To Solidify Their Ranks

After reading the fine tribute to John McInnis, in the editorial Tuesday evening, I feel all I might add is that a friend whom I have admired and respected for many years has gone away to the place where there shall never more be pain. In the words of James Thurber, "The distant, shining shores of the blessed isles of Ever After." Lois, the deep love you had for each other will be the most to help smooth over the days to come. Hold it tight; its warmth will never fail you.

As I go over the clippings and data that cover my desk, I wonder just what is going to happen out at Brasilia during the next few years. Two unflappable men will not be there. Unless more homeowner taxpayers stand beside the few who have been watching things and speaking out for you, there will be a tax load such as you have never seen before.

You will wake up one morning and wonder "who done it"? By the way, the cost of Brasilia maintenance ($3,359,095) which I gave last week was for the years of 1970-'71-'72 and this fiscal year, '73. That is the total for all four years. The way I wrote my copy, it could have been misunderstood.

I HAVE BEEN reading the balanced transportation report page by page. There is a lot of redundancy. One gets the idea that several different ones wrote it and not too good a job was done in the tieup.

I think that you all are entitled to have an opportunity to read the report. This presents the problem of just how to do this. I have counted words to the line and number of lines per page. Then I did the same thing with the "County Comment" average column. It can be done by using the column.

As we all know there is an almost daily series of local county government matters occurring that should be discussed and an attempt made to analyze. This precludes preempting the space. So in spite of the likelihood of anguished cries of being out of context, sections of the report will be offered to you for your contemplation.

FOR INSTANCE, here is one to think about: "An important accomplishment of Phase 1 was the creation of close technical coordination among local, county, regional and state agencies responsible for transportation planning. This close interjurisdictional cooperation helps to insure that the local communities of Marin will not again be forced to react to massive transportation proposals prepared by outside agencies. Are they talking about the Golden Gate Bridge people?

Before going further into the report, this observation: When I called up to inquire about postage and asked if it was the planning commission, I was corrected. "This is the planning department." They are really the staff serving the planning commission. Building a bureaucracy?

Perfume Factory Blast Kills Two

FREEPORT, Tex. (UPI)—Chemicals being used to make perfume exploded in a factory and killed two workers Thursday. Eight other persons were injured, two critically.

Fifteen workers of the Rhodia, Inc., plant were in the room when the chemicals were mixed to form an ingredient used in making the perfume.

Plant manager George Mussa said the same chemicals had never exploded when they were mixed before.

Huntley Takes Stand On TV Advertising

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI)—Former NBC news anchorman Chet Huntley said Thursday he endorses a recent recommendation that paid political advertisements be no shorter than five minutes in length. "Also, the candidate should be required to utilize the five minutes himself and must speak on his own behalf so we can all take a look at him or her and listen to what he has to say," Huntley said.

Huntley said the short 30 and 60 second spots, often presented by third parties on behalf of candidates, "serve only to confuse" and should be abolished.

Attorney Wins Right To Use Helicopter

BOSTON (UPI)—Criminal attorney F. Lee Bailey has won the right to use part of his 80-acre estate in Marshfield as a helicopter landing pad. A Superior Court Judge denied a request Thursday for a temporary injunction sought by two Marshfield residents claiming that Bailey's helicopter is dangerous and noisy.

Bailey testified that he has been using the helicopter pad since June 1969.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Friday Sept. 1 — What famous journalist was born today? Of all the great men born this day, none was more colorful than this lad. He came to America from Scotland at the age of 24, seeking his fourtune as a school teacher, then reporter and editor.

He gave up teaching to try reporting, but despite a gift for writing and some success as a Washington correspondent, he found himself unemployed at the age of 40 and his prospects poor. So he took all of his savings (a total of $500) and started his own newspaper, the New York "Herald," which he sold for one penny a copy.

New Yorkers liked the bright, witty, lively writing. It caught on. Although his office was in a basement, and his desk consisted of a plank spread over two empty barrels, the "Herald" grew in popularity and success seemed certain.

But misfortune struck. His printing plant burned down. Well, did our hero quit? No, sir! He bought another press and 19 days later was publishing again, presenting new ideas and features. People loved it.

Critics said he presented too much crime in his paper, but the "Herald" publisher believed life should be reported as it is. Other publishers called him "a common bandit" or a "turkey buzzard." One editor met him on the street, knocked him down, and beat him with a cane. But no one stopped him from publishing the truth.

When this man died at age 76, he had built one of New York City's greatest newspapers. Historians call him a Giant of Journalism. Can you find his name in the list of famous people born today?

(A) Edgar Rice Burroughs; (B) James Gordon Bennett; (C) Melvin R. Laird.

ANSWER

(B) James Gordon Bennett.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Old Spectator's Criticism Of National Tourney Match

"If this is bridge, I'll stick to pinochle," said a gray-haired man as he walked out of the main ballroom of the Denver Hilton Hotel a few weeks ago. He had just been watching Los Angeles expert Edwin Kantar during a session of the Life Master Pair Championship at the national tournament, and the pool man didn't like what he saw.

EAST WINS

West opened the nine of hearts, and East won with the ace. East cashed the ace of diamonds and then shifted back to hearts. West won with the king of hearts and hopefully led the king of diamonds.

Kantar, playing the South hand, ruffed the king of diamonds and led out the ace of spades followed by the queen of spades. West discarded a diamond on the second round of spades, and East won with the king.

The defenders had already taken four tricks, and Kantar needed the rest. Somehow or other he had to finesse through East's 10-7 of trumps — without a trump in the dummy to use for the finesse.

UNNECESSARY FINESSE

East returned a heart to the queen, and Kantar promptly led a low club and tried a finesse with dummy's jack. This "unnecessary" finesse made the gray-haired man sit up incredulously.

Kantar next led dummy's good queen of diamonds and ruffed it in his own hand. That's where he lost his kibitzer.

Actually, Kantar's strange plays were necessary. He led a club to dummy's king and led the 13th heart. East discarded a low club, and South discarded the ace of clubs.

LEAD IN DUMMY

There were now only two cards in each hand, and the lead was in the dummy. East had to play a trump before South played, and South therefore won both tricks by a trumpless trump finesse. South had to waste one of his trumps in order to keep the lead in dummy at the 12th trick; he would surely lose a trump trick if he had to lead from his own hand.

DAILY QUESTION

You hold:
♠ - K 10 7 6
♥ - A 8 3
♦ - A 8 4
♣ - 6 5 2.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass.

You expect to win two spade tricks and two aces against three spades and should defeat the contract if your partner turns up with any useful card; but you must not double since a double would be for takeout and partner would surely bid.

TRAFFIC TIE-UP IN NOVATO

Subdivision Is Approved In Fairfax

The Fairfax Planning Commission last night recommended approval of a tentative subdivision map for Canon Village and Tennis Club subject to approval of a density study to be conducted by City Engineer Ben C. Albritton.

Owners Robert D. Marshall Jr. and Denkmann and Co. have proposed 128 units for the 89-acre parcel on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, according to Ernestine Healy, commission secretary.

The master plan for the project has already been approved by the city council, she said.

The commission will consider the density study, hear a report on state subdivision laws by City Atty. Wallace S. Myers and review the precise plan for the proposal at its Sept. 28 meeting, she said.

The Fairfax Planning Commission also:

USE PERMIT — Approved T. D. Harriman's application for a use permit to remodel an existing apartment at 19 Sequoia Road.

VARIANCE — Denied Robert D. Frisbee's request for a variance to construct a garage at 174-176 Willow Avenue because of insufficient parking.

OLEMA ROAD — Agreed with Commission Gloria Duncan's request that the city council ask the city engineer to examine an inadequate culvert at 300 Olema Road, the scene of winter flooding.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Sept. 28 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Southern Cal Mayor Indicted On Payoff

SANTA ANA (UPI)—They mayor of Westminster and a member of that city's Planning Commission have been indicted by the county grand jury on five felony counts involving an alleged $10,000 payoff for an agricultural lease.

Mayor Derek McWhinney and Commissioner Tad Fujita surrendered at Superior Court Thursday and were given until Sept. 15 to enter a plea.

They were booked on charges of conspiracy to commit grand theft, attempted grand theft, conspiracy to offer a bribe and two counts of soliciting a person to offer a bribe. They were scheduled to appear again in court today to post $5,000 bond each.

Two other men, not identified, were listed as conspirators.

McWhinney and Fujita, both 34, were charged with obtaining money from a farmer attempting to renew his lease on 213 county controlled acres of agricultural land in Fountain Valley.

The farmer, George Murai, a classmate of the two defendants, was allegedly coerced into paying a $5,000 "campaign contribution" to a county supervisor. The supervisor, Robert Battin, apparently was unaware he was involved in a bribery scheme.

Later, Murai allegedly paid $5,000 to Fujita.

Deputy District Attorney James Enright said the payoffs took place in July while the supervisors were considering various proposals on what to do with the 213 acres.

Another Swim Pool Drowning

A 3-year-old Illinois boy visiting in Novato died today at Novato General Hospital nine hours after he was found floating in a swimming pool at the home of his parents' hosts.

It was the fourth drowning in a Marin pool in the past five days.

The search for the victim, David Gallas, began when children were being rounded up for dinner at about 7:30 p.m. He was taken to the hospital where he died at 4:45 a.m. today.

According to police, his mother said that David was "sacred to death of water" and that she had been sure he would never go near the pool.

The Gallas family was visiting at the home of Wilson B. McCune, 10 Verdad Way. The boy's father, Thaddeus, and McCune are pilots for the same airline.

The boy's body was taken to Chapel of Marin Mortuary, Novato.

Bolinas Utilities Director To Go To Jail For Vandalism

A director of the Bolinas Public Utilities District yesterday was sent to jailfor 20 days and told to stay out of a popular Bolinas bar.

The unusual sentence for Gregory C. Hewlett came after he admitted to Judge David A. Baty of Marin Municipal Court that he had broken about $500 worth of windows in a real estate office belonging to a man who has opposed the district's antidevelopment policy.

As part of a plea bargain, the judge then dismissed a second count against the sandy-haired, bearded Hewlett, involving the slashing of tires of two vehicles belonging to another man also opposed to the board's policies.

The judge also dismissed a third charge, this one of being drunk in public, stemming from a fracas in Bolinas on July 4 in which the 32-year-old Hewlett was twice rescued from Sheriff's Officers by a gang of youths.

Hewlett, however, later turned himself in.

In addition to the jail sentence, which he began serving yesterday, and the order to stay out of Smiley's bar, Hewlett was told by Judge Baty to pay forall the damage he had done. He was given six months to make restitution.

Hewlett, an outspoken conservationist, was elected to the board last November in an election in which two directors were recalled. The window smashing and the tire slashing took place in March.

Millionaire Will Break Up 'Dare To Be Great' Firm

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)— Multimillionaire Glenn W. Turner said Thursday he will break his controversial Dare To Be Great firm into 500 smaller companies which will be sold or given to "little people" around the nation.

"This will comply with any judges' orders," Turner told a crowd of some 800 supporters, "But I will keep one part so I can keep fighting for what I think is right."

Turner was arrested this week and charged with 86 counts of violating Florida's uniform sale and security laws, and he said he and his numerous firms are under legal fire in at least 38 states as well as from the federal government.

Turner said he has changed his system five times in five years to satisfy the judges and the states. Now, he said, he is going to scatter his operations.

"Let them go after 500 companies instead of just one," he said. "If they get 400, I will start 500 more."

Turner, 37, addressed employes of his Koscot firm and other sales people of the Turner conglomerate from around the nation who were in Orlando for a series of seminars on sales training.

In Newark, N.J., Thursday, a Superior Court judge fined Turner and Koscot $25,000 each, and ordered him to stop selling the cosmetic sales firm's distributorships in New Jersey.

Hearing Delayed

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—A court hearing for Mrs. Bonnie Ferranti, a school teacher, was postponed indefinitely Thursday. Mrs. Ferranti was seeking a court order to force school officials to allow her to teach as long as she was physically able before the birth of her child. But she had her baby, a girl, Wednesday.

Petaluma Candidates File Papers

Three more candidates have filed papers for election to the Petaluma Hospital district board on Nov. 7.

Filing candidacy papers yesterday were incumbent Dr. Francis M. Crinella as well as Alfred W. Beatie and Francis E. Burke. Brand T. Johnson, a retired teacher, had filed earlier.

In addition to Dr. Crinella, the terms of Dr. Hamza I. Munib and Clyde Nelson will expire.

Dr. Crinella, 34, was appointed to the board last year. He is a staff psychologist at Sonoma State Hospital and lives at 7 La Cresta Drive, Petaluma.

Beatie, a retiree, lives at 4480 Skyview Drive, Penngrove. Burke, 940 Fifth Street, Petaluma, is employed as maintenance manager at St. Luke's Hospital, San Francisco.

A PROSPECTIVE purchaser looks over a terrarium in a glass water jug, one of many unusual containers being used to bring greenery indoors. A new interest in plants and terrariums has been shone by college students on thier way to campuses this fall.

'WE LOVE THEM'

Raising Plants Is Newest Rage

By MARILYN HOFFMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LOS ANGELES — Living plants will be part of the gear that college students, both men and women, haul back to their campus living quarters this year. It's all part of the ecology wave, but students have also discovered not only that growing things transform a dull dorm room, but that it is fun to cultivate one's own green thumb.

A couple of university shoppers we saw selecting plants here in Bullock's, Willshire's new first-floor greenery emporium, said, "Plants are very important to us. We love them."

Seventeen magazine, which visits a variety of colleges all over the country each year to find out what students are doing to their rooms, says, "The current fascination with ecology and in everything natural and organic means that almost every student wants plants." They are booming business at dime stores, plant shops, nurseries, and flower shops.

At the greenhouse annex of Cost Plus in San Francisco, students and young marrieds are going through checkout lines with bushles of house plants popping out of their baskets.

ONE STUDENT showed me an antique sugar bowl (which she bought for 50 cents minus its lid) soon destined to hold a flourishing philodendron in her room.

Finding interesting containers —from antiques and old pottery, to woven baskets — is part of the current adventure of hunting through junk shops, flea markets, and handcraft fairs. Even a plant grown from an avocado seed deserves an attractive setting. And hanging arrangements are great favorites in many dorms and small apartments.

For those without much skill in bringing nature indoors, terrarium kits are available that take the guesswork out of indoor growing. At the David L. Swartz showroom in the Los Angeles home furnishings mart, we saw dozens of terrarium kits by Christen of St. Louis, shaped like flying saucers, balls, domes and mushrooms, and retailing for $7.98 to $59.98, depending on sizes and bases.

Each terrarium comes with glass container, special potting soil, rocks, charcoal, and instruction booklet for assembling your very own self-contained miniature garden. This showroom already has sold 20,000 terrariums in the Los Angeles area alone and sees the future "alive" with possibilities.

AT THE SAN Francisco market, a new company called Terra Systems is showing such terrarium "environmental accessories" as cubes to sit on your desk and terrarium end tables and coffee tables, all very lush with plantings planned by a horticultural expert.

Kits are even available for inserting plant material down the narrow neck of glass water jugs — a pastime only somewhat less tricky than building a ship in a bottle.

If you prefer not to bother with a kit, you can buy an already-planted terrarium at most florist shops at prices ranging from $7 to $75. These have the advantage of being professionally planted and established. You choose the type of planting you prefer — desert, woodland, or tropical.

One terrarium we saw, planted with tropical flora, contained baby's tears as low ground cover, Neanthe Bella palm, ruffled Boston ferns, a podocarpus, a pickaback, and a tiny bromeliad, with moss covering the soil to help retain water.

PEOPLE BENT on do-it-yourself terrariums are using every kind of glass container, from cannisters to bulbous brandy snifters or old fish bowls in which to build their "indoor ecological systems."

Besides plants — and rock, mineral, and bottle collections — the items that will go back to school this fall are big, bold decorative sheets, cardboard furniture, and bean bag chairs.

"Sheets," says Seventeen, "are this year's answer to all kinds of school decorating problems." The wilder they are, and the more supergraphic in scale, the more the kids love them.

TO USE sheets as curtains, loosen the side of the hem on the bottom of the sheet, put a tension rod through, and hang!

As for the cardboard furniture, it is the small chests, the tuckaway storage boxes that slide under beds, and round tables that are most in demand. The "draped table" look that Bates has encouraged with its numerous round wash-and-dry table fashions, is made possible with a $5 (postpaid) 72-inch round table of corrugated paper-board, which holds up to 50 pounds in weight, and is available by mail from Bates Fabrics, Inc., Dept. FP 2, P.O. Box 576, Midtown Station, New York, N.Y., 10018.

Red Cross—There When It's Needed

By BARBARA HOSMER

"We chew the rag or read a book most of the time," says Juliette Quinn of staffers at the Red Cross emergency aid station, but when they are needed, they're ready.

Cut fingers, scratched knees, heat stroke and sprains are common problems the trained first aid volunteers treat each year at the Marin County Fair in the emergency aid station. They are on duty throughout the fair hours at the Civic Center.

Mrs. Quinn has been volunteering first aid wherever the crowds are in Marin for some 15 years. A registered nurse from San Anselmo who works night shifts at a convalescent hospital, she said that she took first aid training from the Red Cross when her son was a baby.

When he became pre-school age she began to volunteer in the emergency first aid stations. "He always went with me," she said. And as soon as he was old enough, he began to drive for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Quinn has been a mainstay at the Fair emergency aid station for years, but she and a corps of other trained volunteers, largely nurses, follow the crowds to the Mountain Play each year, the Grape Festival, the Dipsea Race, the walk-athons that Marin teen-agers have staged, the recent bike-a-thon and the Special Olympics. They also were on hand during the San Anselmo Fair last weekend.

WITH WALK-A-THONS they set up a mobile first aid station aboard a Red Cross wagon, often driven by her son. The Mountain Play means a full day for one crew of first aiders, rather than the four-hour shifts they usually take, she said. There is a a doctor with them because of the distance to the hospital from Mount Tamalpais and the rangers there are all first aid-trained, Mrs. Quinn said.

One of Mrs. Quinn's favorite events to staff is the Special Olympics, a physical competition for mentally and physically handicapped children. "I never miss that," she said emphatically.

Red Cross policy requires that an R.N. and one or two first aid-trained assistants be on duty. There is always a doctor on call, as well.

"We strictly do just first aid. For any serious injury or condition we call an ambulance and send the patient to the hospital," she explained. "Sometimes there are doctors in the crowd, if we need immediate medical help."

Mrs. Quinn's responsibility includes finding a suitable place for an aid station for an event, after the request comes in to the Red Cross chapter in San Rafael. Then she rounds up the trained nurses and assistants, and "we could always use more," she said.

SHE BELIEVES that emergency aid training and experience is good for more persons to have in case a disaster should strike in Marin.

"It's nursing that's all together different from hospitals — the poeple are in a different emotional state." A member of the California Nurses Association Emergency Help Preparedness, she feels that emergency aid station experience is especially good for nurses.

Most the injuries are minor — sprains, minor cooking burns among cooks at the food booths, splinters and blisters on the feet. But, Mrs. Quinn pointed out, in a charity walk-a-thon "It's important they they be able to walk that extra mile for that money," and a blister treated on the scene allows the youngster to continue the walk.

"Sometimes kids will step on a nail," and once a child fell off a bleacher at a high school playing field and suffered a spinal injury.

"There are some sad things and some funny ones," Mrs. Quinn related. One boy split his pants up the middle and had to be taped together until he could get home.

Mill Valley Couple Is Engaged

Mrs. Claude Thompson of Central Point, Ore., has announced the engagement of her daughter, Alice A. Thompson, to Lawrence C. Mullaly, both of Mill Valley.

An early spring wedding is planned.

The bride-elect, who is also the daughter of the late Mr. Thompson, is a mathematics teacher at Tamalpais High School, and Mullaly teaches social studies at the Mount Carmel School in Mill Valley. He is the son of Pierce J. Mullaly of Alhambra and the late Mrs. Mullaly.

Alice earned the bachelor's degree at Oregon State University and received a master's degree from Stanford University.

Chemise Is Back For Day, Night

It's been missed and now it's back. The chemise. This easy, beloved silhouette shows up in daytime wear as well as in evening wardrobes.

Seen almost everywhere, it can be a very full tent or with light body shaping.

SUCCESS STORY

How To Achieve Identity

I-J Special Report
By FRIEDA KAYE
(Information Center on the Mature Woman)

PHILADELPHIA — When a woman comes from a family of "achievers" — but isn't expected to achieve herself "because, she's a girl" — she's in a bind, Ernesta Drinker Ballard said, speaking from her own experience.

However, Mrs. Ballard decided belatedly to accomplish something on her own and did. She now is executive director of the 5,000-member Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the largest organization of its kind in the country.

"When I was growing up," Ernesta Ballard recalled, "career aspirations for girls were never discussed."

Her mother was a volunteer "preoccupied with all sorts of social and cultural activities;" her father was "a successful lawyer who worked hard and never relaxed." But he maintained that "women didn't have men's brains and were not capable of men's achievement."

He believed that "women were meant to be lovable and clever, but not much else," she said. From her father's side of the family, however, she feels she inherited her capacity for hard work, the ability to make up her mind quickly, and a good feeling for detail.

AT 15, Mrs. Ballard attended "the same fashionable boarding school" her mother had. At 18, she made her debut, did volunteer work, married a young lawyer and subsequently had four children. It wasn't until she reached her 30s that she decided to have her "second coming out," as she calls it.

"I wanted to achieve an identity as a capable person in my own right," she said. "I wanted to make the change from housewife to professional. I wanted a paying job because I felt that earning money was a tangible form of recognition, an indication of one's worth."

Mrs. Ballard trained in horticulture, realizing that although many women were involved in garden club activities, few specialized professionally in this field. Six weeks after beginning her studies, however, she became quite ill. Since her doctor could find no physical basis for her symptoms — which included a severe difficulty in swallowing — he suggested therapeutic counseling.

"I discovered that the process of preparing for independence was the cause of my symptoms," she said. "I had apparently resented my father's refusal to appreciate what a woman could do on her own. but I felt selfish and guilty at the same time for not choosing to be the kind of woman he wanted me to be."

Once she could acknowledge this conflict within herself, she was able to return to school and complete her training.

In addition to her administrative responsibilities with the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Ernesta Ballard writes and lectures extensively on horticulture and travels frequently to meetings throughout the country. She sees her accomplishments as demonstrating to other women what can be done if they set their vocational sights high.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Mate-Swapping Omits Element; Remember Your Wedding Vows

DEAR HELEN:

I'm 22 and my husband is 27. We've been married nine years, so you can see I didn't live much before the wedding.

We have two children, six and two, a nice, well kept home and — this may seem hard to believe — we love each other more and more. We can talk openly and to the point on any subject without embarrassment.

Up to this year, we've spent time off mostly with the kids, having fun on picnics, etc. Now we've decided to give ourselves one day a week. We go dancing, have a few drinks with friends.

But there's this real good looking guy in our crowd. In a kidding way, I told my husband it would be fun to date him, as he turns me on. My husband said, "Okay, if we make it a double date." In other words swap mates for a night.

What started as kidding now sounds real tempting. It's kind of sad, to think you'll never know what another man (or girl) is like, just 'cause you're married. We've never been unfaithful, but I guess you wouldn't call it cheating if we all agreed.

What do you think? Could we trust each other? Would this lead to more swaps, and maybe a break-up? We don't want that! — TEMPTED AND BURNING

DEAR T AND B:

I think mate-swapping omits the human element — somewhere along the line, one or the other of you will let emotions surface: jealousy, "love," disgust perhaps. Relationships seldom stay purely physical for long —and then the marriage problems start.

Remember back to your wedding vows, and ask yourselves one more question: Is this "new thing" the kind of life I'd want for my children? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

After the Tom Eagleton fiasco, I wonder how many people in high places will avoid psychiatric counseling —even if they need it badly to help them over a temporary depression?

When disturbed people go untreated through fear of public opinion — it could mean we'll find a lot more disturbed people in command, and that's frightening. — OBSERVER

DEAR OBSERVER:

That it is. Read on:

DEAR HELEN:

I entered a psychiatric treatment center voluntarily because I felt my nerves were at the breaking point.

I learned a great deal about myself and consider the cure complete. But since coming out, I've learned even more about my fellow man.

The former mental patient isn't shunned. Rather, he's WATCHED. and while people hide their fear, he sees it. They "protect" him (by not giving him the promotions he has earned). They put a "handle with care" label on him. He must act twice as "normal" as anyone else in order to prove he's worth half as much as less competent men.

Psychiatric treatment speeded my return to mental health, but it may have brought me more problems than if I had pulled through my nervous breakdown by myself.

We still aren't out of the dark ages when it comes to illnesses of the mind. People never quite believe you can get over them. — STALLED CAREER

ON BEING BLACK

Mass Education Is Needed

By SANDRA HAGGERTY

The post card is one of a series of 40 and titled "Nigger Kids." It depicts a little black child (pickaninny) with a head full of pigtails and white rags, eyes bulging, drooling over a slice of watermelon. It is now a collectors' item and is postmarked 1922.

This association of blacks and watermelon has caused the tasty fruit to fall in status in the black society. But, doggone it, I would much rather see poorly nourished inner-city children eating watermelon for breakfast, lunch and dinner than I would, as is now the case, drooling over carbonated soft drinks for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

IN A COUNTRY as wealthy as ours, nutrition in the inner cities is still extremely poor, and food experts contend mass nutrition education is needed. But most such attempts have had little success because the people who need the help are not likely to be found in classrooms and libraries devouring information about the nutritional value of various foods.

Those who don't read nutrition handbooks and health charts do watch TV, and that's exactly where a lot of the encouragement to drink these non-nutrients comes from. All day long we're bombarded with the propaganda that these drinks will help bring about peace and brotherly love. According to these commercials, you'll look like a knockout in a bikini and attract the guys like flies with a soft drink in hand.

THE NEED to quench one's thirst is legitimate, so why not advertise watermelon? It's unquestionably liquid and a thirst quencher. It is sweet and colorful. Right now it's in season and reasonably priced. There are 590 units of vitamin A in 100 grams of watermelon and some vitamin C.

And there are unending food possibilities with watermelon. Even the rind can be made into pickles and pies —talk about tasty rejects! Furthermore, you can't get fat eating it.

This is not necessarily a plug for watermelon, but rather a plug for any fruit or vegetable more nutritious than a liquid non-nutrient.

Americans are supposedly concerned about the health of the nation and the world, but TV advertisers' dogged promotion of these non-nutrients produces some of the most contradictory and obscene viewing on our home screens.

Money is the master in this situation, of course, but I still say "Eat a watermelon and attract the guys!"

Fake Furs Are A Big Success

New howling success on the fashion scene appears to be a complete zoo — and there's not a roaring species in the group.

Fake fur fashions are now found in every kind of coat and jacket fashion. Almost every kind of "real" animal is represented — and a number of delightfully imaginative ones as well.

The fake fur seems to be here to stay, to be worn from dusk to dawn — but every member of the family.

Mrs. Tait Is New Head Of Parenthood Group

MRS. RICHARD TAIT
Auxiliary president

Mrs. Richard G. Tait of San Rafael will be installed president of the Planned Parenthood Auxiliary of Marin on Sept. 21.

The auxiliary supports the work of Planned Parenthood by participating in clinic staffing, community education and fund raising activities, Beverly Tait explained.

"Since its founding in 1968 the auxiliary has contributed nearly $20,000 to the San Rafael clinic," the three-year-member said. "Our main fund raising activity will be the third annual Stitchery Faire, and our program for this year will include speakers on the subjects of pregnancy counseling, legislative action in the area of birth control and abortion, parent effectivenes training and contraceptives of the future."

Mrs. Tait has served as education chairman and corresponding secretary of the auxiliary. Membership is open to all who show willingness to actively support the purposes of the auxiliary, she said. At present there are 50 active and 20 associate members.

The new president is also a member of the Mills Club of Marin, the Lucas Valley Racquets, the Sierra Club and Zero Population Growth, Inc. She attended Mills College and the University of California and received a B. A. degree from San Francisco State College. Her husband is a civil engineer. The couple, who are the parents of Richard, 4, and Tommy, 1 year old, have lived in Marin for four years.

Beverly Tait's hobbies are skiing, tennis and substitute teaching.

Plaid Upbeat-Bigger, Bolder

There'a a new upbeat in the menswear fashion tempo this season. Plaids. Bolder and bigger, they can be seen in the most casual attire or the most career-minded models.

Glen plaids, many appearing in knits, have a sober but not-too-serious look in business suits. Weekend and country jackets feature outsize windowpanes, block plaids and oversized checks.

Candis Cowman Married To Joseph Heinz Zusin

Candis Cowman of San Anselmo and Joseph Heinz Zusin of Napa were married Saturday at the Elks Club in San Rafael. A reception at the Elks Club followed the ceremony.

Former San Anselmo residents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Cowman of Portland, Ore., are the bride's parents, and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard O'Brien of Napa.

FINALLY HOME — Barbara Clark talked to newsmen yesterday at New York's Kennedy Airport after arriving home with a band of American tourists who had been stranded in London. Tony Steed, 14, of Hollywood, holding the placard, had no money or passport in London and was taken under the tourists' collective wing.

Stranded Tourists Home, Rip U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI)—A group of angry American tourists Thursday denounced the U.S. Embassy in London for failing to come to their assistance when they were penniless and stranded for four days at Gatwick Airport because of a canceled charter flight.

At the same time the 157 Americans praised British authorities and private citizens for their "unbelievable" hospitality in getting them welfare payments and offers of food and lodging.

The tourists, most of them teachers, arrived at Kennedy Airport on a special flight paid for by the British Caledonian Airlines and Whimpy International, a hamburger firm based in Britain.,

The group, including 140 from one canceled charter and 17 from a number of other canceled flights, was relatively lucky.

Another group of 100 Americans was still stranded in Madrid where airline officials said there was not much chance of finding seats for them back to the United States. Some of them had been stuck in Madrid for as long as five days and many said they were broke and hungry.

The travelers returning here were especially incensed by American Embassy warnings to "expect no help" and by what they interpreted as threats to call the Marine guard to evict them from the embassy.

Vance Stephens, an art teacher at Jersey State College in Jersey City, N.J., said, "all we got from the embassy was a mimeographed sheet which said 'expect no help.' The British welfare group gave each of us a couple of pounds ($5) which we intend to send back."

A delegation of five passengers went to the embassy Monday to seek aid. In the foyer they were approached by a London bobby, they said, who told them the embassy threatened to call out its Marine guard and have them evicted if they did not leave voluntarily. The passengers said there were some Marines there "making a presence" lending credence to the threat. Finally the passengers left.

The embassy officials were quoted as saying there was no help available because they had no funds to meet such situations.

The passengers said they suggested the use of military planes or that the embassy could advance them airfare using their passports as security. None of the suggestions was accepted.

"It wasn't the money so much, it was that they just didn't care. It's amazing to me that the United States, one of the richest countries in the world, can't take care of its own people in a situation like this."

The travelers, who had spent four days sleeping on benches or floors at Gatwick said hundreds of offers of food and lodging had been made to them by Englishmen living near the airport. Other British citizens brought soup and sandwiches to feed the hungry Americans.

The tourists elected, however, to stay together at the airport. A spokesman for the group said they planned to set up a fund to help any future air passengers who may become stranded at Gatwick.

Barbara Clark, a New York school teacher, said telegrams for help had been sent to President Nixon and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., but no replies were received.

Paul Lynn, 32, of Boston said he made a collect telephone call to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., "because I was broke." Lynn said he was unable to contact Kennedy personally but did speak to a member of his staff who "showed concern."

Oil Firm Geothermal Drilling In Wildlife Area Is Approved

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Efforts to develop new sources of power in California have received a boost with state approval of exploratory geothermal drilling at a wildlife area in Imperial Valley.

The state Lands Commission Thursday unanimously approved a three-year permit for the drilling by Atlantic Oil Co. The action came after the panel received an environmental report from its staff saying that the area had "great geothermal potential."

A number of geothermal wells have already been drilled in Imperial County but none has resulted in major production of electricity.

The staff report also declared that "prospecting in the Imperial Wildlife Management Area for geothermal sources of power will not have a significant detrimental environmental effect."

The Sierra Club, however, opposed granting the permit on the grounds it would create environmental damage.

In a telegram to the commission, the group warned the drilling in the area north of Niland could "jeopardize wildlife and wildlife habitat."

The 3,900-acre Wister Unit of the wildlife area is a haven for 70 species of migratory birds. It provides good hunting for ducks, geese, quail, pheasant and dove.

The Sierra Club also complained, "Adequate guarantees against possible (earth) subsidence and seismic activity have not been made." The contention was denied by F.J. Hortig, executive officer of the commission.

The telegram was written by Harriet Allen of Spring Valley, chairman of the club's Southern California regional conservation committee.

Scientists regard the Imperial Valley, an agricultural area in the southeastern corner of California, as a major potential source of geothermal energy, which could prove to be an alternative to oil or coalburning power plants.

Robert W. Rex, professor of geology at the University of California at Riverside, has estimated there is enough steam and super-heated water in the vast geothermal field beneath the Imperial Valley to supply electricity to southern California for 30 years.

The steam would be used to produce electricity by being fed into power-generating turbines.

In the environmental impact statement on Atlantic's application, the commission's staff said, "It would be performing a great disservice to the electrical power-using public to cancel the application to explore for geothermal steam at this location.

"Denial of the permits could necessitate a search for power elsewhere. This could result in construction of fossil fuel (oil or coal) plants that have far greater effects upon the natural environment than the proposed comparatively clean geothermal steam operation."

Under the terms of the permit, Atlantic will be required to take steps to prevent damage to the wildlife area adjacent to its drilling locations. The surface drilling operations will be located at least 400 feet from the boundary of the wildlife area and tap the underground sources through slant drilling.

If the company does not find a commercially usable source of geothermal energy, it will be required to restore the area to its original state.

If there is a viable source of energy, Atlantic would then have to return to the commission for permission to construct production facilities.

Chinese President

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)— Ambasssador Huang Hua, China's permanent representative to the United Nations, takes over as president of ths Security Council today. Under the monthly rotation system, he succeeds Ambassador Edouard Longerstaey of Belgium.

One Youth Is Charged In Robbery

Only one of two 18-year-old Southern California youths earlier charged with kidnapping, robbing and taking the car of a Petaluma man in Novato on July 16 has been charged in Marin Superior Court.

David Wyatt Miley of Venice, Los Angeles County, pleaded innocent yesterday to the three felony charges and a jury trial was set for the week of Oct. 2.

His companion, Dale Robert Minot, also of Venice, who had been arrested with Miley was released, however, after the district attorney's office said there was not enough evidence to prosecute him.

Minot had been a backseat passenger during the events which led to the charges.

The Petaluman, Terry M. Schenbert, 20, had picked up Miley and Minot as hitchhikers in San Francisco.

Schenebert said he was forced to drive at knifepoint to an orchard near Novato where his clothes, money and car were taken.

Miley and Minot were arrested later in Humboidt County reportedly in Schenbertz's car.

What was life like in Marin County in the Gay Nineties and the earliest years of the 20th Century? The ones who can best answer that question are those who lived those years. But now they are becoming few in numbers. One of them, however, the late Meriam Stetson, left a legacy to Marin County history students of a handwritten account of his recollections from those times. Independent-Journal history writer Dorothy Gardiner uses it to re-create what it was like in Marin in the 1890s in a feature story in tomorrow's I-J Marin Magazine.

The start of another school year is almost upon us. And one of the most unusual of the Marin schools making preparations for a new term is Sausalito's North Bay School. It represents a blending of educational philosophies that have sometimes been regarded as conflicting and impossible to merge. And it reflects, too, the unusual ideas of its young director, Tom Justice. You will want to read about this original approach to elementary grade education, how it fared in its first year, and what it plans for its second year just ahead.

A WAITING CROSSROADS

Rustic lanes, their quaint names inscribed upon this signpost, stretch emptily through sheltering groves of oak, stretch emptily now, but not for long. Tomorrow, with the opening of the sixth annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire at 10 a.m., they will be thronged with colorfully costumed folk, garbed in the mode of the Elizabethan era. The fair will be open six consecutive weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. off Highway 37 at Black Point.

FAMILY

"101 Dalmatians" — Clever takeoff on the British detective yarns with dogs playing the important parts. Fifteen puppies are dognapped and the hunt and chase is suspenseful.

Snoopy Come Home" — Based on Charles Schulz's beloved Peanuts comic strip this narrative follows Snoopy's adventures when he leaves his friends at the beach to visit his former owner, Lila, who is in the hospital. Eight new songs.

"What's Up, Doc?" — Set in San Francisco, treated with a sophisticated touch, this fast moving slapstick, nutty comedy revolves around a mixup with feur identical suitcases.

"Who Says You Can't Ride a Rainbow!" — Jack Klugman plays the part of a man who adores children and loves animals. He builds a small animal farm in the middle of an industrial district in New York City. There is great opposition but the solution will delight the entire family.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Big Jake" — Raiders kidnap Big Jake's grandson and hold him for ransom. The rescue party follows them into Mexico and a cut-throat, no holds barred cat and mouse game with continuous bloody fights occur. Much violence.

"Joe Kidd" — Caught between a land fight of Mexican inhabitants and powerful landowners, Joe Kidd agrees to work for the landowners and then switches sides. Considerable violence (Boxoffice Magazine).

"Love Story" — Two young college students marry causing a rift between the young man and his father. When they decide to have a child they discover the wife has a fatal illness. Some sex scenes and strong language.

"The Man" — The intriguing question of what happens when a black man becomes president is posed in the film. The script by Rod Serling explores the situation with insight and wit.

"Salzburg Connection" — An American lawyer on business in Salzburg becomes involved in international espionage to recover a sunken chest containing names of Nazi war criminals. (Boxoffice Magazine)

BORDERLINE
(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Cabaret" — Set in Berlin in 1930 a zestful young American girl singer at a cabaret proclaims herself the symbol of "divine decadence". Her love affairs lead to a pregnancy where paternity is unsure. Well made film but sophisticated and bawdy with foul language and sex.

"Frenzy" — Hitchcock brings us a necktie murderer who is a sexual psychopath and on the loose in London. Very suspenseful with nudity and cursing.

"Harold And Maude" — A heavy handed film about an old woman who teaches a young man how to enjoy life. For those who can laugh at funerals, old age, suicide and mental disturbance.

"Play It Again, Sam" — In this sex comedy, Woody Allen is a dedicated movie buff and as a writer lives in a fantasy world where he gets advice from his favorite actor, Humphrey Bogart, on how to solve his sex problems.

ADULTS ONLY

"Clockwork Orange" — This film hypothesizes a state where violence is the rule that can only be broken by means of Pavlovian conditioning. A London teenage gang that hates anyone different from them roam the streets and rob, rape and terrorize. A very brutal film with sex and nudity.

"Godfather" — Gripping epic gangster film filled with excessive violence. The head of Mafia leads two lives, as a kindly head of a family and then as a leader of a mob whose business is killing.

"Where Does It Hurt?" — An irreverent comedy spoof on the medical practice and hospitals. (Boxoffice Magazine).

Immunizations may be obtained from private physicians or for a nominal fee at the public health immunization clinic at 920 Grand Avenue, San Rafael from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays.

Independent Candidate Storer Takes Ballot Plea To Court

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — California election law unconstitutionally bars independent candidates from the ballot, former Marin County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer yesterday told the U.S. District Court.

Storer wants to run as a nonpartisan candidate on the November ballot in the Sixth Congressional District, but says the election law makes it impossible to qualify for the ballot.

The law requires independent candidates to collect 9,322 signatures between Aug. 15 and Sept. 8, and no registered voter signing can have voted in the June primary election.

Storer's attorney, Paul T. Halvonik of the American Civil Liberties Union, told the three-judge panel that "nobody's supposed to quality as an independent candidate. Nobody ever has, because there are no procedures that make it possible."

The law was defended by Deputy Atty. Gen. Clayton Roche, who argued the state has a "compelling interest in protecting the party system." The law was designed to maintain the integrity of political party affiliation, he said.

Deputy Marin County Counsel John M. Cohan argued that changing he law at this late date would "result in such severe disruption of the election process as to prevent its orderly functioning."

He said the state's write-in procedures satisfy constitutional requirements for allowing voters to ballot for their choice.

The court took the issue under submission, and an early decision was expected. Marin officials said the court had the power to extend state deadlines for independents to qualify for the ballot.

The judges considering Storer's case are Robert H. Schnacke of San Francisco, William G. East of Portland and retired Court of Appeals Judge Oliver D. Hamlin.

Storer, an attorney residing in Point Reyes Station and with offices in Novato, had announced last October he would run for the seat held by Republican William S. Mailliard of San Francisco. The district includes Marin. Storer was a Democrat, but reregistered to a "declined to state" party preference category.

He said in January that partisan politics "is a thick jungle infested with poisonous vipers and man-eating monsters, most of whom don't give a damn about the average citizens."

Cash Box Looted

Cash totaling $220 was taken yesterday or today from Gene's Chevron station, 101 Red Hill Avenue, San Anselmo, by a thief who broke in through a back door and looted a cash box, police reported today.

Tax Reform Will Be Key In McGovern's Campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George S. McGovern and running mate Sargent Shriver met for more than an hour today in an effort to tie up what the Democratic presidential nominee called "some loose ends" of the campaign organization.

The South Dakota senator told an impromptu news conference on the driveway of his home in northwest Washington, near Georgetown, that he and Shriver will hammer away at the issue of tax reform throughout their campaign against President Nixon.

McGovern conceded there were organizational problems in the Democratic camp: "I don't think there is any doubt about it that we have to continue to improve."

McGovern conceded that he and Shriver are underdogs, but predicted victory despite Nixon's seemingly commanding lead in the public opinion polls.

"We are trying to tie down some of the loose ends this week," McGovern said.

The candidate occasionally tried to change the subject to campaign issues —especially taxes —but each time, newsmen returned to the campaign's organizational problems.

Showing some irritation, McGovern demanded: "When was the last time you asked questions like this of Richard Nixon?" He said Nixon is unavailable to the public and news media while "we are wide open."

"I think Mr. Shriver and I both found ... that the one issue Americans are concerned about is tax reform," McGovern said. "Both of us are going to hammer on that issue from now until November."

Shriver stood at McGovern's side during the meeting with newsmen, but most of the questions were directed at McGovern. Shriver did say he thought the organizational problems were "greatly exaggerated."

McGovern said Thursday he expects to begin closing the gap in the polls—34 points in the most recent Gallup Poll—by Oct. 1 and move steadily up until the Nov. 7 election.

"I think we will win," he said.

"The poll situation is much better now than it was when I was seeking the nomination," he said. "We thought it was a good day when we hit 5 per cent in the Gallup Poll.

"The polls don't mean very much two months before the election," he added.

But there was little doubt that the Democratic campaign was having its trouble. Lawrence F. O'Brien, who has the title of campaign chairman but whose duties are loosely defined, complainedthat the whoe operation was disorganized and uncoordinated.

An aide to O'Brien said the organizational problems were discussed during a stormy three-hour meeting of McGovern's top associates at the candidate's home Wednesday night. He said O'Brien was encouraged by the tone of that session.

Brown Hits Reagan On Spending Program

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. yesterday charged the Reagan administration's effort to cut state spending has given California the "most inefficient and costly" government in the state's history.

In a speech to the Barristers Club of San Francisco, Brown said Reagan is "striving for economy" but has adopted "outmoded management policies" which are costing the state money.

"Our state budget has increased by 78 per cent since Reagan took office," Brown said. "Ironically, much of this money is being spent on cumbersome bureaucratic procedures initiated by the governor in an effort to cut down government spending."

The Democratic secretary of state said the state's departments and agencies must "fight their way through a bureaucratic maze" when they want to purchase supplies, install telephones or hire a temporary clerk.

As an example, he cited the state's general policy of requiring agencies to purchase furniture such as desks and chairs, from a state agency which makes furniture.

"I have found that we can purchase better furniture for less money from private sources, yet we are forced to spend more for the more flimsy state-made furniture," he said.

"The governor obviously wants to hold down government costs but his methods have backfired and had just the opposite results," he added.

UBAC Sets Schedule Of Fund Events

The United Bay Area Crusade has announced a schedule of events marking its 15th anniversary fund raising campaign.

Next week, contests will be hald in each of the five UBAC counties to select an outstanding Crusade-supported agency representative. The five chosen will later compete for the title of "Golden Crusader".

The Marin contest will be held in the board of supervisors chambers at the Civic Center at 10 a.m. Thursday. Agencies competing are: Camp Fire Girls, Inc.; Marin Family Service Agency; St. Vincent's School for Boys; YMCU and the American National Red Cross.

Judges in the Marin Competition will include Peter R. Arrigoni, chairman of the board of supervisors; Robert Dinsmore, general manager of radio station KTIM; J. Galen Foster, Marin UBAC chairman; Mrs. Robert W. Miller and Mrs. August B. Rothschild.

The winning agency of the Marin Golden Crusader contest will be featured at the Marin UBAC campaign kick-off meeting scheduled for Sept. 19 at Hamilton Air Force Base.

The Crusade's fiftieth anniversary dinner will be held Oct. 5 in the St. Francis hotel in San Francisco.

UBAC has proclaimed Oct. 22 at "50th Anniversary Crusade Day," and will be celebrated simultaneously from noon to 4 p.m. in Stern Grove in San Francisco and at the bandstand in Lakeside Park at Lake Merritt in Oakland.

Agency exhibits, tennis exhibition matches, an antique car parade, balloon races and other events will be featured at both locations. The Oakland Symphony Orchestra will perform at Lakeside Park.

On Nov. 21 the overall winner of the Golden Crusader contest will be announced at a final campaign report dinner, at a location yet to be named.

Mill Valley Given Grant To 18-Acres

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The State Lands Commission yesterday gave the City of Mill Valley a permanent grant of 18 acres in the city's long-stalled small-craft harbor.

There was no opposition, the commission's staff reported.

The commission granted the tidelands to the city more than 10 years ago on condition that they be "substantially improved" within 10 years. The staff recommended the permanent grant, reporting that the city has met this condition by improving public access to the shoreline.

The fact that the public is forbidden use of the harbor area because of gross pollution from the city's sewage system was termed a temporary condition by the commission's staff.

Marin Faculty To Exhibit Art

Speeding Car Loses Control, Heavily Damages Gas Station

Traveling at an estimated 60 miles an hour, a Corte Madera women's car hit a curb on Paradise Drive yesterday, careened 280 feet, smashed into a water hydrant, then bounded off and demolished the gasoline pumps of Schardt Brothers Mobil station, setting them afire.

Using fire extinguishers and hoses, gas station personnel doused the potentially disastrous fire before the Corte Madera Fire Department arrived.

The driver, Betty Jane Butscher, 46, of 5 Windward Drive, was taken by ambulance to Marin General Hospital where she was reported today in satisfactory condition with multiple fractures.

The crash wiped out the station's entire service island, and estimated the cost of the damage at $1,800 for a double pump, $900 for a single pump, and $250 for the light fixture and island.

Corte Madera police said the accident happened at 5:03 p.m. Witnesses reported Mrs. Butscher traveling at around 60 miles per hour from San Clemente Drive then hitting a curb in front of Paradise Shopping Center.

Her car swerved back onto the road, hit the water hydrant near the entrance to the gas station, then smashed into the front island. Her car was extensively damaged and she was pinned inside the car for a while.

today Werner Schardt said he would be unable to pump gas until restoration work is completed.

Explosion Blackens Hospital Restroom

A plastic "electro-match" manufactured in Hong Kong briefly turned into a Molotov cocktail at Marin General Hospital yesterday when it exploded into flames in a ground floor women's restroom.

Kentfield fire chief Kenneth Kamp said a volunteer in the hospital gift shop in the foyer was handling the $13 automatic lighter when fluid leaked over her hands.

She ran to the restroom and threw it into a sink — where it ignited. The fire was out by the time Kentfield fire department arrived, he said, but had blackened the restroom.

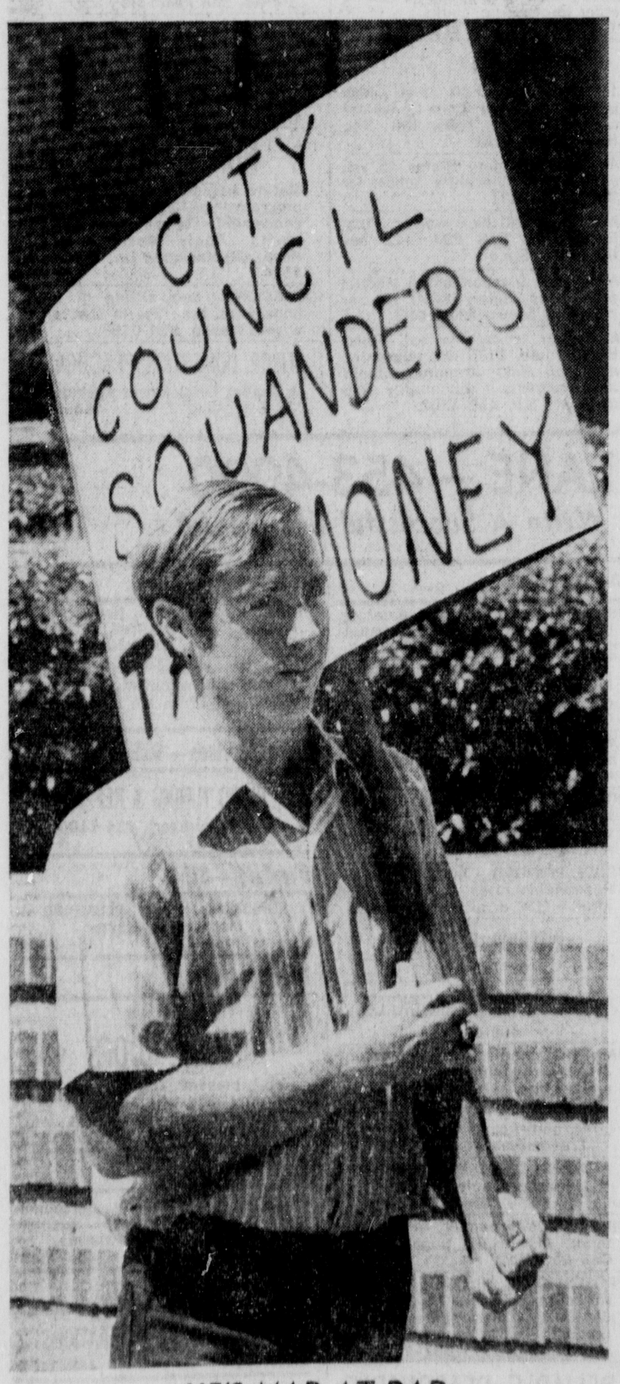
Chief Kamp said he considers the battery operated electro-match unsafe for sale in a hospital and is securing some to determine the fire hazard. He said they are round devices, some four or five inches in length, and when a metal rod is pulled from the top it becomes a hot match, the ignition caused by an electrical arc. They are widely sold in department and specialty stores.

Yesterday's fire at Marin General Hospital came right on the original deadline the Marin Hospital District Board had been given by the Kentfield Fire District to approve a $10,059 proposed contract for fire protection for 1972-73. Protection hitherto has cost a token $1.

No agreement has yet been reached on the contract and the deadline has been extended to Wednesday, said Chief Kamp.

On that date the board of the Kentfield Fire Protection District will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Kentfield fire station to consider its negotiations with the hospital board. Meanwhile, fire protection will continue to be furnished.

As an exempt organization in county territory, the hospital doesn't pay taxes to the fire district.



HE'S MAD AT DAD

San Rafael Patrolman Harry A. Barbier Jr., son of the San Rafael city councilman, marches in front of city hall with a sign complaining that his father and fellow councilmen squander tax money. San Rafael safety personnel — irate because the council rejected a mediation team's report which cost the city $2,125 — have been picketing city hall since Wednesday and plan to continue their vigil through next week. Police and firemen want a 5 per cent salary increase retroactive to July 1 and a $15 increase in monthly insurance benefits, as recommended by the mediators.

BUILDING POLICY

San Anselmo Planners Seek Temporary Ban

By LARRY MOWELL

Although avoiding the word "moratorium," the San Anselmo Planning Commission last night asked for a draft of what would be one of the strictest temporary bans on building, rezoning and subdividing in Marin County.

The commission asked the city attorney to draft an ordinance for public hearing Sept. 11 to cover all undeveloped parcels, large and small, and all commercial lots, already developed or not.

However, the commission proposed to leave an out for builders by setting up a variance procedure and waiving the $25 variance fee for applicants who could develop without a variance in the absence of the proposed emergency ordinance.

The four-month measure aimed at giving the city a breathing spell to draw up its general plan and determine what parcels it wants to keep open, could be extended for a period of two years.

Although the moratoriums adopted by other cities in Marin have concentrated on the larger parcels of land, the ordinance proposed last night would prevent any permanent change to undeveloped land without ause permit.

But commissioners and some in the audience of nine said the ordinance would not prevent building, but would stop denser building than is now allowed. "It is not stopping the use of the land. It is just stopping the change of the use," spectator Conrad Williams said.

Although the commissioners present unanimously backed the ban, two spectators dissented, even from two less stringent proposals the commission started with.

Alma R. Wiederhoeft of Butterfield Road said, "I'm against the moratorium. I just don't like the idea. I think you have enough tools as it is now."

And Attilio Segale of Holstein Road said, "What do you want to do? Kill everything, shut down the town? I think we should leave everything status-quo. Leave everything the way it is. You guys can take care of it."

He contended San Anselmo doesn't have enough open space left to worry about and suggested leaning on the county to slow development in nearby unincorporated areas.

Commissioners answered that the ban would not hurt property value and said the best way to deal with the county would be to enforce a ban in San Anselmo first.

Others in the audience urged the commission to move quickly. "Anything you do is almost too late," Williams said. "There has got to be a stop to this frenzy of quick developing everything." Four others backed his argument.

Consideration of a rezoning ban began in July when Councilman Dr. Martin R. Blinder proposed an immediate stop to all rezoning that would increase density on parcels larger than an acre, on subdividing any large parcels and on using steep areas at all.

But Commissioner David A. Strassman said the proposal "smacks of getting on the bandwagon" and said San Rafael's ordinance seemed to be better thought out.

The commissioners favored the San Rafael ordinance as a format. San Rafael currently bars any permanent change to parcels of more than two acres or to five adjoining parcels without a use permit.

But the commission then went even further to reflect the sentiment of one spectator who said, "There is really no argument against it. Property once developed cannot be undeveloped. If you develop it now and then change your mind, there is not much you can do about it."

Absent from the meeting were commissioners Allen J. Creighton, John H. Colteaux and Daniel Goltz.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Borderline Anemia May Cause Fatigue, Dizziness Or Numbness

Borderline anemia may cause a variety of symptoms, including fatigue, dizziness, nervousness, headache, numbness, or shortness of breath. In many instances, iron brings relief even before the blood count has a chance to improve. This is puzzling, because this form of anemia is not severe enough to cause too much trouble.

Many victims are women who have been on iron-deficient diets6for years. Meanwhile, they may have lost iron during menstruation or bleeding from other sources. Regardless of cause, the body has responded by using up stored iron in bone marrow. Apparently, this supply must be depleted before the blood count demonstrates signs of anemia.

Special isotope tests show that the best response is obtained by women who have very little iron in the bone marrow. When given iron tablets, the majority become peppy and are relieved of distress. But treatment must be continued until the "storage bins" are also filled.

IN OUR COUNTRY iron deficiency is primarily a problem of rapidly growing infants and children and of women during the childbearing years. Iron needs are greater at these times. But anemia occurs also in persons suffering from chronic and repeated blood loss, especially from the gastrointestinal tract and uterus. These secondary iron-deficiency anemias are best treated by prophylaxis or eliminating the cause of bleeding. If this is not possible, prolonged administration of iron is necessary.

IRON PREPARATIONS cause abdominal distress and diarrhea in some people. If the shortage cannot be made up with iron-rich foods, the physician may prescribe injections of an iron-dextran product. Some people do not absorb iron that is obtained in foods or taken in tablet form. This rare cause of anemia is corrected via iron injections. Iron plus the oral use of dilute hydrochloric acid is often beneficial.

ORANGE BINGES

M. L. writes: I get home from work at 10 p.m. nd look at TV until midnight. During this time I eat one dozec oranges. Will this hurt my teeth or any part of my body?

REPLY

No, but brush your teeth before you go to bed. Some people have peculiar reactions to large amounts of citrus fruit. However, if you are not bothered, there is no harm in the practice, provided you can afford it.

SMOKING AND WRINKLES

Miss M. writes: Is smoking deleterious to the complexion?

REPLY

Recent studies implicate smoking in the development of crow's-feet and wrinkles. Yellowed fingers result when the cigaret is held upside down, allowing the smoke to curl between the digits. Occasionally a smoker's lip becomes irritated.

BEFORE THE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

Application of Pacific Gas and Electric Company for authority to revise its gas service tariff to offset the effect of increases in the price of gas from Pacific Gas Transmission Company and El Paso Natural Gas Company.

APPLICATION
No. 53552

PACIFIC GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY hereby gives notice that in Application No. 53552, filed with the California Public Utilities Commission on August 28, 1972, it has requested authorization to revise its gas service tariff to offset the effect of increases in the price of gas purchased from Pacific Gas Transmission Company, caused by an increase in the price of Canadian gas, and from El Paso Natural Gas Company. Should reductions and refunds be ordered pertaining to these increases, PGandE proposes to reduce its offset rates accordingly and to make appropriate refunds to its customers.

PGandE proposes (a) to increase its gas rates on October 1, 1972, to offset an increase in the cost of gas purchased from PGT which becomes effective on that date, and (b) to increase its gas rates on January 1, 1973, to offset an increase in the cost of gas purchased from El Paso which becomes effective on that date.

The proposed PGandE offset rate increase to be effective October 1, 1972, amounts to 1.7% for firm industrial customers and 1.2% for general service customers, including domestic customers. The proposed offset rate increase to be effective January 1, 1973, amounts to 0.3% for firm industrial customers and 0.2% for general service customers, including domestic customers.

A copy of the application and related exhibits may be examined at the offices of the California Public Utilities Commission, State Building, 350 McAllister Street, San Francisco, California 94102; at Pacific Gas and Electric Company, 77 Beale Street (Room 3107), San Francisco, California 94106; and c/o the Division Managers in PGandE's Division Headquarters in Eureka, Red Bluff, Chico, Marysville, Sacramento, Auburn, San Rafael, San Francisco, Oakland, San Jose, Salinas, Fresno, and Stockton.

A $600 Million Surplus

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state of California ended the fiscal year on June 30 with a surplus of $600 million in taxpayers money, Controller Houston Flournoy said yesterday.

Flournoy also told a news conference he has named a task force to recommend changes in the state's accrual accounting system to make it less confusing to the public.

The controller said the state had an accumulated surplus of $600,340,742 at the end of fiscal 1971-72. The figure was based on revenues accrued but not actually received by June 30.

THE SURPLUS

After deducting $34 million as a reserve for continuing appropriations, Flournoy said, the state's general fund had an unappropriated surplus of $565,654,491.

He said the figures included a June 30 cash balance of $256.2 million and $309.4 million which under state law must be held in reserve to meet any cash flow problems.

Flournoy said he ordered the task force study because of the law which requires that the working capital reserve ($309.4 million) be determined as the difference between the cash surplus and the eventual unappropriated surplus.

The controller said the current method of determining the reserve produces an "artificial figure" which has no direct relationship to what the actual fiscal needs of the state are.

'COULD FAIL'

He said the reserve figure "could fail to meet the ongoing cash needs of the general fund, or it could grow out of all proportion to what is needed."

Flournoy said the laws prescribing current accounting methods have become so complicated and confusing that the public has "difficulty understanding the true fiscal situation of state government."

He said the task force, to be headed by Chief Deputy Controller Kirk West, will study the current system and, if needed, recommend a new formula for determining working capital reserve that is "more compatible with sound cash management."

Boxer To Open Campaign With Sept. 9 'Fest'

Supervisorial candidate Barbara Boxer will open her general election campaign with a "September Fest" on Sept. 9 at the Ross home of Dr. James D. Green, 2 Canyon Road.

Julia Childs Show May Be Dropped

David O. Ives, president of WGBH in Boston which has produced the show for nine years, said Thursday unless new funds become available only four new shows can be produced for the season starting Oct. 1. The rest of the season will have to be reruns and the program will be dropped entirely if a new underwriter is not found by January.

Train, Bus Problems Turning Travelers To 'Little Airlines'

By PETER TONGE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — Eileen J. is fairly representative of the more than four million passengers who flew the "little airlines" of America last year. She loves them. Indeed she considers them indispensable.

Their names don't stare up from the glossy pages of travel and other magazines; they advertise very little, in fact. And at the major airports they are generally confined to some out-of-the-way corner.

Nevertheless they have become an established and increasingly important segment of the United States airline industry.

They're the commuter or third-level carriers; the little companies with the even-smaller aircraft, not well known in the cities but needed and respected in the outlying communities they serve.

The rapid decline of the railroads and the frequently indifferent bus service to non-metropolitan America has enchanced this importance.

As Eileen tells it, she barely knew third-level carriers existed until her husband was transferred to a small town in Maine. She was moving "to the back of beyond," in her opinion. Even so, to visit her family in Indianapolis still takes little more than a four-hour journey — because the service offered by a comuter airline from the Maine town to Boston cuts what would otherwise be a five-hour bus ride into a 35-minute hop. Moreover the 10-seat plane puts her down right at the airport from where the major airlines depart.

Eileen's experience is repeated a thousand and more times throughout the U.S. every day. In fact of the 4.4 million passengers enplaned by third-level carriers last year, fully 80 per cent were connecting with major airlines, according to a Department of Transportation survey.

As an industry spokesman puts it: "In effect we're a feeder industry. We operate largely to transfer business passengers and freight to the major airlines."

Third-level importance is further high-lighted by these figures: The United States has more than 10,000 airports. Some 3,000 are paved and lighted. Yet not many more than 500 are served by the big-plane operators.

In fact, though trunk (long-haul) and local service (short-haul) carriers have grown explosively during the past 25 years, they are serving fewer airports today than they did in the early 1950's, according to the National Air Transportation Conferences, Inc. (NATC), the national body of the commuter lines. A Brookings Institute researcher, George C. Eads, confirms this in his study, "The Local Service Airline Experiment."

Growth of the commuter airlines, then, has been largely outside the Civil Aeronautics Board's (CAB) certified local service carriers. The advent of the jetliner with its greater seat capacity and its long-run, high-flying economy had made its operators increasingly reluctant to make short runs. They have become uneconomical despite federal subsidies ($1 billion over the past 25 years) designed to maintain service to small communities.

Says an airline executive: "In many instances the revenue from the few passengers we would pick up at these airports wouldn't even pay for the additional fuel a plane used up in landing and takeoff, let alone cover the landing fees."

By contrast, a small plane (third-level carriers have been using anything from 2 to 20-seat planes) can frequently operate economically under these circumstances. Thus what had begun as an air taxi business with perhaps three or four companies operating — in the Boston, New York City, and Los Angeles areas — quickly developed into an airplane business with regularly scheduled runs. In 1960 there were five such companies; today there are 99, plus another 70 or so in the freight-carrying or charter-taxi business.

Despite the apparent opportunities and despite the spectacular growth of the commuter airline business, this is not a "money-for-jam" type of business. The industry has a sizeable share of problems. Last year little more than half of the operators reported a profit.

Commuter airlines are not granted the CAB's certificate of public convenience and necessity. This means among other things that they are not obliged to keep servicing an unprofitable route. They can abandon it without appeal to the CAB.

On the other hand they are not eligible for subsidies and receive no route protection. The size of the aircraft, too, is limited — tough restrictions have just been eased to allow for 30 passengers and a payload capacity of 7,000 pounds — and they are not permitted to engage in joint fares with the certificated airlines.

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif. has introduced the Commuter Air Carrier Bill in the House of Representatives. It is designed to grant a limited form of certification to those commuter carriers seeking it.

Route protection would be the principal advantage. "We don't seek a monopoly on any particular route," says an industry spokesman. Indeed CAB would grant flying rights to as many commuter airlines it felt a route warranted.

Banks, too, would be more interested in advancing loans to airlines enjoying reasonable route protection. Banks in the local communities serviced by the small carriers have expressed an eagerness to join in such ventures but "not until route protection takes much of the risk out of the operation."

Candidates' Name Policy Due Review

The Marin County Board of Education's difficulties over its previous policy of not releasing names of candidates for board vacancies will occupy much of the board's meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the county schools office, Corte Madera.

Members are slated to act on procedures for board appointments and vacancies under which all names will be released.

Also on the agenda is discussion of the successful suit by Pieter Toal challenging the board's policy against disclosure and his request for attorney's fees. Deputy Supt. Byron Mauzy said if a favorable decision on the fee request by Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson is handed down by Tuesday, board members will decide whether to pay or appeal.

An emergency, 60-day appointment to the County Schools Personnel Commission will be made at the meeting to enable the commission to carry on business. Two of its three members recently resigned. Permanent appointments to the commission will be made at a future meeting.

Three From Marin Earn Davis Degrees

Three Marin County residents received bachelor of arts or science degrees at the summer session of the University of California at Davis.

They were Luana E. Long and Herbert M. Rowland Jr., both of San Rafael, and Richard P. Hewitt of Mill Valley.

Soviet Union's Borzov Triumphs Over Depleted 100-Meter Field

Hart, Robinson Of U.S. Disqualified In Mixup

MUNICH (UPI) — Valeri Borzov broke in front at the start and breezed home with easy winner today to become the first Russian in Olympic history ever to win the 100-meter dash.

Borzov's triumph became a foregone conclusion yesterday when United States stars Eddie Hart and Ray Robinson were disqualified after missing their quarter-final heats.

The victory enabled the Soviet Union to add to its lead in Olympic medals. The Russians' Lakov Zhelizniak shot a world record 569 hits in the moving target rifle shoot to bring the team total to 15 golds and 37 total, compared to 12 and 32 for the U.S.

In track and field, Steve Smith of Torrance, Calif., who is one of the six pole vaulters in the world who has cleared 18 feet, failed to make the qualifying height of 16-5 and was eliminated.

Also put out was 18-footer Kjell Isaksson of Sweden, who was hampered by a pulled hamstring muscle.

And Kathy Schmidt of Long Beach, Calif., provided the 32nd medal, a surprise bronze for third place in the women's javelin.

U.S. lightweight boxer James Busceme of Beaumont, Tex., was awarded an unpopular decision over Prai A Nan Vichit of Thailand, to score the 10th American victory in 11 bouts.

Borzov was timed in 10.14 seconds to defeat Robert Taylor of Houston, Tex. and Lennox Miller of Jamaica.

Miller, the former University of Southern California star, finished in 10.33.

It was only the sixth time in 20 Olympics that an American runner has not captured the shortest event of the track and field competition.

The other went to Ruth Fuchs of East Germany, who set an Olympic record in the javelin of 209 feet, 7 inches.

The silver medal went to Jaqueline Podten of East Germany with 205-2 and third was Kathy Schmidt of Long Beach, Calif., with 196-8.

Borzov's victory was the first in the 100 for a non-American since the 1960 games in Rome where Armin Hary of West Germany was the victor.

Meanwhile, U.S. runner Vince Matthews said he and fellow 400-meter star Wayne Collett were almost thrown off the team by coach Bill Bowerman, apparently because the duo did not want to run in pre-Olympic warmup meets and adhere to Bowerman's training methods.

"There were reports that he (Bowerman) was going to put myself and Collett off the team," said Matthews. Bowerman said in a news conference prior to the games that he almost sent one unnamed athlete home.

With the exception of two gold medals by swimmer Mark Spitz, the most sensational performances by U.S. athletes Thursday were in wrestling where the Americans won six medals, the first time they had done this well since 1924.

Golds went to lightweight Dan Gable of Waterloo, Iowa, welterweight Wayne Wells of Norman, Okla., and light heavyweight Ben Peterson of Comstock, Wis. Peterson's brother, John, a middleweight, and Rick Sanders of Lakeview, Ore., won silvers and 400-pound Chris Taylor of Dowagiac, Mich., won a bronze.

San Rafael High School physical education teachers Tom Dooley and Goetz Klopfer finished back in the pack in the 20kilometer walk Thursday. Dooley, from San Carlos, was 15th, while Larkspur's Klopfer was 19th.

49er-Raider Clash: More Than Exhibition

Time has come for that annual exhibition game between cross bay rivals 49ers and Raiders and I don't hear too many people breaking down doors trying to put their bankroll on the 49ers.

Although it's just an exhibition thing, the closeness — in proximity, not feelings — of the two teams has a way of making the game mean more than your ordinary pre-season game. Even if the players don't say it, you can feel more excitement in the air when these two football powers collide.

Sunday's game will be in Candlestick Park so the slight advantage of the homefield goes to the 49ers. They will need every advantage they can muster. The way I hear some Raider fans talk the game won't even be close. It will be a rout, say the Raider people. The 49er fans, wisely, are saying nothing. But many are expecting the worst.

After all, injuries have stolen some of the best and meanest players from the 49er lineup. When you lose players like Jimmy Johnson, Ken Willard and Cedrick Hardman it's pretty hard to make up the loss. In all, 11 veterans had some form of injury this week.

The Raiders are having a grand time knocking off opponents on the exhibition schedule. The silver and black team, lovingly referred to as The Organization by bossman Al Davis, has beaten New England, Baltimore, Los Angeles and Buffalo for a 4-0 record. San Francisco beat Cleveland but stumbled against the New York Jets, San Diego and Denver.

Oakland has a 4-1 edge in the preseason series against the 49ers. In the only regular season meeting, San Francisco won, 38-7, but the thrill of triumph was bittered because the Raiders had already clinched a division title and the Raider fan shout before the game was: "Who cares?"

I haven't called Jimmy the Greek in Las Vegas but I don't think he is favoring the 49ers in this one.

Oakland is neck deep in talent, especially in the department responsible for catching passes. If the Denver Bronco no-name receivers were able to beat the 49er secondary, wait until the likes of Fred Biletnikoff, Warren Wells and Raymond Chester get their chance.

San Francisco fans will get their first look at No. 1 draft choice Terry Beasley, the boyish looking wide receiver from Auburn University. Out of action with a broken toe, it will be Terry's first game test as a 49er.

The Raider coaching staff will also be taking a long, hard look at a wide receiver — Warren Wells. He hasn't been his old self since coming out of jail so his job is in jeopardy.

Waivers Withdrawn For Wells

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have withdrawn wide receiver Warren Wells from their National Football League waiver list and will play him Sunday against San Francisco. But his future is still uncertain.

"We'll play him against the 49ers and see what happens," said managing general partner Al Davis Thursday. "We really don't know what we're going to do about him at this point ... He doesn't seem able to concentrate. That year away does something to you."

Wells missed the 1971 season serving a sentence for probation violation after conviction on an attempted rape charge.

Wide receiver Rod Sherman, in his sixth pro season, was waived to Denver. "Rod wanted to come to camp," Davis said, "but coach John Madden didn't want him up here."

Although the Raiders keep their waiver list confidential, it was believed there were about 15 names on it — three or four more than needed to out the squad to the limit of 49.

49ERS CUT THREE FROM THE ROSTER

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers Thursday cut safety Jackie Walker, defensive end Steve Setzler and kicker Tom Wittum to lower the club's roster to 49 players.

Walker was a sixth-round draft choice from University of Tennessee, Setzler was from St. John's of Minnesota and Wittum from Northern Illinois.

The 49ers said Wittum would join the taxi squad.

Softball Results

Night Club scored nine runs in the fifth inning before any men were retired to rally from an 11-5 deficit and defeat Don Rumpf Golf Shop, 14-11, last night in a San Rafael Recreational Department adult softball league game at Albert Park. In other action, New York Life belted McKee's, 13-1.

FUTURE IN DOUBT

Marichal Taken From Rotation

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants open a three-game series against the Pittsburgh Pirates tonight with Juan Marichal on the shelf.

Marichal, 5-15 and winding up his poorest season in the majors, was taken out of the pitching rotation by Manager Charley Fox after reinjuring a groin pull in his last outing against St. Louis. It was the latest in a series of injuries which have befallen the proud right-hander this season.

Juan said he will make a decision this winter on whether to retire from baseball. He is already signed to a $100,000-plus contract for next season.

"Assuming I'm still owned by the Giants, and I honestly, truly pray that I will be, then if I find out next spring a return to my high leg kick isn't possible, I quit," said Marichal.

He owns hundreds of acres of produce land in his native Dominican Republic and says he won't need his baseball income. Marichal also revealed he and fellow countryman Felipe Alou are thinking of buying the Escondido baseball club in the Dominican Republic League.

Left-hander Ron Bryant (10-6) will open for the Giants tonight against Dock Ellis (11-7 . San Francisco follows with Sam McDowell (8-7) and Jim Barr (6-7).

Outfielder Gary Matthews has been called up from Phoenix by the Giants and will join the club Monday in San Diego. Matthews set a Phoenix club record with 104 runs batted in while hitting .323 with 21 homers.

A's Host Showdown Vs. Tigers

Bolstered by the acquisition of slugger Frank Howard from the Texas Rangers, the Tigers open a three-game set tied with Baltimore for the lead in the American League East. Oakland is nursing a 1½-game bulge over the Chicago White Sox in the AL West.

Detroit manager Billy Martin says he will platoon Howard, who has hit 369 home runs, at first base with Norm Cash.

For the rest of the series, Vida Blue (5-7) faces Mickey Lolich (19-11) on Saturday and Jim Hunter (17-7) goes against Woody Fryman (3-1) Sunday.

In the last confrontation between the teams, the A's won two of three games in Detroit Aug. 21-23. But the Tigers were without Howard at the time.

The 36-year-old veteran, who led the American League with 44 homers in 1968 and 1970, was used sparingly at Texas this season. He appeared in only 94 games and hit nine homers while batting .247.

But Martin feels the mammoth first baseman will give the Tigers needed longball power for the stretch drive for the pennant.

San Diego Boy In Junior Golf Tourney Lead

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)— Jack Renner of San Diego retained his two-stroke lead in the 72-hole Junior World Golf tournament with a two-over-par 74 Thursday in the third round at the Torrey Pines south course.

The tournament, involving 540 youngsters from 26 nations, was to end Friday on the same links with Renner leading Richard Friedman of suburban Spring Valley, 219-221. Friedman, who recently returned here from Seattle, also carded a third-round 74.

2 Marinites In Net Wins

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Sharon Walsh of San Rafael and Mike Machette of Belvedere won first round matches yesterday in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Miss Walsh turned back Lita Liam of Indonesia, 7-6, 3-6, 6-3 and tomorrow faces Sue Stap of Deerfield, Ill., a 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 winner over Mary Ann Beattie of St. Louis.

Machette, a member of the University of Southern California tennis team, advanced after a slow start against Milan Holecek of Czechoslovakia. He lost the first set, 1-6, and then came back, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4.

THE FIELD

As the fields of 148 men and 80 women battled through first round tests Wednesday and again on Thursday, only the mild upset of 15th seeded Jimmy Connors by Tom Gorman on opening day detracted from the manner in which the top players were supposed to advance.

Today, however, defending champion Stan Smith can run into serious trouble against unseeded Clark Graebner. Smith, the winner over Jan Kodes in last year's final and the Wimbledon winner in July over Ilie Nastase of Romania, was far from impressive in defeating 15-year-old Billy Martin in four sets in nis first round, and Graebner, in-and-out in many matches, is a fine grass court player.

Stan played erratically at Wimbledon, before hitting his real stride in the five-set final with Nastase. But the draw in England was an easy one for Stan and he had time to get accustomed to grass after leading the U.S. to victory over Chile on clay immediately prior to Wimbledon.

GIRLS DOMINATE

Thursday's play was dominated by the girls, and there wasn't a ripple of excitement among the class performers as all nine seeds swept through without the loss of a set.

The crowd gave third-seeded Chris Evert, their darling of a year ago, a great welcome, and Chris proceeded to hand Laurie Tenney of Los Angeles a 6-1, 6-1 beating. Previously, her arch rival Evonne Goolagong, second seeded, had made a determined debut here by refusing to "walkabout" in disposing of South Africa's Brenda Kirk, 6-2, 6-2.

The self-proclaimed "old lady," Billie Jean King, tested the court grass for six games, then whisked away to a 6-3, 6-2 win over Patti Hogan of LaJolla, Calif.

ROSIE CASALS

Nancy Richey Gunter allowed Marilyn Aschner of Queens, N.Y. only one game in the second set but Francoise Durr was a bit more charitable in a 6-4, 6-1 win over Brenda Garcia of Lafayette, Calif.

Virginia Wade, eighth seed but the winner of te first open in 1968 over Mrs. King, looked fine as she tested her strokes in defeating Isabel Fernandez of Colombia, 6-4, 6-3 and Kerry Melville of Australia, the ninth seed, took out Russia's Marina Kroshina, 6-2, 6-4.

SCORES

Nastase, the fourth seed, got to business by walloping Venezuela's Jairo Velasco, 6-0, 6-2, 6-0 and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill. ninth seeded, put out Geoff Masters of Australia, 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

So little attention was paid the men that a meeting of two former champions, Australians Fred Stolle and Roy Emerson, played in the stadium to a silent audience. Stolle won it, 67, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

Maxvill Hits .220, But He's Valuable

ST. LOUIS — When was the last time a .220-hitting shortstop was saluted as Sportsman of the Year outside his own family? It happened just a couple of days ago here in St. Louis at the South Side Kiwanis Club's annual shindig when Dal Maxvill was so honored.

That may not sound like big stuff elsewhere but locally it gets a big play in the Post-Dispatch and Globe-Democrat. Maxville must be quite a guy to get the Kiwanis Club's 1972 silver tray which in past years was awarded to such St. Louis Baseball greats as Terry Moore and Stan Musial.

NOW, MAXVILL brings his team spirit and fielding talent to the Bay Area as a newly-acquired member of the Oakland A's

Red Schoendienst had this to say about Maxvill: "I can't say enough about him. He's willing to do anything he can for the team." Then, slipping in a light touch, the manager of the Cardinals added: "My only criticism of him is that he's a lousy shot when he goes hunting."

Musial, now senior vice president of the Cardinals, commented this way about Maxvill: "He always gives 100 per cent. He's not only a good player but the mainstay of our infield."

JOE MONAHAN, super scout of the Cardinals who signed Maxvill in 1960 fresh out of St. Louis' Washington University for $3,000, which covered his first season salary and bonus, said: "I'm very proud of him. He thought he wasn't getting anywhere after four years in the minors and was going to quit but let me talk him out of it."

A hip injury to Julian Javier in the next-to-last game of the 1964 season gave Maxvill an opportunity to play in a pennant-clinching contest and in all seven games against the Yankees in the 1964 World Series.

A YEAR LATER, following the trade of Dick Groat to Philadelphia, the shortstop job of the Cardinals was wide open. Jerry Buchek temporarily won it but Maxvill took it away from Buchek following a slow start by Buchek at the outset of the 1966 season.

Ever since, Maxvill has been the Cardinal shortstop. In 1967-68 the Cardinals again won pennants and in 1968 Maxvill for the first time was voted a Sporting News Golden Glove emblematic of fielding supremacy, by managers and coaches. Bob Gibson and other St. Louis pitchers heartily approved of that, saying they liked Maxvill playing behind them.

THE REACTION of Cardinal pitchers to Maxvill's glove work was understandable. In 1968 he led all but two National League shortstops in fielding (13 errors). Only Bobby Wine (10 errors) and Larry Bowa (11 errors) made fewer than Maxvill in 1968.

Although his bat hasn't improved through the years (.219 lifetime average), his glove has. In 1970 he led NL shortstops with a .982 percentage, 12 errors in 654 chances.

Maxvill is a brainy fellow. He has an electrical engineering degree from Washington University. Now 33, he doesn't have any worries whatsoever when his playing days are over. He presently is a sales engineer during the off season for a St. Louis electrical firm. He's come a long way since his original $3,000 contract.

four games that quarterback Steve Spurrier has been sacked just once and Brodie not at all in the first four pre-season games, compared to 12 sackings administered by the 49ers rushers . . . Jim McCann and rookie Tom Wittum, fighting for the job as team punter, each kicked seven times for 272 yards in the first four games, an identical 38.8 yard average. Since McCann has a year of experience on Wittum, he got the job and Tom got the spot on the taxi squad.

RAIDER NOTES — A knee injury might keep 13-year-old all-pro center Jim Otto out of the game. Since it's only exhibition, his string of 168 consecutive league games will remain intact. Otto has missed only one game in his pro career, a pre-season game against Boston in 1963 . . . If you're wondering what happened to ex-49er running back Dave Kopay, you can see him now as a member of the Raiders . . . Dallas (5-0) is the only other NFL team besides Oakland undefeated in pre-season play.

Gabriel Is Latest Ailing Ram

LONG BEACH (AP) — Quarterback Roman Gabriel's the latest victim of a wave of preseason injuries that has struck the Los Angeles Rams.

Gabriel, who has played in the last two National Football League exhibition games after missing the first two with a collapsed lung, may go back to the sidelines Saturday night when the Rams travel to San Diego to meet the Chargers.

The Rams said Thursday that a bruised knee Gabrielsuffered last Saturday against Kansas City wasn't responding to treatment.

"If he's going to play, he will start and we will see how he progresses," said Coach Tommy Prothro. Pete Beathard is the No. 2 quarterback.

Brown Gets Heat For Two Claims

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI)— Cincinnati coach Paul Brown says he has been "getting a lot of heat" for placing claims on tackle Bob McKay of the Cleveland Browns and defensive end Bubba Smith of the Baltimore Colts.

The action by Brown forced the Browns and Colts to take McKay and Smith off the injured waiver list and keep them on the active roster even though they can't play.

"It's within the rules," said Brown. "It's just a matter of trying to help out my team."

"They might not like me for doing it," said Brown. "But the truth of the matter is, we've done the same kind of thing with other teams."

Smith recently underwent surgery on his knee and is expected to miss most of the season.

"Wouldn't you claim Smith if you had a chance," Brown asked. "We'd be willing to wait till next year if we had to. We'd be willing to pay his salary and bring him back next season."

Cleamons, an Ohio State University star, saw limited action with the Lakers last season, playing in 38 games and scoring 98 points.

Auto Racing

ONTARIO — If Mario Andretti is worried about being without a victory for more than two years on the U.S. Auto Club championship trail, he doesn't let it show.

"Perhaps, it might bother me if I hadn't had any wins at all during that time but that's not the case," said the 32-year-old Italian immigrant, who is here for the California 500 Sunday.

He qualified in the middle of the second row — fifth spot — at 191.449 miles per hour, almost 10 m.p.h. slower than Bobby Unser's 201.374.

Dan Gurney's No. 2 driver, Jerry Grant, captured the pole in last Saturday's qualifying at 199.600 m.p.h. qualifying a day late because of engine problems, Bobby Unser earned 23rd place in the field.

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Bobby Allison piloted his Chevrolet around the Darlington Raceway at a record speed of 152.228 miles per hour Thursday to capture the pole position for the Southern 500 stock car race on Labor Day Monday.

State Champion Cooper Defeats Boxer Bryant

OAKLAND (UPI)—California middieweight champion George Cooper scored a majority decision over Gene (Honey Bear) Bryant in a non-title 10-round bout Thursday night.

It was the second time in three years Cooper defeated the 159-pound Las Vegas veteran, the last by a knockout three years ago.

Cooper, 156, Oakland, started slowly and showed the rust of an eight month layoff. But he warmed up midway through the bout and scored enough times with combinations to the head to win the votes of two officials, 6-2 and 7-2, while another judge voted 3-3.

Stanford, Cal Teams Work Out

By Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA — It's afternoon workouts only for the University of California's Golden Bears from now until their opener in Boulder against Colorado a week from Saturday — no more two-a-day drills.

Coach Mike White said he will have two-deep lineups determined by Monday, using film of Saturday's upcoming scrimmage and Wednesday's scrimmage, to make decisions.

He said Thursday he is pretty well set on these starters: wide receivers Steve Sweeney and Mike Shaughnessy; defensive backs Scott Stringer, Bob Curry, Bill Amstrong and Clarence Duren, and offensive linemen Mark klink, Steve Lawrence, Ted Seifert, Kevin O'Dorisio. Either Scott Hudgins or Ray Volker will be paired with Siefert at guard.

Two candidates for the Stanford football team will be out of action following injuries, team officials say.

First-team free safety Dennis Bragonier was kept out of Thursday's workouts with a slight concussion but is expected back next week.

Reserve defensive end Mark Ferguson, who had knee surgery last year, twisted his right knee again and will be out at least a week.

The Cardinals, formerly the Indians, held their first two football practices with full pads Thursday. The offense concentrated on pass blocking and the defense on pass rushing.

Jury Still Out On Durocher

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Leo Durocher has in his previous stints as manager gained the reputation as being a man of decision but despite a five-game winning streak, the jury is still undecided in Houston regarding the Astros' newly-appointed pilot.

Lee May and Bob Watson hit two-out singles in the third inning to drive in two runs and Larry Dierker scattered seven hits Thursday night to extend Houston's winning streak to five games as the Astros downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-1.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Astros under the leadership of Durocher, who was named manager of the club last Saturday by Houston General Manager Spec Richardson. Durocher, who managed the Chicago Cubs from 1966 until July 25 of this season, replaced Harry "the hat" Walker.

"We can't say Durocher is better than Walker," said third baseman Doug Rader. "We don't know yet. We're just getting to know him, but it's an exciting change. He's a strong individual who doesn't hem and haw. I like that."

"We are playing good but I don't know if its because we have a different manager," said Houston star Cesar Cedeno. "We are just playing good ball and everybody is happy with him."

Durocher himself would take no credit for the Astros' current success. "I'd take no credit for it at all. They're playing the way I like to see a club play—they are going out to win. They have a lot of spirit, more than I've seen in a long time."

May and Watson hit back-to-back singles and Rader hit a bases-loaded double to score the two runners and climax the four-run outburst. Cedeno doubled in the sixth inning to drive in Roger Metzger, who had walked and stolen second.

Dierker improved his record to 14-7 as he yielded one walk and struck out four.

Los Angeles defeated Chicago 5-3 in the only other National league game scheduled. In the American League, California shut out Detroit 4-0, New York blanked Texas 7-0 and Milwaukee beat Kansas City 7-3.

Nolan Ryan hurled a three-hitter for his ninth shutout and the Angels erupted for four runs in the first inning to knock the Tigers out of first place in the American League East.

By completing a sweep of the three-games, California dropped the Tigers a half-game behind idle Baltimore. The slumping Tigers were able to collect only 10 hits in the three contests as California increased its winning streak to five straight.

Claude Osteen, helping himself with a two-run single, overcame a shaky seventh inning to pitch the Dodgers past Chicago. Osteen had a two-hitter and a 4-0 lead until the last of the seventh when Billy Williams lined a one-out single. Osteen then issued a walk to Jim Hickman and Ron Santo followed with a three-run homer.

Bobby Murcer's 100th career home run, a three-run shot in the second inning, was all the support Fritz Peterson needed to record the 18th shutout of his career in New York's win over the Rangers.

Murcer, who became the 20th Yankee to achieve 100 or more homers in a career, hit his 25th homer off Rich Hand following a walk to Horace Clarke and a single by Thurman Munson. Munson's single had driven in Celerino Sanchez, who opened the frame with a single and was sacrificed to second by Peterson.

FISH AND GAME

Top Trout Fishing In Lakes Expected

By AL GIDDINGS

With the weather cooling in the Sierra, many of the lakes will now begin to provide the season's best trout fishing. Davis Lake in Plumas County is improving.

Last year, while dove and sage grouse hunting in Lassen County, we eventually landed in Webber Lake country near Truckee. We fished two lakes called Meadow Lake and White Rock Lake, but took only a few small fish. Later, on Sept. 26 through 29, the entire area was covered with snow. The sun soon came out again melting most of the snow, but the nights were generally cold — almost freezing.

The fishing took an unbelievable change for the better. One particular day, Marty Medin, Mary and I took 26 kamloops that all were about 14 inches long. They were the fat, red-meated fish that fight so well and taste so good. The brown trout in Webber went on a real biting spree also. The year before, the same thing happened, and I ended up catching an 8½-pound brown on a trolled Rapala lure. So don't put your trout rods away, the best fishing is yet to come.

WE HAD SOME questions on what to expect for this year's dove season which opened today. Good summer nesting conditions has resulted in excellent productions of young. Upland Game Coordinator Harold Harper called the prospects "the best in years." Prime hunting opportunities should be found in the Imperial Valley-Colorado River areas, the western Sacramento Valley and the San Joaquin Valley areas around Fresno, Madera, Merced, Kern, King and Tulare counties. Other good bets are the coastal counties of Monterey, San Benito and San Luis Obispo. Prospects for northeastern California are poor. Leading counties for dove last year were Imperial, Fresno, Kern, Tulare and Riverside in that order. I've noticed but a few doves in Marin County — I believe limits will be hard to come by.

Prospects are rated "good" for sage grouse in the three-day season tomorrow through Monday in Modoc, Lassen, Mono and Inyo counties where hunting is permitted. Best bets for hunting is in Modoc and Lassen and the northern part of Mono county in the Bodie area, and around the Walker and Carson River drainages.

According to Harper, populations of the lightly hunted Sierra and ruffed grouse have remained stable, and fair hunting should prevail. Best bets are in the northern California counties and in the meadowareas of the high sierra.

Recently two bears, one with an uncontrollable taste for honey and the other with a penchant for disturbing campers, have been removed from their former haunts in Napa and Lake counties and today are exploring new territories in the Mendocino National Forest.

THE BEAR with a taste for honey was trapped by the Department of Fish and Game near Angwin in Napa County after it had destroyed 16 of 24 hives belonging to a commercial bee keeper.

The 300-pound male was transported to an area in the Mendocino National Forest near Covelo and released.

The second animal, a 175-pound female with a fondness for the public campground at Lake Pillsbury in Lake County was trapped after a number of campers said they found the bear's habits somewhat disconcerting.

THIS BEAR also was trapped unharmed and released in the National Forest near Covelo.

The bears were trapped and relocated in keeping the Department of Fish and Game policy which provides that whenever possible bears causing extensive property damage or posing safety problems will be trapped alive. They are released in other areas instead of being killed.

SCOTT HORTON, 14, of San Marin, shot himself a 100-pound buck last week near Cloverdale. He was on a hunting trip on the John Ratto ranch with his brother, Greg, and grandfather, Andy Bottini.

St. Louis Blues Sell Pair To Islanders

Lavender, 6-foot-1 and 180 pounds, reported to the Blues in midseason last year from the Denver Farm Club. He scored five goals in 46 games with the Blues.

Pulkkinen, 23, spent the entire season with the Kansas City Blues last year.

Suburban One-Hits San Francisco Foe

Ticket Holder Suit

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—A New Orleans Saints season ticket holder filed a $50 million anti-trust suit against that professional football team Thursday, saying he was forced to buy tickets to two pre-season home games in order to be eligible for regular season tickets.

William Skye filed in the suit in federal district court on behalf of all season ticket holders for Saints games since the team's first season in 1967.

In filing the suit, Skye contended that "since the Saints hold a monopoly on professional football within a 300 mile radius of New Orleans, it is an illegal tying agreement to force purchase of exhibition game tickets in order to be able to purchase regular season tickets."

Miss Airola Pulls Big Tennis Upset

She and Nancy Puente of Sacramento lost in doubles play to Joy Hahn and Joan Penello of Sacramento, 6-3, 6-4.

Allen Undecided On No. 1 Quarterback

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

George Allen is still undecided as to whom his starting quarterback will be but Curt Knight has left very little doubt as to who will be kicking Washington's field goals this season.

Knight booted field goals of 51 and 24 yards in the final period Thursday night that enabled the Redskins to rally from a 101-yard kickoff touchdown return by Miami's Charley Leigh and edged the Dolphins 27-24 in a pre-season contest.

Knight's winning boot came with only 36 seconds left in the see-saw contest which saw the Redskins raise their exhibition record to 4-1.

Head coach Allen again divided playing time between Billy Kilmer, who led Washington into the championship playoffs last season, and Sonny Jurgensen, the No. 1 active passer in the National Football League.

Leigh, who had touchdown returns of 99 and 57 yards called back on penalties in Miami's contest last week, tied the game 21-21 with his electrifying run late in third quarter.

In games this weekend Baltimore plays Detroit Friday night. Saturday's schedule features Denver vs. New England, Kansas City vs. Dallas, Atlanta vs. New York Jets, New Orleans vs. Pittsburgh, San Diego vs. Los Angeles, Green Bay vs. St. Louis, and the New York Giants vs. Philadelphia. In Sunday contests its Chicago vs. Buffalo, Cincinnati vs. Cleveland an San Francisco vs. Oakland. Houston is at Minnesota is the single Labor Day clash Monday night.

U.S. Olympians Put Down: A Claim

By MILTON RICHMAN

Don't go by the gold medals or only by what U.S. competitors are doing on the field. They're getting murdered off it.

Everytime there's any question over who should get the shoddy end of the stick or the sharp end of the pole, the answer always comes out the same. Stick it into the good, old U.S.A. So what else is new?

For those at home keeping score, the U.S. has gotten it in the neck four times here already since the Olympics began a week ago.

Four times highly "questionable decisions" have gone in favor of other countries and against the U.S. Once could be an oversight; twice, a mistake; three times, possibly some computer error. But four straight times?

The latest slap-down has to do with a new-type American fibre glass pole.

"It's called a "catapole" and Bob Seagren of Pomona, Calif., used it to set a world record of 18 feet 5-3-4 inches in a pole vault event this summer at Eugene, Ore. Many of the world's foremost vaulters, Sweden's new sensation, Kjell Isaksson, to name one, like the pole and used it, too.

But after Seagren set his record, the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) banned the catapole, as far as these Olympics were concerned, anyway, because it said the pole had not been available to everyone around the world for at least a year before the Games.

Seagren didn't let the matter drop there.

He came here and appealed to the technical committee of the IAAF.

He talked, he pleaded, he demonstrated.

He taped the catapole so that nobody could detect any difference between it and any other pole. He showed where it was actually four ounces heavier, not lighter. The technical committee agreed with him there was no advantage in using the pole and lifted its ban.

That was four days ago.

Now the IAAF says the pole is banned again.

Why? East Germany protested.

Why did East Germany protest?

It seems that Wolfgang Nordwig, its top vaulter, tried using the catapole and didn't do very well with it. East Germany saw the handwriting on the bleacher wall, Goodbye gold medal. If their boy, Wolfgang, couldn't win it, why should the American Seagren?

That was only one decision that cost the U.S. They also came out badly in three others.

Tim McKee of Newtown Square, Pa., finished in a dead heat for first place with Sweden's Gunnar Larsson in the 400-meter individual medley swim, but Larsson got the gold medal, not McKee.

Generally, in all international swimming competition the times are taken to 100th of a second. For some unexplained reason, they were taken to 1,000th of a second this time. Larsson's time was 4:31.981 and McKee's 4:31.983 so it was decided the U.S. had finished second—despite the dead heat.

Reggie Jones, a light middleweight from Newark, N.J., was another American "loser" in pretty much the same way Tuesday.

All he did was stagger his Russian opponent three times in the third and last round, bloody his eye and practically dispatch him to Berlin. Two of the judges voted for Jones. One voted for the Russian, while another judge and the referee called it a draw but gave the decision to the battered Soviet because of, now get this, "superior style."

Probably the most flagrant example of what is happening here to the U.S. occurred in last Sunday's wrestling match between Chris Taylor of Dowagiac, Mich., and Russia's Alexander Medved.

The referee, a Turk, not only gave Medved all the better of it, but also the nod, after which he was expelled for poor officiating.

Naturally, there was a protest about that.

So whadd'ya think happened; the referee was quietly reinstated. His very next assignment involved another U.S. wrestler.

Valdez Is Popular Olympian

MUNICH (UPI)—The International Amateur Boxing Association (AIBA) fired six Olympic referees and judges, Thursday, but the crowd keeps yelling, whistling and jeering in the boxing tournament.

The only boxer who has lived up to the level of former Olympic stars such as Nino Benvenuti or Muhammad Ali, is American welterweight Jesse Valdez of Hamilton Air Force Base, a great stylist, a fleet-footed at jet-pace hitter, and a showman.

The 25-year-old Air Force staff sergeant is on today's card, fighting for the third time in five days. He will be battling for a berth in the quarterfinals.

After five days of preliminary fights only the Russians still have a clean record. The U.S. has lost only light-middleweight Reggie Jones and won the other nine.

Light welterweight Ray Seales of Tacoma, Wash., and flyweight Tim Dement of Bossier City, La., were the only two Americans to fight Thursday and both won.

Seales said his bolo punch was the difference.

Seales won on the cards of three judges, lost one and the fifth judge called it a draw with the edge to Beyer.

Business Is Booming For Demolition Firm

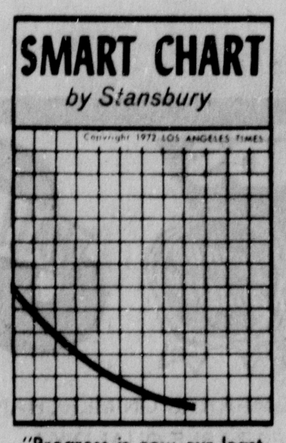
Jack Loizeaux founded Controlled Demolitions, Inc., of Towson, Md., in 1960. The rising cost of labor for tearing down old buildings had sent wrecking contractors looking for cheaper ways to clear away old structures. They were doubtful about blasting at first, and Loizeaux could only get insurance from Lloyds of London — American insurers wouldn't touch the business.

However, after a few jobs like blasting hardened concrete out of a concrete mixer without damaging the machine, the confidence and the jobs rolled in.

Controlled Demolitions still has only three regular employes: Jack and sons Mark and Douglas, plus Jack's wife who serves as secretary and treasurer. A few other part-time employes, two of them sons-in-law, work occasionally on drilling and leading dynamite into the holes.

Jack has refused to hire more full-time employes, he recently told Engineering News-Record, because he fears they would not be as careful as his standards demand. He is equally demanding with the contractors for whom he works because "it's dangerous when we work for someone who is not concerned about safety and takes short cuts."

The senior Loizeaux was graduated in forestry from the University of Georgia in 1941. He worked in forestry and wood technology, then founded his own tree service firm in the Baltimore area.



"Progress is now our least important product."

Trading Is Sluggish As Stocks Rise

Stock analysts attributed the slow trading to pre-Labor Day weekend indifference. However, they added, some investors probably were heartened by the decision of the Federal Reserve not to raise its discount rate to 4 3-4 per cent from 4 1-2 at the end of Thursday's trading.

The morning advance today was across a broad front.

Prices also were higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Teleprompter led the most active stocks on the Amex and was up 1-4 to 40 5-8 on 19,900 shares.

On the Big Board, Bankers Trust led the most active stocks, unchanged at 62 7-8 on 58,500 shares. Curtiss-Wright, holder of the exclusive North American rights to the Wankel engine, was second, off 1-2 to 54 1-4 on 51,900 shares. Revere Copper was third most active, off 1-4 to 11 1-4 on 43,800 shares.

A number of selected glamour issues posted good-sized gains in early trading. Among them, Dupont was up 2 1-2, Eastman Kodak 1 1-8, Superior Oil 2 1-2, IBM 1 1-4, Walt Disney 1 3-8 and Texas Instruments 2 points.

Steel issues were mostly mixed. U.S. Steel was up 5-8.

In the motors, General Motors and Ford each added 1-8 while Chrysler eased 1-8.

In addition to Superior, Getty gained 1 and Pennzoil 5-8.

Rail issues were firmer, as were airlines and aircraft stocks. American Airlines picked up 3-4 and Eastern 1-2.

Builder is Johnny Ribeiro of San Rafael, who has completed about 12 single family homes in the $47,000 to $50,000 category. A total of 38 homes are planned there.

Commerce Clearing House, which owns Quail Hill, sold portions of its 83-acre property to Ribeiro for home construction but retained architectural control over the homes to assure development in line with the Quail Hill Master Plan.

Commerce Clearing House also sold property higher up the hill for development of 110 town houses by Inland Steel Development Corporation of Madison, Wisc. Project manager for Inland Steel is Ivan Glover of Sausalito, who said the first phase construction will be 12 units of luxury town houses plus recreation building and swimming pool.

Glover said groundbreaking is expected in late September or October, and completion of the first 12 units will be early next year.

Artisan Plaza In San Anselmo

Particia Barbara and her son Tony Barbera of Sleepy Hollow remodeled the 18,000-square-foot building, both inside and out.

Decoarted in an outdoor motif, the shops are set among two groves of living redwood trees and a gazebo.

Here are the shops in Artisan Plaza:

Petals and Pods Flower Shop — Owner is Mrs. Bobbi Lorentzen of Santa Rosa, who took formal training as a designer in a florist shop in Hampton, Va. She has been a florist in Petaluma for the past two years. Her specialities are terrariums, dried and artificial arrangements as well as fresh floral arrangements.

Bow-Arts Shoppe — Owners and operators are Warren and Katherine Bowden. Their principal business is decoupage, but they also have a selection of other gift items including handmade Christmas ornaments. Decoupage is a 17th century European art of cutting out prints, designing them on objects, and burying them under at least 30 coats of varnish.

Their shop is also their studio where they do their work as well as display. The have decoupage on furniture, lamps, trays, boxes and plaques.

Pax — It is owned and operated by artist Pat Mallory, who has been working almost exclusively in batik for three years. At this time, her work primarily explores hidden landscapes expressing togetherness, loneliness, isolation, and abounding joy.

The Wickery — Owned and operated by Pat Kennedy, the shop specializes in both Victorian and contemporary wicker and accessories. For the opening, she will display a large 19th Century wicker chaise lounge with ashtray and drink receptacles.

Sumner Art Gallery — Artist Sumner George Anderson owns and operates this gallery. A Mill Valley resident, he is known for his "nature in motion" studies. Anderson designed the commemorating medallion that was chosen to represent San Francisco's Golden Gate Park centennial anniversary. His paintings are currently displayed in galleries in Mill Valley, Tiburon and Ghirardelli Square.

Unique Antiques — Owned and operated by Patricia Barbera, Unique specializes in Victorian furniture and decorator items. Displayed are a pair of hand-carved Dentzel carousel horses, a real 114-year-old stuffed lion, an antique two-seat buggy, and an antique sleigh.

Artists currently showing at the Artisan Plaza are David L. Auerbach, who has paintings, sculptures and frescos; Donna Bell, who specializes in weaving; and George H. Johansen of Fairfax, whose medium is primarily acrylics.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Utility Issues Offer Capital Protection

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. We hold 200 Public Service Electric & Gas (NYSE) common, bought way back at $27.50. Also we hold 34 of the preferred. Should we continue to hold these stocks as we are long retired? Those shares never go up like other stocks. — T.K.

A. Utility issues as a group have failed to keep pace with stocks in other industries, and the gap between them has been spreading since early 1971. Behind the declining multiples which investors have accorded utility stocks, is the growing conviction that their growth rate has been seriously curtailed by the massive debt burdens carried by the industry. As a whole, utilities are currently selling on a yield basis in a manner similar to such fixed income securities as bonds. A further problem which has long plagued the industry is strict rate regulation and the unwillingness of most regulating agencies to grant much-needed increases. Public Service E & G is a case in point. In March, 1970, the company filed a request for $72 million in increases, nine months later $41 million was granted on an interim basis. Not until March (two years later) did the New Jersey PSC see fit to add another $24 million to the rate adjustment; this was still $7 million below the amount judged necessary two years and about 10 per cent worth of inflation earlier.

Because of a rights offering on a one-for-nine share basis, per-share earnings comparisons for the twelve months ended June showed a 12 per cent year-to-year decline. Total revenues were up 12 per cent, however, due in good measure to the rate adjustment. A 2c-a-share increase in the quarterly dividend rate, the first boost in 3½ years, was paid in June. Shares have considerable appeal for capital protection.

WHAT GLITTERS MAY NOT BE GOLD, BUT FUN

Gold Medal For DeMont In Olympics

Lad Wins 400 Free Swim Race

MUNICH (UPI) — Rick DeMont of Terra Linda, a young lad who swam in the 400-meter freestyle event at the Olympic trials just to get ready for his specialty, the 1,500 meters, today won an Olympic gold medal in the 400-meter event.

The 16-year-old DeMont, still with another year to go at Terra Linda High School, edged Brad Cooper of Australia by one one-hundredth of a second to win the race in Olympic record time.

DeMont overtook Cooper on the final leg and just did edge him at the final touch in a time of 4:00.26. Cooper, who had set the previous Olympic record of 4:04.6 in this morning's preliminaries, was caught by the electronic clock in 4:00.27.

DeMont's performance shattered the Olympic record of 4:09.0 set 1968 in Mexico City by Mike Burton. He missed the world record by 15 hundredths of a second. The record of 4:00.11 was set at the Chicago trials by Kurt Krumpholz of UCLA during one of the heats. Krumpholz failed to make the Olympic team when he was sixth in the finals.

The youngest male member of the U.S. team, DeMont wasn't expected to score this well in the 400 meters since his specialty is the longer 1,500, the metric mile. His best chance for a gold medal was to be in the longer race, trials scheduled Sunday and the finals Monday.

RICK DeMONT
Unexpected gold

At the trials in Chicago, DeMont surprised the swimming experts by finishing second in the 400-meter freestyle, lowering his best time from 4:06.0 to 4:01.2. He won the 1500 meters there with a time of 15:52.91, breaking the old world record of 15:57.1. His previous best had been 16:03.5. The decision to swim the 400-meter event at the trials was made by DeMont and his coach, Don Swartz, just the night before the event.

For the U.S., at least, DeMont's split second victory today balanced the scales after Tim McKee had lost out on the gold medal in last night's 400-

BESIEGED EMPIRE: THE PATRICK STORY

Suits And Countersuits

By DAVID DIETZ
(Last of four articles)

Amid a blizzard of suits and countersuits, William Penn Patrick's empire is entangled in what is virtually a nationwide legal fray that shows no sign of conclusion.

Indeed, there are signs that authorities may step up their assault.

From Marin to New York, the Patrick conglomerate is under attack by the federal and state governments. In some cases, he has counterattacked with his own lawsuits, claiming malicious prosecution and abuse of governmental process.

And he vows to keep operating as usual. "I'm fighting a battle for the unborn . . . this is a battle for real freedom — to do your own thing and do it honestly," he says.

So assured of success is Patrick, moreover, that he says his empire, growing around the world, will be worth $1 billion in five years. He has placed the current value at $150 million.

While authorities have kept Patrick busy, so have dissatisfied clients of a Patrick project called Leadership Dynamics Institute. Not a pyramid company, it was at first established as a motivational training program for sales people in the empire.

Up to $1,000 is charged for a four-day "seminar" which several clients charged in lawsuits included slappings, forced nudity and other bizarre experiences.

It has been offered to the public but still draws largely on Patrick sales people and their families.

LDI has an affiliate for youth, a training and fitness program conducted at the Patrick empire's 2,600-acre ranch near Lakeport. It was in its first year of operation this summer when Kimberly Ann Allen of Bel Marin Keys, 15-year-old daughter of a Holiday Magic vice president, collapsed on a survival hike several weeks ago. She died later in a hospital from complications arising from heat exhaustion.

A 12-year-old companion was hospitalized the same day, but the Lake County sheriff's office has closed the cases, saying there is no suspicion of foul play.

Numerous suits have been filed against LDI by people claiming to have been beaten, compelled to perform unnatural sex acts and placed in coffins and on crosses. The most recent action was by two Wisconsin women seeking $250 million in damages for mental and physical suffering.

Four earlier suits, including one by an Ohio accountant for $2 million, have been settled out of court. The accountant, Richard E. Shafer, received $40,000, while the three other actions each were settled for $25,000.

Although it has been operating since 1970, when the first class was conducted in Atlanta, LDI recently stirred worldwide controversy and interest as a result of an investigation by a London Daily Mail reporter who attended one of the seminars.

"I and others were punched, kicked, vilified in gutter language, doused with jugs of ice and water — and told it would help us become business tycoons," the reporter wrote in a series that stirred England's Parliament.

Schafer had said in a deposition he was accused of being a homosexual, forced to wear women's clothes and that a Tampax was forced into his rectum.

Patrick, who originated the course with Ben Gay III, former Holiday Magic president, stoutly defends it. The purpose is to force people to erase their "self-pity, guilt feelings and hatreds," he said.

He added, "We do have some weird forms of motivation, but anybody can take anything out of context and make it evil . . . They say we are sadists and that pisses me off."

"I found out what it means to care for, respect and love myself and others," said a Stamford, Conn., man in one letter.

Gay said the original idea was to "teach leadership" with a profit motive in mind. (Patrick told the I-J that up to 3,000 persons have taken the course.)

Gay, former LDI president who led numerous seminars, told of accidents in which he suffered two chipped teeth and

Plane Crash Kills Petaluma Woman

The Nelsons — parents of four children — lay undiscovered in the plane wreckage all night following the 9:30 p.m. crash, while searchers combed an area miles away.

Sonoma county sheriff's deputies said the couple took off in a rented Piper Cherokee 180 aircraft from Petaluma Skyranch Airport at 7:30 p.m. They flew to Napa for dinner, and were apparently trying to find the airport in heavy fog when the plane crashed.

Police received five calls from residents of the area who reported hearing what sounded like an airplane crash, but the search was concentrated in the wrong area.

A deputy found the wreckage at 7 a.m. today and said Mrs. Nelson appeared to have been dead for several hours.

The deputy said Nelson was conscious although his head was bleeding profusely. Nelson was in surgery at Hillcrest Hospital, Petaluma this morning where he was reported in "fair" condition, with severe head lacerations, and a possible broken wrist.

A hospital spokesman said it was "a miracle he's alive" after the crash.

Fischer's Lifelong Chess Goal Realized

REYKJAVIK (UPI)—Bobby Fischer, whose bold style and capricious temperament forced the world to take a new look at the ancient game of chess, realized his lifetime goal of becoming the first official American world chess champion today. in an anti-climactic telephoned resignation from Russia's Boris Spassky in the 21st game.

Spassky called arbiter Lothar Schmid to resign less than two hours before the scheduled resumption of the 21st game which was adjourned in Fischer's favor after 40 moves Thursday. The Russian grandmaster had spent the night analyzing the game in futile search of a way to save a draw and his title.

Still to be resolved, however, was the $1.75 million breach of contract lawsuit filed by movie producer Chester Fox against Fischer, whose protests prevented cameras from filming the games.

Schmid and International Chess Federation President Max Euwe, the last non-Russian to hold the championship, hastily arranged a coronation ceremony in the playing hall.

They raced to Fischer's hotel to tell him he was the new world champion. Fischer asked for confirmation of his victory in writing from Spassky.

With the pieces still on the chessboard from last night, Schmid returned to his desk and waited. Fischer charged in 16 minutes late.

The Last Big Fling Of Summer

With two major events in the spotlight, Marin will observe summer's last big fling this Labor Day weekend in an atmosphere of gaiety and pageantry.

The weekend's events are topped by the 27th annual Marin County Fair, which opened yesterday for a five-day run.

The fair, concluding Monday, is an extravaganza of flowers, arts and crafts, rides and shows sprawled around the Veterans

Holidays Will Bring A Short Work Week

For many public servants in Marin and Southern Sonoma, next week will have only three working days, thanks to Labor Day on Monday, and Admission Day observed the following Friday.

On the more widely observed Labor Day, city and county offices, banks, libraries, stores, and most businesses will close, and there will be no mail delivery.

Parking meters in San Rafael and Mill Valley will not operate Monday or Saturday, while meters in Sausalito will operate both holidays.

The Independent-Journal will publish on both days.

Meetings of official bodies scheduled for Labor Day have either been canceled or postponed. These are:

Alto Volunteer Firemen, to 8 p.m. Sept. 11.

Strawberry Recreation District, to 8 p.m. Tuesday

Belvedere City Council, to 8 p.m. Sept. 11.

Two More Candidates File For College Board

Two more candidates filed papers this morning for the November 7 election to two vacant seats on the Marin Community College District Board, the county elections department said today.

Their filings brought the total of definite candidates to eight, with only hours to go before the 5 o'clock deadline.

Meanwhile a ninth avowed candidate, Gregory C. Fearon of 62 Hillside Avenue, San Rafael, was engaged today in attempting to find someone to cosign a note to borrow the $400 needed to put his qualification statement on the sample ballot.

Fearon, a College of Marin student and former student body president, has appealed to the State Supreme Court a prepayment requirement for the statement.

Fearon said he would file candidacy papers before 5 p.m. with or without the $400.

Turtle is an administrator for Marin County Schools and the Family Therapy Institute of Marin. He is a trustee for Marin Open House, a community drug treatment program in San Rafael, and on the executive committee of Festival Theatre Foundation, San Anselmo.

He is a member of the Marvelous Marin Breakfast Club, Marin Alternative and Common Cause.

Balmy Weather For Labor Day Weekend

The recent balmy-to-warm weather that Marin and other Bay Area outdoor fans have been enjoying most of each day will probably continue throughout the Labor Day weekend holiday, according to the weatherman.

Daytime highs — in the 60s at Marin and other beaches and ranging to the mid-80s inland — will be bracketed as usual by morning and evening by fog or low clouds.

Attorney Seeks Seat On Marin Hospital Board

A Larkspur attorney, Martin E. Barrett of 324 Wilson Way, today filed candidacy papers for the Nov. 7 election for one of two seats on the Marin Hospital District Board, the county elections department reported.

His filing ensures at least something of a fight in the election — only the two incumbents, George E. Croke and Dr. Bradford Simmons, had so far filed.

Barrett, 39, was unavailable for biographical information this morning.

Both vacancies on the hospital district board are for four year terms. Deadline for filing was 5 p.m. today.

Federal Pay Hikes Delayed

WASHINGTON (UPI)—As an anti-inflation move, President Nixon has deferred for three months federal pay raises for 3.6 million military and civilian employes.

Nixon said the pay increases would violate the guidelines of his economic stabilization plan since federal employes received raises of 5.5 per cent Jan. 1. He deferred the increases due Oct. 1 until Jan. 1, 1973.

On other economic fronts Thursday, Treasury Secretary George P. Shultz and Commerce Secretary Peter G. Peterson criticized Sen. George McGovern's proposals for tax reforms and defense spending cuts.

Peterson said in a statement that McGovern's plan to trim $30 billion from the defense budget was "simplistic."

Shultz told a news conference that the stock market and business investment would be hurt if McGovern became president and imposed his plans to tax capital gains—income from stocks, bonds and other fixed assets—at the rate of ordinary income.

The first $100 of capital gains income is tax free and of the balance only 50 per cent is subject to federal income tax.

Two of McGovern's top advisers responded to Shultz' charges at another news conference.

"The effect of tax rates on investment is, in my opinion, very small," said Joseph Pechman of the Brookings Institution and a member of McGovern's economic advisory staff.

Ted Van Dyk, head of McGovern's issues team, said the Democratic campaign staff had asked ABC, CBS and NBC for free time on television next week for a Nixon-McGovern debate on the economy.

The White House isssed the text of Nixon's message to Congress about federal pay. The President was in Hawaii when it was released.

Nixon's action was expected since he had said last December when he approved the pay increases that he would postpone the October adjustments.

The pay hikes were scheduled to take effect Oct. 1 under a provision of the 1970 Comparability Act to equalize pay of government and non-government workers doing similar jobs.

Dayan States Peace Possible With Egypt

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Defense Minister Moshe Dayan said Thursday night Israel can come to terms with Egypt on a partial peace agreement but not with Jordan unless King Hussein softens his stance.

Dayan said Egypt wants Israel to withdraw from the east bank of the Suez Canal— and Israel is willing to do so, but it is not willing to vacate the West Bank of Jordon and East Jerusalem, as the Jordanian king wants.

In Beirut, the newspaper An Nahar reported the Soviet Union is seeking to establish a united Arab front which will embrace Syria, Iraq, and the Palestinian resistance movement to counter increased American influence in other parts of the Arab world.

The newspaper quoted "circles close to Soviet sources" in Beirut for its report.

An Nahar said this was one of the reasons Kremlin leaders dispatched a special envoy to Damascus with an "important" message to President Hafez Assad of Syria.

In other Mideast developments, a delegation from the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist party will visit Cairo soon to assess the future of Russo-Egyptian relations, according to diplomatic reports reaching London. Sources said there were uncertainties in the committee and in the ruling circles of the Soviet East European allies, on party chief Leonid I. Brezhnev's explanation of Russia's pullout from Cairo.

The Beirut newspaper Al Anwar today quoted Syrian Economic Minister Mustafa Hallaj as calling for an Arab boycott of American economic interests. The paper said that during a Beirut meeting with Lebanese and Egyptian economy ministers, Hallaj asked for "an embargo on all American interests in Arab countries including petroleum trade, investment, banks and security companies."

In Cairo, Ahmed Khatib, the Prime Minister of the Federation of Arab Republics, said today the presidents of Egypt, Syria and Libya will meet in the Egyptian capital in October to discuss the liberation of Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

Dayan, speaking to foreign students in Tel Aviv, said "I think the Egyptians want us to withdraw (from the Suez Canal) and I think we should not insist on staying."

"The question is the framework—the kind of agreement about this withdrawal--and I think such an agreement can be reached," he said.

"The (Sinai) desert can serve as a buffer between us," he said.

As for Jordan, he said, King Hussein would make peace with Israel only if Israel withdraws from the occupied West Bank of Jordan, including East Jerusalem.

Dayan said Hussein's stance was "unacceptable."

"If I have to choose between peace with full withdrawal or no peace but we stay where we are, I would choose no peace," he said, adding:

"We should control the West Bank, and the Arabs there should stay Jordanian citizens and maintain close contact with Amman. This goes for the Gaza Strip as well...

"I want Jews to have the right to settle in Judea and Samaria (the West Bank), everywhere in Judea and Samaria."

Eagleton Says Clark Not Duped

CARBONDALE, Ill. (UPI)—Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., said Thursday night he doesn't think Ramsey Clark "was duped" on his recent trip to North Vietnam, but believed the former attorney general made an "improper trip."

Eagleton, subbing for Democratic vice presidential nominee Sargent Shriver—the man who replaced him on the ticket— also said it would have been preferable if Pierre Salinger had not made his trip to Paris on Sen. George McGovern's behalf.

"I don't think Ramsey Clark was duped," Eagleton said while here for a campaign fundraising dinner for Democratic gubernatorial nominee Daniel Walker. "He made an improper trip at an improper time."

Shriver was invited to the dinner, but had to cancel his appearance because of a strategy session in Washington with McGovern.

The Missouri senator said, "I think it would have been better if those trips had not been made"—referring to the trips by Salinger and Clark.

Pressed to explain what he meant by the statement, Eagleton said, "It's self explanatory." He added, however, that he did not think the trips abroad have hurt the Democratic nominee's chance of getting elected in November.

"I think the campaign is in better shape at this juncture than it was after the August, 1968 convention in Chicago," Eagleton said.

Salinger, press aide to former presidents Johnson and John F. Kennedy, met with the North Vietnamese delegation in Paris on McGovern's behalf.

Meany Lashes Out At Nixon, McGovern

WASHINGTON (UPI)—AFLCIO President George Meany charged in a Labor Day statement today the administration has held down wages while allowing prices and profits to "skyrocket."

The leader of 13.6 million union members said President Nixon's economic policies amounted to a "double standard" which labor would not accept.

But Meany refused to relent in his hostility to Democratic presidential candidate George S. McGovern. He said the AFLCIO would concentrate upon electing a "Congress that is friendly to the interests of working people regardless of who occupies the White House over the next four years."

And although Meany did not mention MVovern by name, he said working people were not about to be "shunted aside in the interest of any privileged elite."

"They will not blindly support those who assault their most deeply held values, demean their intelligence, scorn their organizations, laugh at their patriotism or sneer at their way of life," Meany said.

Meany's statement attacked Nixon's economic and other domestic policies but was not as sharp in its criticism as the statement he issued for Labor Day, 1971. In that statement, he attacked Nixon by name.

Meany faulted the administration for unemployment, saying it was "a tragic human waste" for 5 million Americans to be unemployed. He said economic controls should be "equitable and across the board."

"Wages have been held down, but prices and profits have been allowed to skyrocket," Meany said. "Employers, naturally, are only too happy to police wage controls—but no effective machinery was ever set up to keep prices in check."

He said prices and profits and other forms of income should be controlled as wages are controlled or the entire controls program should be abolished.

Other union leaders and Labor Secretary James D. Hodgson also weighed in with statements in advance of the national holiday Monday:

—Hodgson, the administration spokesman, said American workers had made "impressive economic and social gains" since Labor Day, 1971. He said the rate of inflation was down, employment up, unemployment down and productivity and purchasing power of average wages up. He said manpower programs had been improved by his department and a new job safety law had been implemented further, adding that the administration looked forward "to even greater achievements."

—Steel Workers President I. W. Abel said U.S. workers were "living in a split-level economy." He said the "rich are getting richer, middle income people are squeezed, conditions grow even worse for those in the lowest income bracket."

—The National Labor Committee for McGovern-Shriver, an organization that supports the Democratic ticket in opposition to Meany's no endorsement policy, said that "when you go shopping you're lucky to get 80 cents worth for your dollar. While prices and company profits keep climxing, there's a lid on wages and salaries."

—Communications Workers President Joseph A. Beirne, who also is secretary-treasurer of the McGovern-Shriver labor committee, said he anticipated the administration would be putting out "half truths, deceptions, and outright lies" designed to convince workers that things had improved for them. "But the plain fact is, and it is becoming clearer each day, that the Nixon administration is the creature and the servantof big business," Beirne said.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

New Assignment

SPACE CENTER, Houston (UPI) — Alfred M. Worden, the last remaining spaceman among three who were reprimanded for taking unauthorized stamped envelopes on the Apollo 15 flight to the moon, has been ordered out of the astronaut corps.

Worden was transferred to California where he will work as a research engineer and test pilot in a scientific outpost within the space program, the space agency announced yesterday.

Worden and Apollo 15 crewmates David R. Scott and James B. Irwin began their moon journey July 26, 1971, the fourth manned lunar flight and the first to the Hadley Rille and Appennine Mountains.

But they were later reprimanded by NASA for taking 400 unauthorized envelopes with them on the mission. Stamped with commemorative space postage and postmarked Cape Kennedy, some of the envelopes were later sold by a West German stamp dealer for $1,500 each.

LONDON (UPI) — The government today ordered Home Secretary Robert Carr back from vacation to deal with a growing crisis in Britain over an expected influx of up to 50,000 Asians from Uganda.

The Home Office said Carr, currently vacationing on the Greek island of Corfu, will return home tomorrow.

Drug Ring Broken

CARACAS (UPI) — Drug authorities have broken up an international narcotics ring with the arrest of a Cuban, a Frenchman and a Venezuelan and the seizure of $4.5 million worth of cocaine, police said yesterday.

A spokesman said the ring was based in Europe and operated extensively throughout Latin America and the United States.

Police said the three men arrived four days ago from Madrid and were watched for three days by Venezuelan narcotics detectives and agents from the international police agency, Interpol.

Surprise Visit

VATICAN CITY (UPI) — Bells rang throughout Venice today as the Vatican announced that Pope Paul VI will visit that northern city during his trip to the eucharistic congress in Udine.

The trip to Udine Sept. 16 to attend the 18th Italian eucharistic congress, had long been predicted. The Pope will say mass at the conference.

The stop in Venice, to pray at the tomb of St. Mark, was a surprise which caused all Venice churches to ring their bells in celebration when it was announced.

Beaten Youth Dies; Father Is Charged

CHICAGO (UPI)— Johnny Lindquist never got back to the small Wisconsin farm and the lake where he first caught a fish. The battered 7-year-old died Thursday in a West Side hospital.

He had been unconscious since July 28 from a beating he received after he was taken from the foster home in Wisconsin and returned to his natural parents.

Johnny, who had spent most of his life in foster homes, had been living with Mr. and Mrs. Robert Karvanek, Tigerton, Wis., for almost four years when a court order forced him to return to his natural parents in Chicago.

"When his parents wanted him back, I knew he had to go. I tried to make it easy. I told him John, you have to go back, your father loves you. But he ran to the top of the stairs and cried," Mrs. Karvanek said.

"He said 'I'm never going back.' At night he'd pray, 'please God, don't let them take me back'."

But in late March the Karvaneks drove Johnny back into the city. "We never saw him again until after the beating. He looked so small in the hospital. All bruises and so thin. But I still had hope. I thought it would work out and he'd come back home to the farm. I was vowing to fatten him up," she said softly.

Johnny was beaten July 28 after he said he wanted to go home to the Karvaneks, police said. He was taken to St. Anne's Hospital in a coma. Doctors performed emergency surgery for severe brain damage.

After he was admitted, Johnny's two brothers and two sisters were placed in foster homes. The move was ordered after one of his sisters, Julie, 2, was injured when she fell from a window in the Lindquist apartment. Her mother was not home.

The Lindquists were barred from visiting Johnny at the hospital. Mrs. Karvanek, who has no children of her own, came daily to sit with Johnny. "I talked to him all the time about the farm. They told me hearing is the last sense to go. Sometimes I thought he almost smiled at me. I don't know if he ever heard me," Mrs. Karvanek said quietly.

"Johnny was a good son. He was 3 when he came to live with us. It seemed he was always there. Johnny loved that farm. He loved to fish with Robert (the Karvanek's other foster son). He loved baseball. He could hit every ball.

"He was a good kid. Respectful. We were so proud of him. I don't think I ever saw a kid so good. No, I'm not saying he was perfect. He was a boy, but a good boy.

Protection Plan Wins Approval

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The federal Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has approved a comprehensive plan to clean up California's ocean waters and prevent their pollution by sewage, mercury and DDT.

The new, stringent standards are designed to make the waters pure enough to swim safely anywhere along the coast up to 1,000 feet out to sea and 30 feet under the water.

The state Water Resources Control Board, which developed the lan over an 18-month period, estimated that $870 million would be required for construction of sewage treatment and other pollution control facilities.

Most of the sum will be borne by local governments with private industry carrying $100 million of the burden.

"This plan greatly strengthens California's water quality standards and has set a precedent for far-sighted standards development," Paul DeFalco Jr., regional EPA director, said in a letter to Gov. Ronald Reagan.

"The ocean plan will prove to be of great value in conserving the high quality of coastal waters for future generations of Californians," DeFalco said.

Currently, 55 municipal plants and 34 industries each day dump more than 1.2 billion gallons of waste into the ocean, about 30 per cent of the national total, the state water board said.

The new standards require secondary treatment of sewage before it can be pumped into the ocean. Municipalities may apply for state and federal aid to pay for up to 80 per cent of the cost of new facilities.

About 85 to 95 per cent of substances such as arsenic, mercury and DDT will be required to be removed from waste with no variances permitted.

Barred outright will be discharges of high-level radioactive waste, radiological chemicals, biological warfare agents and municipal industrial sludge.

The new standards will be phased in beginning next year. Enforcement will be up to the state. EPA approval of the new plan was announced Thursday.

Probation Given For Sex Offense

Curtis Phillip Wall, 63, of Novato, yesterday was declared by a Marin Superior Court judge not to be a sex offender who should be hospitalized.

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner made the decision after reviewing reports by three doctors who declared Wall did not need treatment.

The judge then placed Wall on probation for five years and sent him to jail for 30 days.

Japan-U.S. Talks Wind Up Today

HONOLULU (UPI) — President Nixon wound up his meetings with Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka today, assured that Japan's warming to Red China would not affect U.S. Pacific bases, and steps would be taken to correct trade deficits.

A joint statement, to be issued following the final session between the two leaders, was said to contain agreement by Japan to increase purchases of U.S. goods by $1.1 billion within a year and a pledge to take longer-range action to increase American imports.

The two scheduled a final, wind-up session before Nixon presides over a change of command ceremony at the headquarters of U.S. forces in the Pacific and heads back to the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif.

White House Press Secretary Ronald Ziegler told newsmen Nixon was assured during the initial three-hour meeting with Tanaka that Japanese moves toward establishing diplomatic relations with Peking would not affect current defense commitments.

Japan and the United States are jointly committed to the defense of Taiwan, and concern has been expressed in some quarters that the move by Japan to establish diplomatic relations with Peking would force them to abandon their treaty obligations to the Chinese mainland regime's arch-enemy.

This would affect the U.S. military bases in Japan and Okinawa which are considered vital facilities both for the defense of Taiwan and for prosecuting the war in Vietnam.

But a compromise apparently was agreed on by which Japan generally reaffirmed its commitment to the existing defense alignment without specifically referring to Taiwan or Vietnam.

"We are satisfied that Japan will not act in any way adverse to our mutual interests," Ziegler said. "We are confident that nothing they will do will affect the mutual security treaty."

He said agreement had been reached to continue close consultation as both nations move to improve their relationships with China. He also said Tanaka had accepted an invitation to make a formal visit to Washington sometime early next year.

Douglas James Schuler, 19, who has been charged in Marin Municipal Court with possessing stolen property, told the Independent-Journal the rifle belonged to a friend who was in the car and that the weapon had been in his (Schuler's) possession for more than a year until the friend took it back recently.

Schuler lives at 545 Olive Avenue.

who had come thinking they would see chess, burst into wild applause and shouted, "Bobby, Bobby."

Fischer, who learned the game at the age of six and vowed at nine he would be the world champion, looked shy for the first time in the marathon duel and quietly toyed with his fountain pen.

Schmid moved forward to the edge of the stage and announced:

"Ladies and gentlemen, Mr. Spassky resigned game 21 by telephone to me at 12:50 p.m. This is a legal way to resign. Mr. Fischer has won the 21st game and is winner of the world championship match."

The crowd again went wild, standing in the seats, shouting, cheering, stomping. Fischer looked out at the crowd, then down at his feet, walked over to sign his scoresheet and almost ran out.

Fischer, whose 24-hour Sabbath began at sundown, returned to his hotel and closed himself in his room.

Euwe said Spassky realized the game was lost because he had sealed the wrong 41st move at adjournment Thursday night. Russian sources said the champion had sealed his bishop up to queen seven.

"He should have played king to rook three and he would have got an easy draw," Euwe said. "Fischer is a worthy world champion but I hope he will give Spassky the return match he deserves."

Russian chess sources said Spassky was not concerned or upset. "He went out together with (his seconds Eyfim) Geller and (Nikolai) Krogius."

Schmid smiled broadly and said after the brief ceremony, "Well, thank heavens its over. I had a notion Spassky might call me."

"He called me personally and told me he wanted to resign which is the correct way to do it," Schmid said. "I think his position was hopeless but there was no trace in his voice that he was depressed."

Incumbents File For Board Posts

With the deadline for filing for the Nov. 7 election just hours away, two incumbents on the Strawberry Recreation District board were the only persons who had filed by midday today for two seats on the board.

The county elections department reported that candidacy papers had been returned by Jane Brown and Manuel K. Lehua.

Lehua, 50, of 226 Reed Circle, is seeking a second term on the board, having first been elected in 1968. He is a fireman with the San Francisco Fire Department.

Mrs. Brown, a housewife, who lives at 140 Richardson Drive, was appointed to the recreation district several months ago to fill a seat vacated by the resignation of director James K. Garner.

Deadline for filing is 5 p.m. today.

Anonymous Tip Leads To Capture

An anonymous tip led San Rafael police today to the capture of a San Quentin inmate who failed to return to the prison Tuesday evening after being temporarily released to look for work.

Police were watching all entrances to San Rafael from Highway 101 this morning on a tip that James N. Litteral 26, was heading toward the city in a green mustang.

Litteral, accompanied by Charmaine Marie Payne, 18, was spotted at 2 a.m. as he left Highway 101 at the San Quentin Y overpass. He was followed to the parking lot of the Bermuda Palms motel where he was stopped and asked to identify himself.

According to police, Litteral first gave his name as Ron Hubbard but a tatoo on his arm gave him away.

Police reported that a hunting knife with a 10 inch blade, and six 12-guage shotgun shells were found in the Mustang.

Litteral, who was due for parole Nov. 2 after serving five years of a six-months to 15-year sentence for second-degree burglary, was returned to San Quentin.

His companion was not charged.

OBITUARIES

Emile J. Larrouy Dies At 72

Emile J. Larrouy, who endeared himself to scores of children while a custodian in the San Rafael school system, collapsed in a San Rafael store and was pronounced dead yesterday at Marin General Hospital.

The 72-year-old Larrouy, a popular man who worked at various schools, had retired in 1965 after 14 years service.

Born in Herre, Basque, Pyrennes, France, he was affectionately known as "Frenchy" to the students he watched come and go. On his 65th birthday prior to retirement, pupils at West End School, where he last worked, feted him.

He once said of the occasion, "When they see me, they say, 'Happy Birthday, Mr. Frenchy,' and they give me a big stack of cards."

Larroy, who lived at 5 Dolores Street, San Rafael, came to San Rafael 46 years ago. He worked for laundries and at the Elks Club as a custodian before going to work for the city school system.

Upon retiring from his school job, Larroy worked at small custodial and maintenance jobs.

He held honorary membership in the San Rafael Parent-Teacher Association.

Larrouy is survived by his wife, Elise; three daughters, Lucy (Vickie) Pedroli and Valerie Henry of San Rafael and Helen Neal of Petaluma; seven grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Mass of the Resurrection will be celebrated at 10 a.m. tomorrow at St. Raphael's Church. Rosary is to be recited at 8 p.m. at Harry M. Williams Mortuary, San Rafael. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Constributions may be made to the American Cancer Society or to any charity.

broken ribs, but said he defends the motivational aspect of the program.

So sincere was his support, Gay said, that his wedding present to his sister was four days at LDI. "It's a tremendous experience," he said.

But Gay said the program has changed of late, and he doesn't like it. The money-making aspect, he says, is emphasized more than the development of leadership.

Holiday Magic, meanwhile, is or has been the target of state actions in Arkansas, California, Illinois, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan and Minnesota, according to a February 1972 report of the Council of Better Business Bureaus.

Patrick, according to the report, has won or at least stalled further action in Arkansas and Illinois (where he has countered with a $45 million action), while in Maryland, Holiday Magic has changed its marketing plan to conform with state securities laws.

In addition to Illinois, Patrick said he is planning suits against the national Better Business Bureau growing out of what he calls an unobjective, self-serving approach by the organization.

In California, where suits now are pending against Sta-Power and Alexander Taylor Inc., Holiday Magic was enjoined in 1967 from making false or misleading statements in connection with recruitment of distributors; required to limit sale of distributorships, and ordered to pay a civil penalty of $35,000.

In response to an I-J inquiry, Herschel Elkins, chief of consumer fraud in the state attorney general's office, said he didn't know at present if Holiday Magic was in compliance with the recruitment requirements.

Elkins said that, although it's entitled to under the court order, his office hadn't checked Holiday Magic's books in four years. A report on operations was received some time ago from the company, indicating nothing was awry, he added.

Of the actions pending against the two Patrick companies in California, the Alexander Taylor matter is closest to decision. The state, seeking a preliminary injunction against the company in Marin Superior Court, says agreements between distributors and the company come under the state's franchise investment law, meaning that a prospective recruit should be supplied with full and accurate financial information about what he is getting into.

The suit also claims that Alexander Taylor is an "endless chain" as defined in the state penal code — a statute, incidentally, passed by the Legislature as a result of the 1967 Holiday Magic judgment.

The company argues that its distributors are independent contractors, meaning there is no franchise relation. On the endless chain complaint, the firm says it is "insulated against saturation" of the market because of the provision there may be no more than one consultant or senior consultant for every 12,500 persons.

The Sta-Power action, pending in Marin as well, is based on similar points.

(The state attorney general, meanwhile, has gained injunctions against the Glenn W. Turner pyramid empire, while Bestline products last year agreed to a court judgment that places more stress on product sales and requires the firm to furnish earning statements to prospective participants.

(Patrick resents any association with Turner, a former Holiday Magic distributor. He said Turner "copied part" of the Holiday Magic marketing program and "turned it around" into an "irresponsible" scheme.)

At the federal level, the Federal Trade Commission is conducting a series of nationwide hearings into Holiday Magic. The FTC claims the firm has misrepresented potential earnings to prospective distributors, misrepresented the ease with which a person can supposedly build a distributorship and that it charges different prices to distributors who compete in product resale.

Patrick, who told the I-J the FTC is "spending tax money to put out propaganda which they have no way to prove," appeared when the hearings were convened in San Francisco last November. He took the Fifth Amendment when asked about his dealings with the company.

While the Securities and Exchange Commission hasn't yet moved against Patrick, it may do so. A commission spokesman in San Francisco noted that the SEC has filed suit in Oregon seeking to enjoin Turner's "Dare to be Great" organization from violating the registration and antifraud provisions of U.S. securities laws.

The SEC charges in the Oregon action that agreements between Dare to be Great and its distributors are really securities that must be registered with the federal government. What it means is that, similar to California's franchise investment law, pyramid companies "must present a fair picture of opportunities and risks," the spokesman said.

Meantime, the spokesman acknowledged that the commission was looking into another aspect of Holiday Magic, involving allegedly unreported transfer of unregistered stock in the cosmetic company's Mexican operation four years ago and again recently.

The I-J also has learned that legislation restricting operations of pyramid companies is to be introduced in Congress within a few weeks. Sen. Walter F. Mondale, D-Minn., has said he will author the measure, although its scope remains secret.

A spokesman in Mondale's office would describe it only as in the nature of a "felony criminal statute."

Meantime, Patrick, of whom Gay said, "Give him an idea and he'll have a corporation formed by noon," refuses to budge under the barrage. This, despite what a former associate says must be an outpouring of "unbelievable" legal fees.

Patrick says his programs are helping black people who wouldn't otherwise find business opportunities, noting that a black man is president of one of the pyramid companies, Ameriprise, dealing in home care products. Patrick says his system is "more sophisticated and more durable" than other marketing plans. And he says that "when my final epitaph is written, I know what it's gonna say, because I know what I stand for."

In an appraisal he might apply to his entire conglomerate today, Patrick once said:

"We are like the river that rushes down the mountain. If a large boulder, a tree or the side of the mountain gets in the way, it moves over or runs around it — definitely, forcefully and without stopping.

"There is no feeling in that river. It moves fast because it is in a hurry to get where it wants to go. And if you listen carefully, you will hear it sing a little song of happiness as it rushes along and leaves the obstacles behind.

"That is the spirit we feel in Holiday Magic. And you will find it all summed up in our slogan — 'Holiday Magic Loves You.'"

Nixon To Pin Medal On Retiring Admiral

HONOLULU (UPI) — Adm. John S. McCain Jr., retiring commander of U.S. Naval forces in the Pacific, receives the Distinguished Service Medal today from President Nixon. The 61-year-old admiral served as commander in the Pacific theater since July 31, 1968.

Adm. Noel Gayler, 57, takes over McCain's job of commanding the 85 million square mile Pacific military area, which extends from the West Coast of the Americas to the Indian Ocean and from the Aleutians to the area of the South Pole.

Many Cars Failing N.J. Smog Tests

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—Cars are flunking the nation's first state inspection test for pollution at almost twice the rate that was originally predicted.

The New Jersey Division of Motor Vehicles, which began testing autos for faulty exhaust systems July 5, said Thursday 18 per cent of the vehicles tested in the first month failed to meet the newly established emission standards.

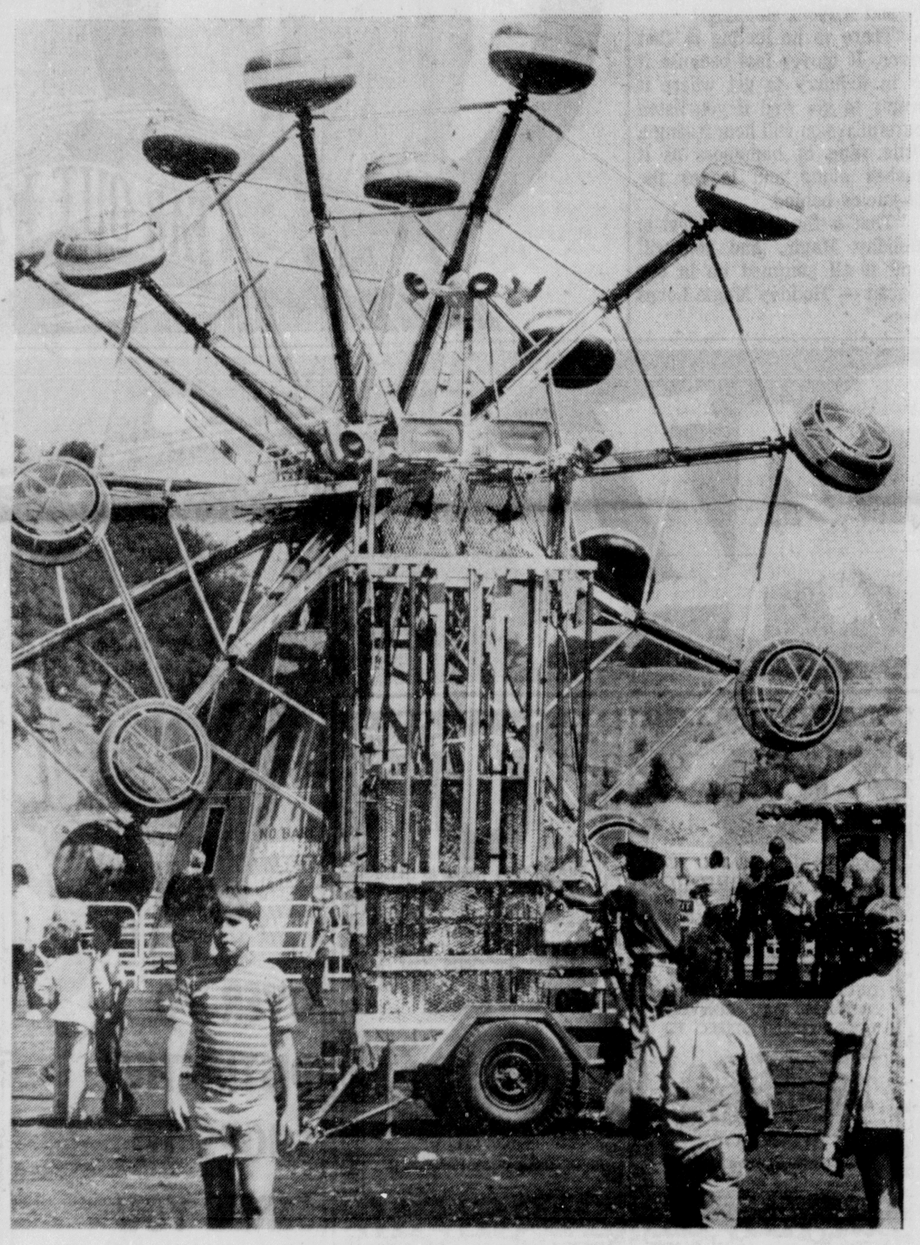
Fun's All There At The County Fair

JUDGE'S SCRUTINY — Framed by colorful flower displays, a smiling judge likes what she sees. These entries were ultimate winners in the arrangement competition, then left for county fair spectators to admire. The floral hall is a popular attraction each year.



'ROUND AND 'ROUND — For the youngsters, the county fair offers spinning, bumping, jostling rides, such as this device that sends fairgoers high over the Civic Center grounds in dizzying repetition. More rides are offered at this year's event.

WHOOOSH — With each hair-raising revolution, the thrills and chills mount for a group of youngsters sampling a ride on the fair's opening day. For many, it's hang on tight, close your eyes and hope for the best!

A NEW FIRE DEPARTMENT FOR FAIRFAX?

Plans prepared by architect Donald K. Olsen call for a new 5,500 square-foot fire department building (left) and expansion of the Fairfax police department-city hall offices (right) on the corner of Bolinas Avenue and Park Street. The city's present fire facility (outlined with dashes) at the Bolinas-Park intersection would be demolished except for rear portions which would accommodate police expansion. A police parking area with an entrance on Park Street (bottom shaded area) is also proposed. A new footbridge (top) would link the facility to Andy Peri Park. A public hearing on the proposal — estimated to cost about $230,000 — is scheduled for 8 p.m. Sept. 19 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Singing Protest Of Hotel Ouster

HONOLULU (UPI)—The convention of humanistic psychologists, ousted from the plush Kuilima Hotel by the summit conference of President Nixon and Japan Premier Tanaka, put on a singing protest Thursday.

A group of delegates strolled troubadour style through the press room of the Waikiki Sheraton Hotel singing softly, "All we are asking is give peace a chance."

Three military guards at the White House Press room at first blocked the demonstrators, but then decided to allow them to perform.

Stone Age Man 'Shadow' Shown

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Smithsonian Institution put on display today the "shadow" of an Old Stone Age hunter who died in Spain 30,000 years ago.

The grave of the hunter was found in a cave near Santander, Spain, in 1969. It was one of the handful of burial sites of Old Stone Age men discovered.

GOP Hopefuls Eyeing 1974 California Posts

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Republican politicians eyeing a 1974 race for California governor or the Senate have quietly agreed to stay off the running track until after the November election.

This doesn't mean they can't get into the starting blocks and wait, and many are doing just that.

But it does mean they have agreed to avoid any premature party bloodletting that might jeopardize President Nixon's chances of carrying his native state over Democrat George McGovern.

The pact was disclosed Thursday by presidential counselor Robert H. Finch and confirmed by other sources, including a key Nixon campaign official who asked not to be identified.

Finch, who resigned as California lieutenant governor in 1969 to become Nixon's first HEW secretary, is one of those eyeing a gubernatorial or Senate race. The 46-year-old Republican said he probably will decide by next June whether to run for one of the offices.

The agreement has been informally referred to as "The Mitchell Edict" because it was first suggested by former Nixon campaign chief John N. Mitchell at a meeting last October of leading California Republicans and potential 1974 candidates.

Basically, the agreement does not forbid potential 1974 candidates--such as Finch, Controller Houston I. Flournoy, Lt. Gov. Ed Reinecke, Attorney General Evelle J. Younger or Gov. Ronald Reagan—from engaging in normal politicking, such as public speech making.

But it does refrain them from lining up private support among party leaders, strengthening campaign organizations and soliciting commitments for financial contributions.

"We have kind of an agreement among Republican would-be candidates, including the governor, that we'll avoid any warfare or jockeying around until after we get this job done," Finch told the Sacramento Rotary Coub in reply to a question about his own political future.

Finch said he intends to campaign in 32 states for Nixon this fall, return to Southern California and begin practicing law late this year and then seriously consider the 1974 races.

Flournoy also told UPI, "Nobody's going to be doing anything to jeopardize the President's chances of carrying California. But once the election is over there will be a lot of options exercised. Then you begin to talk openly about running and try to get people to support you."

Finch said "what California does in 1974 will be critical" because as the nation's most populous state it "will dictate more about what happens (politically) in 1976 and beyond than any other state in the union."

Then, leaving little doubt about his own aspirations, Finch told the Rotarians: "I want to be part of that."

School Taxes Adopted By Marin Supervisors

The Marin County Board of Supervisors in a lightning session yesterday adopted Marin County school tax rates as well as a few in Southern Sonoma County which affect some Marin residents.

The board made no change in the tax rates as computed by Auditor-Controller Michael Mitchell and reported in Wednesday's Independent-Journal, according to assistant board clerk Francelle Warner.

The Marin County Board of Supervisors also:

NOVATO CREEK — Awarded a $8,578 bid to Joseph Giorgio and Sons for work on a retaining wall along Novato Creek.

STAFFORD LAKE — Applied for a federal grant to acquire the Leveroni property at Stafford Lake Park.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 9 a.m. Tuesday at the Civic Center.

Car Is Stolen

Redevelop Pact For Agency, Committee

A two-year agreement between the Marin County Redevelopment Agency and its project area committee — a community group formed to advise in redevelopment matters — was approved last night by the agency.

Under terms of the contract, the agency will pay the committee up to $45,000 over the two years in exchange for certain services, according to George H. Gnoss Jr., board chairman.

He said the committee's responsibilities will include assisting the agency in reviewing redevelopment proposals and helping developers to establish programs to provide job training and employment for community residents during redevelopment construction.

The group also must put out a newsletter informing residents on redevelopment matters, hold informational community meetings and bring resident opinion on redevelopment back to the agency.

Gnoss said the agency will oversee the committee's budget and expenditures.

Jail Sentence In Manslaughter

Judge Samuel W. Gardiner of Marin Superior Court yesterday placed Eric Ansley Van Horn, 21, of Mill Valley, on probation for five years and sent him to jail for six months for a misdemeanor charge of manslaughter.

Van Horn had earlier admitted he had been drunk when an accident occurred in which a friend was killed.

Van Horn was the driver of a pickup truck that went over an embankment on a Muir Woods road on March 25, killing a passenger, 19-year-old Eric Bryant Satterlie, also of Mill Valley.

Fair Winners Are Announced

This year's five-day fair, larger and more diversified, attracted 5,823 adults and children for the opening day compared to 4,086 last year.

Yesterdays crowd included 1,-913 adults, 1,033 persons aged 12 to 18, and 2,857 children under 12.

Opening day activities at the fair included the judging of horticulture and floriculture entries as well as the presentation of a larger carnival area boasting a ferris wheel, children's circus, funhouse, children's rides and a kiddie train.

The large professional gardens, an annual feature of the fair, also were unveiled, as were the juried art and photography shows in the auditorium exhibition hall.

A high point for youngsters will be turtle races scheduled for the outdoor stage at 11 a.m. tomorrow.

There will be 14 races, divided into two categories, with a trophy for the winner of each race. No entry fee is required, and children who do not own a turtle but who wish to participate may purchase an entry before the races begin.

Winners of yesterday's judging of horticulture and floriculture entries in the fair were:

Behr Supports Early Education

State Sen. Peter H. Behr yesterday carried a plea for restructuring of California's primary education to nearly 200 Marin school administrators.

Behr spoke on "Early Childhood Education — Life Begins at Four" at the fall luncheon of the Marin County School Administrators Association in the San Geronimo National Golf Club restaurant.

Quoting liberally from the report of State Supt. Wilson C. Riles's Task Force on Early Childhood Education, he urged that kindergarten and primary grades be restructured into an ungraded program staffed with parents and young people in addition to the teachers, to provide a ratio of one adult to every 10 pupils.

Such restructuring is the aim of Senate Bill 1302 by State Sen. Melvyn S. Dymally, D-Los Angeles, for which Behr made his pitch.

Dymally's bill also calls for starting children to school one year earlier than now — at the age of 4. The bill has passed both houses of the Legislature, but was amended in the Assembly. The start at 4 years old, Behr reported, was amended out.

The Marin senator opened his remarks by disclaiming expertese in education matters. Later, however, he denounced as "badly researched" an article in Phi Delta Kappan by Raymond Moore, professor of education at Andrews University in Michigan, which cited dangers of too-early schooling.

The drawbacks cited by Moore, said Behr, "simply do not apply" to Superintendent Riles's early education plan as embodied in Senator Dymally's bill.

Advocating schooling at 4 years, Senator Behr asserted: "It is impossible for any home to provide as much intellectual stimulation as the schoolroom."

He noted that Supt. Clifford W. Campbell of Dixie School District, president of the administrator group, had pointed out that spending on the additional year of school for 4-year-olds as set up in the bill "is only half as much as we spend on each kindergarten child in our district."

But, Behr said, the Assembly has deleted the 4-year-old pro-The bill is now back in the Senate to await concurrence in the Assembly amendments.

A high school principal raised the question of whether pouring additional state money into the early childhood program would deprive the schools of revenues for upper grades and high school.

Behr said he hoped it would not.

Mexican Flag Flies On Catalina Island

AVALON (UPI)—The flag of Mexico still flew over Catalina Island today and the "invaders" who came to claim it from the United States were still encamped on a hill overlooking Avalon.

They have become a tourist attraction.

The invaders—24 men and one woman—are members of the Brown Berets, a militant Mexican-American group. When they appeared on the holiday island off the coast of Southern California Wednesday, they claimed it as Mexican territory.

Wearing military style uniforms of green pants, khaki shirts, brown berets and ammunition belts—but no weapons—the group was mistaken for invading Mexican army troops when it first drew up in formation on the road between Avalon and the airport.

"This is Mexican territory," declared the leader of the group, David Sanchez, 26. "We are claiming all of the channel islands. They are all Mexican territory."

The "invaders" admit they have no connection with the Mexican government.

The Brown Berets argue that when the United States acquired Mexican territory after the Mexican-American war, the settlement covered land to the Pacific Ocean—so the islands offshore were not covered, and should still belong to Mexico.

The counterargument is that Mexico ceded California to the United States, and the islands were considered part of California.

The activists were given permission to stay and camp on the island.

Islanders, learning the group had no food or money, began bringing them lunches. Watermelon was donated for dinner their first night.

Tourists visiting the island drive up in rented jeeps to see the "Mexican army camp."

Sightseeing buses have added the camp to their itinerary.

"They've been very well behaved, very orderly and have been received by us as visitors. They are most welcome," said Raymond Rydell, mayor of Avalon. Rydell was executive vice chancellor of the California state college system before retiring to Catalina and has some experience in dealing with young militants. He urged a lenient approach to the Brown Berets.

Island people watched calmly Thursday as the contingent drilled, marching to a Spanish count of "Uno, dos, uno dos, uno, dos, tres, cuatro."

Residents make jokes about "occupied Catalina" and paying their taxes in pesos.

There are about 300 Mexican-Americans living on the island, but the Brown Berets found it difficult to whip up much fervor for a revolt.

One of the "troopers" questioned 9-year-old Johnny Machado, who came to watch their drill, and was horrified that the little boy speaks no Spanish.

"You can't even pronounce (your name) right," he exclaimed. "Man, you gotta learn Spanish. What's your school like? Any bilingual classes?"

Metropolitan Displays A Game Of War

SHAKESPEAREAN — In this 19th century set made of jasper, the figures are taken from Shakespeare. The set is colored lilac and gray, and is considered an outstanding example of the ceramic medium.

By DIANA LOERCHER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — "Chess is a game of war played on a marked surface between symbolic armies of a certain composition, usually, but not always, two in number. Although there are other games of a warlike nature, with pieces being besieged or captured, in chess the opposing sides represent the four main branches of a military force once used in a certain part of the ancient world: chariotry, elephant corps, cavalry, and infantry."

So writes Charles K. Wilkinson, curator emeritus of Near Eastern Art at the Metropolitan Museum, in the introduction to "Chess: East and West, Past and Present."

This catalog, a definitive analysis of the history of chess and chess sets, was compiled in 1968 as a companion to an exhibition by the same name, drawn primarily from the Metropolitan's Gustavus A. Pfeiffer collection and mounted at the Brooklyn Museum.

On the occasion of the Fischer-Spassky contest for the world championship, which certainly bears out the game's original war analogy, the Metropolitan has installed a small but worthy version of the earlier exhibition, which is on display through November.

A case of early Islamic chessmen and another of medieval pieces complement the main exhibition, which consists of a room filled primarily with complete and incomplete 18th- and 19th-century sets from Germany, Austria, France, Italy, Russia, China, and Japan.

In the Junior Library there is a special display of chessmen with particular appeal to children — the Alice in Wonderland set is the most charming.

It is generally agreed that chess originated in India around the sixth or seventh century and then spread to Persia. One of the most intriguing explanations of its genesis is a legend in Firdausi's "Shahnama," the famous Persian epic poem.

Firdausi describes a battle between two Indian princes, half brothers called Gow and Tolhand, who went to battle for possession of the crown with the understanding that the goal was to capture rather than kill. But when Tolhand saw his army defeated and found himself trapped, he died on his war elephant.

According to a paraphrased Firdausi account: "When Gow . . . brought the news of Tolhand's death to his mother, she, grieving, blamed him for his brother's death. Gow swore that his brother had not been harmed and when his mother asked him to explain how, then, he had died, Gow asked that a board be brought and that pieces of ivory and teak be carved. Then, by means of the game of chess, Gow showed his mother how the armies moved, and how in the end, hemmed in on all sides, Tolhand had died of exhaustion and despair. And so, in chess, checkmate occurs, when the king, like Tolhand, is in a position from which there is no escape."

By the ninth century chess had spread to Europe via Arabia. The Moors introduced it to Spain and the Saracens to Italy, while it also filtered eastward into the Orient. Chess met with religious disapproval from the medieval Christians, just as it had from the Muslims, because it was associated with dice, a game of chance. A Lombard friar by the name of Jacobus de Cessolis wrote an allegorical defense of the game in the late 13th century. "The Game and Pley of the Chesse." published by Caxton's Press in 1474, is, according to one source, the second book printed in the English language.

The game has remained remarkably consistent throughout the ages. Even its name in English and European languages evokes the original Sanskrit "chaturanga," (the four members of the army) and the Persian "shah," meaning king. As for the chessmen themselves, Mr. Wilkinson explains that they have always tended to fall into one of two main groups:

"In one, the pieces embody the names they bear. The king is a miniature royal figure, the elephant is an elephant, the pawn is a little foot soldier. In the other group the pieces are distinctive arbitrary forms, recognizable to the players who use them but meaningless to those unaccustomed to them. Such are usually termed 'conventional' sets . . . There is some reason to believe that both types of chessmen have been used from the game's earliest days."

Some striking examples of both types are on display at the Metropolitan. There is of course overlapping, for in some sets the pawns are not representational while the pieces are, or more commonly an entire set may be abstract, with the usual exception of the knight.

The representational sets tend to be the more curious. Their themes are often taken from famous battles or conflicts, such as the Battle of Austerlitz, the Christians vs. the barbarians, the Italians vs. the Ethiopians (with Mussolini as the Italian king and Rome as the queen), the Indians vs. the English, the cowboys vs. the Indians, the threshers vs. the mowers, and even the blondes vs. the brunettes. A contemporary counterpart now on sale in Brentano's here is the Republicans vs. the Democrats.

The most didactic set is a 1928 Russian one of Communists vs. capitalists in hard-paste porcelain colored with enamel. The capitalist king is depicted as death and the queen as a decadent Fortuna with a cornucopia full of gold. The pawns are in chains. On the Communist side the king is a blacksmith and the queen a peasant woman, while the pawns are reapers. All the castles, are of course, boats, a Russian chess idiosyncracy that has yet to be satisfactorily explained.

The evolution of other pieces in Europe tended to be universal, with the horse becoming the knight, the counselor becoming the queen, the rook becoming the castle, and the elephant becoming the bishop — surely the most dramatic metamorphosis — though France is an exception, unaccountably transforming the elephant into the fool or court jester.

Of course some sets do not derive from war, such as John Flaxman's figures from Shakespeare, or the whimsical Eskimo pieces carved from walrus ivory or horn. The Chinese sets offer amusing noncombative but historical variations. While the Chinese and Japanese themselves play with tiny tablets of unadorned wood inscribed with the name of the figure, the Chinese sets for foreigners are figurative and elaborately carved, with Napoleon or Edward VII often appearing as the king.

Chess has survived the centuries as durably as war itself and can be an artful sublimation of combat. It seems no coincidence that Napoleon was a chess fanatic. Some psychologists attribute motives of unconscious hostility to devotees of the game. Certainly all competitive sports and games can in some way be linked with aggressiveness. But chess is unique because it does not merely represent war' it is war but on a cerebral rather than a physical level.

AFRICAN SET — This 20th century set comes from Nigeria. Kings and queens are similar, the kings being distinguished by a "robe" of cotton. The board is dyed goatskin.

CARVED FROM IVORY — This Eskimo chess set, made in the 20th century, is carved from walrus ivory. Note the knight is a dog, and the rook is an igloo.

Fujiyama's Offers Followers Of Japanese Cuisine Ideal Selections

Just as there are those who hold out strongly on the merits of European cooking, there are others who believe that the Japanese methods of food preparation are without peer.

And some of them are very insistent about it. I ran into one gentleman at the Fujiyama in San Rafael the other evening, who probably hasn't missed taking in a Japanese restaurant in the west between the Canadian and Mexican borders. And he gives them odds over most other food institutions, too. (No, he is not a Japanese).

Incidientally, he rated the Fujiyama quality-high on his list, which I was glad to hear, since I have not done enough coverage of Japanese restaurants to make close comparisons.

I can say that I do find certain Japanese foods very pleasing to the taste and I enjoy periodical ventures into this field of gourmanderie. For example, the beef teriyaki prepared at the Fujiyama by owner-chef Akitoshi Takazawa is truly amazing. It is prepared almost as thin as paper, but somehow he manages not to overcook or undercook it.

There are other beef entrees to tempt you — sukiyaki and mizutaki — or you can venture into the field of seafoods with sashimi (ocean fresh raw tuna), tempura (shrimp and vegetables), salmon teriyaki and fried breaded prawns, or chicken teriyaki and a few others on which I have yet to experiment. And there is a good accompaniment of side items — soup, salad, rice and vegetables.

Aside from the fact that the Fujiyama (located on the Miracle Mile) is Marin's only fully Japanese restaurant, you will find it an especially interesting and colorful little spot to visit.

If you are already up on your Japanese food customs, undoubtedly you will want to remove your shoes and sit at one of the low tables on the raised section at one end of the dining room. Since I am not exactly built for a cross-legged position on a floor mat, I prefer the conventional western table and chairs.

Now featured as the Saturday night entertainer here is pretty Sophie Yamamoto from San Francisco, who sings and accompanies herself on the piano. She has a nice voice and quite a repertory of Japanese songs which I did not realize could be so well adapted to our own style of music.

Atsuko Nakamura, who previously performed on the koto Saturday nights, should be back soon — but she will then play on Friday nights, making two evenings of live entertainment a week.

Ordinarily closed on Mondays, the Fujiyama will serve dinners on Labor Day from 5 to 9:30 p.m.

AFTER SEPT. 8, Senor Alfredo's Mexican Restaurant in San Anselmo will discontinue serving lunches. This appears to be in anticipation of plans to shift some of the help here to Santa Rosa where owner Al Barthel has another restaurant now under construction.

SOPHIE YAMAMOTO
Fujiyama entertainer

Completion is not expected until next month and an opening is not anticipated until the middle of November — but advance planning has to be made.

The Santa Rosa restaurant will be much larger than the one in San Anselmo and will set a pattern for more Senor Alfredo restaurants throughout the state. If it is successful, two more places will be opened next year, including a second restaurant in Santa Rosa of the hof brau type to be called the Casa de Anza.

This waterfront restaurant with the inspiring view has been a very smooth operation — testimony to what can be accomplished by skilled restaurant people with long experience. (They also have Tarantino's at San Francisco Fisherman's Wharf.

And the Spinnaker has brought many new visitors to Marin County.

THE DEMAND for properly trained personnel in the food service business is high and the field is an extensive one.

Marin Dining And Wining

Friday, September 1, 1972 Independent-Journal, 11

Besides covering an infinite variety of restaurants, it extends into hotels, country clubs, yacht clubs, institutions and even steamship and airline food operation and management.

Indeed, you will find that many successful restaurateurs have had much of their training and credits in these related activities. And, as in the restaurant business, skill and hard work are demanded, offering many opportunities for those of professional caliber.

A case in point would be the Marin Country Club at Novato, now owned by the Lear Siegler Corp. It is, of course, primarily operated for the benefit of its members. But what many Marinites do not realize is that it does cater to the public insofar as group lunches, dinners, wedding receptions and other large affairs are concerned, where the serving of food and drink is involved.

It handles all the way from 50 to 300 persons for these social occasions and also accepts business groups for lunches and dinners.

Since it is a very scenic place, with a beautiful outlook over the golf course and surrounding hills spotted with fine homes, its huge dining area and outside terrace are much in damand. Prices are commensurate with those in regular restaurants, as food costs and overhead are comparable.

Management personnel here has all the necessary experience for such occasions. Manager Gene Marshall was trained in his profession in Europe. Food and beverage manager Bob Rossi (the one to contact for arranging banquet affairs) has been in large scale food and drink operations in several levels for many years, including having his own place at one time in San Francisco. Chef Bob Witt is recently from the Colorado resort country.

THE RESTAURANT CONVENTION in San Francisco early this week was an amazing maze of new equipment and food specialties. I can see that a restaurateur carried away by the many temptations could have gone broke in his first half hour on the floor.

Marin and Sonoma County food people were there, along with their counterparts from throughout the west. Former Marin chef Jean Joaquin (now a food consultant) directed several activities. Former Holiday Inn maitre d' Pierre Bitterer (now at the Mark Hopkins) was a guest panelist. Deer Park Villa, Le Camembert and Senor Alfredo of Marin had their menus on display.

Exhibits featured everything in hardware, soft ware and bills of fare to set up dining room, kitchen or refrigeration plant. There were dispensers and disposers; dishes, fishes and French quiches; jars of mayonnaise, hollandaise and giveaways; freezers, squeezers and other novel teasers; slicing machines, dicing machines and ice machines; new ideas in automation, sanitation and escalation; free tips, nips and sips. No one was allowed to go out uninformed, hungry or with their thirst unquenched.

You could find walk-in boxes luxurious enough to set up for housekeeping; dishwashers that looked like cooking ranges; and dazzling ranges fit for public display in any restaurant instead of being relegated to the kitchen.

Something new you may soon see at bars is the automated drink dispenser, with portion control. Some versions automatically ring up the charge as soon as the glass is filled. The idea is to make sure there's no leakage in the cash register. Naturally the cost of all this equipment is high and many proprietors look instead of buying.

But in another 20 years you may not recognize a restaurant as it is today — which isn't too important as long as the food is just as good.

NOW OPEN at the corner of Lincoln Avenue and Third Street, San Rafael, is the new Jess Coleman Restaurant and Recreation Center.

Hours are from 11 a.m. to 2 a.m. for lunches, dinner and snacks — later on Friday and Saturday nights. The attraction here is family entertainment and eating at reasonable prices — the entertainment being billiards and pool.

It's spacious and attractively laid out. You should visit it.

Justice Is Neither Swift Nor Sure

"Many people, though not all, will be deterred from serious crimes if they believe that justice is swift and sure. Today no one thinks it is. If there is a general impression that the administration of justice is not working, one important result is that the deterrent effect of law and punishment is impaired and lost." — Warren E. Burger, chief justice of the United States Supreme Court.

AN EXCELLENT example of what Chief Justice Burger was talking about is provided by the case of "hippie prophet" Donald C. McCoy Jr. and 10 of his "followers" at the now-defunct commune he headed at Rancho Olompali near Novato.

These 11 were among more than a score of residents arrested on marijuana and narcotics charges in a sheriff's raid on the commune on Jan. 14, 1969. McCoy and the 10 others subsequently engaged William O. Weissich as defense counsel.

They were indicted by the grand jury on March 20 of that year, arraigned four days later, and entered pleas of not guilty on March 28. Trial was set for Aug. 4, 1969.

On the day set for opening of trial, attorney Weissich filed a motion to suppress evidence, based in part on the fact that the raid had resulted from a tip to law enforcement officers by an informant whom the district attorney refused to identify.

That motion was heard before Judge Joseph G. Wilson in Marin Superior Court on Sept. 11, 1969. When the district attorney's office again refused to identify the informant, Judge Wilson threw out the case.

DIST. ATTY. Bruce B. Bales next day appealed the action to the District Court of Appeals. It took over 14 months — until Nov. 26, 1970 — to rule on the appeal. On that date the appellate court overruled Judge Wilson and returned the case to Marin County for trial.

The defense promptly petitioned for rehearing by the appellate court. This time, there was no delay. The appellate court on Dec. 10 refused a rehearing.

Back at the Marin County Hall of Justice, however, nobody seemed to be in any hurry. The appellate court order reposed somewhere in the county clerk's files. There was no request for a new trial date.

On Feb. 8, 1971, defense counsel filed a motion to dismiss on the grounds that McCoy and his followers had been denied the prompt and speedy trial guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

Instead, Judge Wilson then set a hearing for March 21 on the remainder of Weissich's motion to suppress evidence.

AFTER THAT hearing, nothing happened — for 17 months.

And on Aug. 21 of this year — 1972 — Judge Wilson dismissed the charges, agreeing that the defendants had been denied their rights to speedy trial.

Of the delays totaling 41 months from the time of plea to the time of dismissal, 38 months are chargeable to the courts themselves — 14 months to the appellate court and 24 months to the Marin Superior Court.

So it was the courts that denied the speedy trial. It is the courts that must bear the blame.

Democrats 'Gone To Pot' With Marijuana Plank

By RUS WALTON

California's Democratic leadership is going to pot.

I hate to say that; but facts are facts.

The particular plank in question opposes mandatory felony prosecutions for the use and possession of that mind-altering weed. The fact that the Democratic leadership also adopted a plank to lower the drinking age to 18 is disturbing, too. But, that's another issue.

COULD IT BE that by taking the soft approach on marijuana, the Democratic leadership is pandering the youth vote; the 18-year-old, first-time voters? Scads of young people will no doubt turn out to vote "Yes" on this November's initiative to legalize marijuana. Could it be that the Democratic candidates figured "if we play this think smart, we can get them to vote for Democrats as well as marijuana"?

Is the Democratic leadership, in other words, taking a soft stand on the use and possession of marijuana in an effort to win some elections? If so, I think that is a pretty high price to put on winning.

Certainly they are going against the wishes of the vast majority of their own party. All the public polls indicate that Californians — Democrats and Republicans alike — favor harsher, not softer, controls and penalties for the use and possession of pot.

And they are going against the wishes of a large number of young people in this state. Surveys indicate some 35 per cent of the 18-21 age group oppose softer controls or legalization of marijuana. Already there is a sizable group of young Californians working against the passage of the marijuana initiative. They are pushing for a "No" vote on the legalization of the weed.

THERE ARE SOME who excuse their support of the legalization of marijuana on the basis of a recent report by the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse. What those persons fail, or refuse, to keep in mind is this: the report warned that major social problems were likely to arise should the availability of marijuana be suddenly increased.

Much of the soft approach to marijuana is based on some fantasies which are destroyed by fact. For example:

FANTASY — marijuana should be legalized because it is not a narcotic.

FACT — while it is true that pharmacologically marijuana is not a narcotic, physicians warn that it can have extremely harmful mental effects. One noted UC researcher has stated that continued use of marijuana can result in a "chemical frontal lobotomy".

MY STRONG OPPOSITION to the legalization of or leniency toward marijuana was harshly reinforced by something which hit close to home the other week.

A friend of our teen-aged son committed suicide. He drove the family car into the garage, locked the door, and let the engine run until it was all gver. He had been high on acid. At 20, his brain had been eaten away.

His father found him in the morning.

How did it start? It started with marijuana. Just an occasional smoke, a now-and-then joint, to be part of the group. And then came the amphetamines, and the acid — the LSD and the STP. The hallucinatory trips. The uppers and downers. The tortured mind . . . and a car with its engine running in a closed garage on a trip to the dead end of the road.

LAW ENFORCEMENT officers, narcotics agents, physicians and psychologists will tell you — if you care to listen — that marijuana is so bad because it is often the entering wedge, the beginning, the start of a psychological addiction that can lead to the use of hard narcotics.

Certainly that is not what the Democratic leadership wants. How could they take the soft approach to marijuana? Let them look at their own sons and daughters and ask themselves that question.

Dollar Mansion Should Be Preserved

As a native of San Rafael, I want to add my name to the thousands of San Rafael and Marin County residents protesting the proposed change in zoning allowing for the development of condominium and town houses on the Dollar Estate. It is a beautiful, historical landmark and should be preserved. The mansion could be used as a senior citizens' center, museum, or headquarters for various social service agencies, as has been suggested by many interested people in the community.

I recommend that the members of the San Rafael Planning Commission vote against the proposed change in zoning after the moratorium is lifted.

Columnist Confused On Candidate Schmitz

Another intellectual baloney fed to us by Childs is his flat assertion that Schmitz's advocation of "abolishing the Federal Reserve Board and returning to the gold standard" is tantamount to "repealing the 20th Century." Yet, for instance, the very advanced and enlightened country of Switzerland has no Federal Reserve Board and backs up 85 per cent of its currency with gold!

To discerning people Childs and his ilk are laughable. For they see clearly that the difference between McGovern and Nixon is only in degree, and not substance. To many of them Schmitz may come handy on Nov. 8.

Here Comes Candidate With New Platform

I have just had my hair cut and I want to run for President. Here are the things I will do —

Vietnam: I will bring all of our troops home from Southeast Asia immediately. If those Commies want to fight let them come over here.

Second thing: Everybody will have work. That doesn't mean you will be paid on schedule, but you will be free to play income by ear. There will be no more strikes. If you feel you are being underpaid you can go out on your coffee break or lunch hour and beg for quarters on the street. They do it all the time in Rome.

You will not only be absolved of all social stigma, you will be contributing to the cultural revolution.

Taxes will be a matter of choice. If you don't want to pay you sign a form stating that you do not intend to apply for welfare. Nothing else.

A month's supply of food stamps will be sent to you automatically. If you return them you are tacitly implying that (1) You might join a march of some kind, (2) You reserve the privilege of writing to your congressman, (3) You dig Jane Fonda.

A regular television channel each night will feature Russian and Chinese bedtime stories.

Finally, in tune with the New Majority, I will no longer address you as fellow Americans. Hereafter I will call you my children or, on special occasions, simply mes engants. Fun huh?

Reader's Version Of Middle East Status

Joseph C. Harsch in his editorial (I-J, Aug. 26) distorted the truth when he falsely claimed that "Sadat of Egypt has been frantically signaling his desire for a settlement with Israel, while Israel is fearing peace."

The truth is that Sadat rejected Israel's latest proposals for negotiations and for interim settlements. Sadat threw the Russian advisers out because he was not given all the weapons for an attack on Israel. Sadat states now that he will fight the inevitable war against Israel without Russia's help. He says that he prefers bloodshed to the status quo, that one million Egyptians will be sacrificed to reconquer every inch of the Sinai Desert.

Is this what the Christian Science editor Joseph C. Harsch calls Sadat's frantic signals for peace?

It is quite obvious that Mr. Harsch would like the U.S. to gain a foothold in Egypt and that Israel should pay the price for this.

I think it would be better for world peace and for the people of the Middle East if both superpowers would agree among each other to stay out of Egypt.

Joint HAFB Use Not In Taxpayers' Interest

Regarding your Aug. 24 article by Mr. Farrara reporting on County Aviation Commission meeting: If, as Mr. Schwarzer contends, it will be a "long time" before air traffic builds up (with joint use of Hamilton AFB) it would seem to be in the interests of the taxpayers to proceed to the county airport — Gnoss Field.

Also how can highway congestion and pollution be eliminated in Marin by turning the traffic north to Hamilton instead of south to San Francisco? In the interest of reporting "the facts" please inform the public they will still have to drive to SF or Oakland for flights other than north or south of Marin.

Above all, let us not delude ourselves about "no cost to the taxpayers" as proponents of joint use would have us believe.

Small State Advantage Won't Guarantee Conservative Nominee

WASHINGTON — The Republicans are getting ahead of themselves. They are looking to 1976!

Some are saying that by a contrivance which gives a delegate advantage to smaller states which go Republican, the GOP will for sure pick a right-of-center presidential nominee four years hence.

Many words were written to this effect during and after the Miami Beach convention.

THEY'RE EYEWASH. They're plausible nonsense. Some of my colleagues added to the nonsense because there was so little controversy to write about.

It is quite true that the traditionally conservative, less populous states get a special break in future delegates if they carry the state for a Republican president, senator or a majority of congressmen. But this is a minor side matter when it comes to nominating the next national ticket.

It won't insure the nomination of a Republican conservative in 1976.

It won't guarantee the defeat of a Republican liberal in 1976.

It won't significantly help Spiro Agnew get the nomination in 1976 — even if he proves to be a conservative.

NOTHING IN MODERN political history suggests that the traditional delegate advantage which the GOP gives to the smaller states has ever been a substantial factor in nominating a conservative over a liberal Republican.

This advantage has alway been there, but it did not keep the Republican party from nominating a whole sequence of left-of-center Republican candidates from 1940 to last week.

The roster of liberal Republican nominees is pretty high, but there has been only one right-of-center GOP nominee from the past nine Republican conventions. Wendell Willkie, who voted for Franklin Roosevelt in 1936, took the nomination against all opposition from party regulars in 1940; Tom Dewey took it away from Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio in 1944 and from Sen. John W. Bricker of Ohio in 1948. General Eisenhower won over Senator Taft in 1952 and was unopposed in 1956. Richard Nixon has been given three presidential nominations and each time he had a more progressive political record than before.

The edge in delegate numbers, which the GOP gives to the smaller states, did not keep the nomination from these eight — and won't keep another like-minded nominee from getting it in the future. Neither did this delegate advantage give the nomination to Barry Goldwater; he would have received it anyway.

ALL OF THE Republican leaders at Miami Beach who favored the preferential delegate allocation for the smaller states were Agnew supporters. They simply wanted to retain that delegate advantage.

There seems little doubt that Vice President Agnew will be seeking the 1976 presidential nomination. He has been quite frank about this. He said he wouldn't have run again as vice president if he did not have a 1976 expectation. No commitment by him is yet in order but he is keeping his options open.

ERNEST B. FURGURSON

WASHINGTON — Avery Brundage has departed, yet the Olympics go on. It turns out the egocentric and idealistic Chicagoan was not the games personified after all. He was just their conscience.

Bifocaled, octagenarian millionaires are out of place in the games of today. So, perhaps, is conscience. At any rate Brundage's leaving ends an era, and it should end some other aspects of the Olympics we all had come to think of as permanent if illogical fixtures.

BRUNDAGE DID NOT retire as president of the International Olympic Committee because his committee overruled him by ousting Rhodesia this year to avoid a boycott by black African teams and possibly by blacks on the United States team. But the ruling and the resignation came in that sequence, and that was appropriate. His final words were, "It was a blatant intrusion of politics."

He was right, and the committee was wrong. Politics intruded and prevailed, no matter that in spirit those threatening boycott were justified. By letter they were wrong, and by letter is the way Brundage ran things for 20 years. By letter he had upheld his own idealistic vision of an Olympic tradition free of politics and of professionalism.

Despite persistent East-West and later racial conflicts, he largely succeeded until now against the first enemy. But against professionalism, he has succeeded only by the letter of the rules. In spirit, amateurism in the Olympics is a sham, giving rise to a third enemy worse than either of the other two — hypocrisy.

Though I have no illusions that it will be, that hypocrisy should be the first casualty of the post-Brundage Olympics. Let us acknowledge the facts as we all know them to be.

IT IS NOT chauvinism to say that whenever the United States outpoints the Soviet Union in the current games it is doing so with its right hand tied behind its back. The Russians themselves know this, and the non-official ones say so. All the world knows it — that the Russian athletes in the games are professionals and the Americans are amateurs, and that the best, most experienced American athletes in major sports are openly professionals who are forbidden to compete.

While this truth is widely known, it was spelled out in new detail just before these games opened in a series by Dean Mills, Moscow correspondent of the Baltimore Sun. The Soviet government not only supports its "student," "soldier" or "factory worker" athletes all year round and pays their expenses, it maintains that doing so is another proof of their political system's superiority. Beyond that, the government takes its own propaganda so seriously that it makes each athlete in international competition responsible for upholding the image of the Socialist system.

Thus, Mills writes, "When the Russians were badly stung in the Mexico City Olympics, it was almost a national crisis, something on the order of a disastrous grain harvest." Leonid Brezhnevhimself ordered creation of a new sports committee headed by Sergei Pavlov, former head of the Young Communist League and a tough comer in party circles. Pavlov demanded that the number of Soviet entries in this year's games be multiplied — all, of course, at government expense. Thus about 600 Russian competitors are at Munich.

THIS IS NOT to argue that the Russian individual or team that defeats an American at Munich does not deserve to win. It is to point out that in many cases there are a half-dozen athletes or a dozen teams back home in the States that could have won easily but were prevented from competing by the rules on professionalism. That there is no such thing as an avowedlyprofessional athlete in the Soviet Union, thus every man and woman and team can go to the Olympics, merely underlines the hypocrisy.

Neither is this to argue that all American amateurs are simon-pure. There are all kinds of expense-account subsidies, among other possible expediencies, that make life more convenient for big-name stars. There are scholarships and allowances for promising seven-footers. These are exceptions, however. In Russia, every member of the women's volleyball squad and the most obscure left-handed pistol shooter is on full subsidy for the full year — for a full career if he is good enough, rather than just through his bachelor's degree.

It would be heretical to suggest that all American athletes be paid by the state, although most of us would be willing to have our taxes pay Olympic expenses for our team rather than have it go begging every four years. It would be foolish to dream that at this late date we could force the Russians and their comrades to live up to our own amateur standards.

But it would be practical and realistic to realize that our standards essentially are those of Avery Brundage, who was born back in the first administration of Grover Cleveland, and that this is 1972 and the next Olympics will be in 1976 — and between now and then we should make a serious effort to open those games to every athlete, no matter whether he is paid secretly or brazenly. Any American politician with sense enough to add the cause of an open Olympics to his portfolio of issues will find the public is listening especially close this week.

Carmel May Have Solved The Problem Of Tourist Influx

Marin cities whose residents and officials complain about being overrun by tourists might take a lesson from the City of Carmel, which may finally have hit on the way to discourage visitors once and for all.

Carmel's solution to the "tourist problem" is an unfriendly little pamphlet passed to those arriving in that fair city for the first time.

Called "The Price of Peace," the leaflet is chock full of helpful hints designed to make the visitor feel he has just entered a place where he is not wanted, or maybe Russian-occupied Czechoslovakia.

Visitors are informed they cannot: camp or sleep on beaches, in cars, campers or trailers; use vulgar, profane or abusive language; ask for money; sell anything; make too much noise; stand around and block the sidewalks or streets; use fireworks, etc., etc.

A prohibition on sitting or lying on the grass in parks is crossed out since the supreme court recently ruled Carmel's "anti-loitering" ordinance unconstitutional, much to the chagrin of city fathers.

Actually, more disturbing than the long list of what one can't do in Carmel is the rather nasty tone of the pamphlet. Some examples:

"Swimming? Some people insist on doing it, even though we have posted our beaches as unsafe. We don't advise it, but we won't stop you. If you do get into trouble while swimming, we probably won't rescue you either."

"Use whatever language you want in communicating with your friends, but if you get careless or carried away and your language starts a fight, you are in trouble."

THE LEAFLET'S TONE is downright insulting to the average citizen who does not normally go around breaking laws or disturbing the peace. Also, isn't there something dismaying about traveling to a place and immediately encountering a list of all the things you aren't supposed to do in that city, presented in a way that makes you feel unwelcome?

If enough people become incensed by the pamphlet and pass the word along, it may be that Carmel will someday no longer have to worry about the tourist influx.

Then what will happen to the city government which is supported by revenues from the business community — money obtained from those unwelcome tourists? And what will happen to all the visitor-oriented businesses that have applauded city efforts to "get tough" with visitors?

"The price of peace" may be greater than the city government or the businessmen realize.

THE INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL lost a customer the other day, but the man's reason for cancelling the paper was worth the price of the subscription.

The call was taken by the Mill Valley office's Joan Herrell, who reported (when she could stop laughing) that the subscriber was highly irate. "I've told that paper boy time and time again to take off the front page of the paper before he delivers it, but he still brings me the whole paper," the caller charged angrily.

The man went on to say he absolutely did not want to read (or even see) the news of the day and could not continue to subscribe to a paper which insisted on providing that news. "All I want to read is the funnies," he snapped, "so cancel my subscription."

China Sends Affirmation Of Support

HONG KONG (UPI)-The Chinese Communist leadership today reaffirmed to North Vietnam the support of the Chinese people in the Indochina War and said Hanoi's forces were developing triumphantly despite increased U.S. air and naval attacks.

Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung, together with acting Chairman Tung Pi-wu, Chairman Chu Teh of the National People's Congress and Premier Chou En-lai, today sent a message to the North Vietnamese leaders greeting the 27th anniversary of the founding of North Vietnam.

The message, broadcast in full by Peking Radio and the New China News Agency, said:

"At present, the Vietnamese people's war against U.S. aggression end for national salvation is developing triumphantly and the whole situation in Indochina is excellent.

"The South Vietnamese armed forces and people have launched fierce offensives in various battlefields, dealt heavy blows to the U.S. imperialist scheme of 'Vietnamizing' the war and scored splendid victories.

COUNTY COMMENT

By WILLIAM D. (BILL) FUSSELMAN

Taxpaying Homeowners Now Need To Solidify Their Ranks

After reading the fine tribute to John McInnis, in the editorial Tuesday evening, I feel all I might add is that a friend whom I have admired and respected for many years has gone away to the place where there shall never more be pain. In the words of James Thurber, "The distant, shining shores of the blessed isles of Ever After." Lois, the deep love you had for each other will be the most to help smooth over the days to come. Hold it tight; its warmth will never fail you.

As I go over the clippings and data that cover my desk, I wonder just what is going to happen out at Brasilia during the next few years. Two unflappable men will not be there. Unless more homeowner taxpayers stand beside the few who have been watching things and speaking out for you, there will be a tax load such as you have never seen before.

You will wake up one morning and wonder "who done it"? By the way, the cost of Brasilia maintenance ($3,359,095) which I gave last week was for the years of 1970-'71-'72 and this fiscal year, '73. That is the total for all four years. The way I wrote my copy, it could have been misunderstood.

I HAVE BEEN reading the balanced transportation report page by page. There is a lot of redundancy. One gets the idea that several different ones wrote it and not too good a job was done in the tieup.

I think that you all are entitled to have an opportunity to read the report. This presents the problem of just how to do this. I have counted words to the line and number of lines per page. Then I did the same thing with the "County Comment" average column. It can be done by using the column.

As we all know there is an almost daily series of local county government matters occurring that should be discussed and an attempt made to analyze. This precludes preempting the space. So in spite of the likelihood of anguished cries of being out of context, sections of the report will be offered to you for your contemplation.

FOR INSTANCE, here is one to think about: "An important accomplishment of Phase 1 was the creation of close technical coordination among local, county, regional and state agencies responsible for transportation planning. This close interjurisdictional cooperation helps to insure that the local communities of Marin will not again be forced to react to massive transportation proposals prepared by outside agencies. Are they talking about the Golden Gate Bridge people?

Before going further into the report, this observation: When I called up to inquire about postage and asked if it was the planning commission, I was corrected. "This is the planning department." They are really the staff serving the planning commission. Building a bureaucracy?

Perfume Factory Blast Kills Two

FREEPORT, Tex. (UPI)—Chemicals being used to make perfume exploded in a factory and killed two workers Thursday. Eight other persons were injured, two critically.

Fifteen workers of the Rhodia, Inc., plant were in the room when the chemicals were mixed to form an ingredient used in making the perfume.

Plant manager George Mussa said the same chemicals had never exploded when they were mixed before.

Huntley Takes Stand On TV Advertising

BOZEMAN, Mont. (UPI)—Former NBC news anchorman Chet Huntley said Thursday he endorses a recent recommendation that paid political advertisements be no shorter than five minutes in length. "Also, the candidate should be required to utilize the five minutes himself and must speak on his own behalf so we can all take a look at him or her and listen to what he has to say," Huntley said.

Huntley said the short 30 and 60 second spots, often presented by third parties on behalf of candidates, "serve only to confuse" and should be abolished.

Attorney Wins Right To Use Helicopter

BOSTON (UPI)—Criminal attorney F. Lee Bailey has won the right to use part of his 80-acre estate in Marshfield as a helicopter landing pad. A Superior Court Judge denied a request Thursday for a temporary injunction sought by two Marshfield residents claiming that Bailey's helicopter is dangerous and noisy.

Bailey testified that he has been using the helicopter pad since June 1969.

BIRTHDAY QUIZ

By GORDON B. GREB

Friday Sept. 1 — What famous journalist was born today? Of all the great men born this day, none was more colorful than this lad. He came to America from Scotland at the age of 24, seeking his fourtune as a school teacher, then reporter and editor.

He gave up teaching to try reporting, but despite a gift for writing and some success as a Washington correspondent, he found himself unemployed at the age of 40 and his prospects poor. So he took all of his savings (a total of $500) and started his own newspaper, the New York "Herald," which he sold for one penny a copy.

New Yorkers liked the bright, witty, lively writing. It caught on. Although his office was in a basement, and his desk consisted of a plank spread over two empty barrels, the "Herald" grew in popularity and success seemed certain.

But misfortune struck. His printing plant burned down. Well, did our hero quit? No, sir! He bought another press and 19 days later was publishing again, presenting new ideas and features. People loved it.

Critics said he presented too much crime in his paper, but the "Herald" publisher believed life should be reported as it is. Other publishers called him "a common bandit" or a "turkey buzzard." One editor met him on the street, knocked him down, and beat him with a cane. But no one stopped him from publishing the truth.

When this man died at age 76, he had built one of New York City's greatest newspapers. Historians call him a Giant of Journalism. Can you find his name in the list of famous people born today?

(A) Edgar Rice Burroughs; (B) James Gordon Bennett; (C) Melvin R. Laird.

ANSWER

(B) James Gordon Bennett.

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Old Spectator's Criticism Of National Tourney Match

"If this is bridge, I'll stick to pinochle," said a gray-haired man as he walked out of the main ballroom of the Denver Hilton Hotel a few weeks ago. He had just been watching Los Angeles expert Edwin Kantar during a session of the Life Master Pair Championship at the national tournament, and the pool man didn't like what he saw.

What do you say?
ANSWER: Pass.

You expect to win two spade tricks and two aces against three spades and should defeat the contract if your partner turns up with any useful card; but you must not double since a double would be for takeout and partner would surely bid.

EAST WINS

West opened the nine of hearts, and East won with the ace. East cashed the ace of diamonds and then shifted back to hearts. West won with the king of hearts and hopefully led the king of diamonds.

Kantar, playing the South hand, ruffed the king of diamonds and led out the ace of spades followed by the queen of spades. West discarded a diamond on the second round of spades, and East won with the king.

The defenders had already taken four tricks, and Kantar needed the rest. Somehow or other he had to finesse through East's 10-7 of trumps — without a trump in the dummy to use for the finesse.

UNNECESSARY FINESSE

East returned a heart to the queen, and Kantar promptly led a low club and tried a finesse with dummy's jack. This "unnecessary" finesse made the gray-haired man sit up incredulously.

Kantar next led dummy's good queen of diamonds and ruffed it in his own hand. That's where he lost his kibitzer.

Actually, Kantar's strange plays were necessary. He led a club to dummy's king and led the 13th heart. East discarded a low club, and South discarded the ace of clubs.

LEAD IN DUMMY

There were now only two cards in each hand, and the lead was in the dummy. East had to play a trump before South played, and South therefore won both tricks by a trumpless trump finesse. South had to waste one of his trumps in order to keep the lead in dummy at the 12th trick; he would surely lose a trump trick if he had to lead from his own hand.

TRAFFIC TIE-UP IN NOVATO

Subdivision Is Approved In Fairfax

The Fairfax Planning Commission last night recommended approval of a tentative subdivision map for Canon Village and Tennis Club subject to approval of a density study to be conducted by City Engineer Ben C. Albritton.

Owners Robert D. Marshall Jr. and Denkmann and Co. have proposed 128 units for the 89-acre parcel on Sir Francis Drake Boulevard, according to Ernestine Healy, commission secretary.

The master plan for the project has already been approved by the city council, she said.

The commission will consider the density study, hear a report on state subdivision laws by City Atty. Wallace S. Myers and review the precise plan for the proposal at its Sept. 28 meeting, she said.

The Fairfax Planning Commission also:

USE PERMIT — Approved T. D. Harriman's application for a use permit to remodel an existing apartment at 19 Sequoia Road.

OLEMA ROAD — Agreed with Commission Gloria Duncan's request that the city council ask the city engineer to examine an inadequate culvert at 300 Olema Road, the scene of winter flooding.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. Sept. 28 in the Fairfax Women's Club.

Southern Cal Mayor Indicted On Payoff

SANTA ANA (UPI)—They mayor of Westminster and a member of that city's Planning Commission have been indicted by the county grand jury on five felony counts involving an alleged $10,000 payoff for an agricultural lease.

Mayor Derek McWhinney and Commissioner Tad Fujita surrendered at Superior Court Thursday and were given until Sept. 15 to enter a plea.

They were booked on charges of conspiracy to commit grand theft, attempted grand theft, conspiracy to offer a bribe and two counts of soliciting a person to offer a bribe. They were scheduled to appear again in court today to post $5,000 bond each.

Two other men, not identified, were listed as conspirators.

McWhinney and Fujita, both 34, were charged with obtaining money from a farmer attempting to renew his lease on 213 county controlled acres of agricultural land in Fountain Valley.

The farmer, George Murai, a classmate of the two defendants, was allegedly coerced into paying a $5,000 "campaign contribution" to a county supervisor. The supervisor, Robert Battin, apparently was unaware he was involved in a bribery scheme.

Later, Murai allegedly paid $5,000 to Fujita.

Deputy District Attorney James Enright said the payoffs took place in July while the supervisors were considering various proposals on what to do with the 213 acres.

McGovern Derby

A fund-raising bicycle derby, with 13 race classifications, will be held by the Marin McGovern for President campaign at 10 a.m. on Sept. 9 at Edna Maguire School, Mill Valley.

Motorcycle Stolen From Parking Lot

A 1967 Honda motorcycle belonging to Laura L. Less of Las Colindas Avenue was stolen between Aug. 30 and the next day from the parking lot of the Northgate Shopping Center.

According to police, the motorcycle had been left there overnight after the owner was unable to start it.

Another Swim Pool Drowning

A 3-year-old Illinois boy visiting in Novato died today at Novato General Hospital nine hours after he was found floating in a swimming pool at the home of his parents' hosts.

It was the fourth drowning in a Marin pool in the past five days.

The search for the victim, David Gallas, began when children were being rounded up for dinner at about 7:30 p.m. He was taken to the hospital where he died at 4:45 a.m. today.

According to police, his mother said that David was "sacred to death of water" and that she had been sure he would never go near the pool.

The Gallas family was visiting at the home of Wilson B. McCune, 10 Verdad Way. The boy's father, Thaddeus, and McCune are pilots for the same airline.

The boy's body was taken to Chapel of Marin Mortuary, Novato.

Bolinas Utilities Director To Go To Jail For Vandalism

A director of the Bolinas Public Utilities District yesterday was sent to jailfor 20 days and told to stay out of a popular Bolinas bar.

The unusual sentence for Gregory C. Hewlett came after he admitted to Judge David A. Baty of Marin Municipal Court that he had broken about $500 worth of windows in a real estate office belonging to a man who has opposed the district's antidevelopment policy.

As part of a plea bargain, the judge then dismissed a second count against the sandy-haired, bearded Hewlett, involving the slashing of tires of two vehicles belonging to another man also opposed to the board's policies.

The judge also dismissed a third charge, this one of being drunk in public, stemming from a fracas in Bolinas on July 4 in which the 32-year-old Hewlett was twice rescued from Sheriff's Officers by a gang of youths.

Hewlett, however, later turned himself in.

In addition to the jail sentence, which he began serving yesterday, and the order to stay out of Smiley's bar, Hewlett was told by Judge Baty to pay forall the damage he had done. He was given six months to make restitution.

Hewlett, an outspoken conservationist, was elected to the board last November in an election in which two directors were recalled. The window smashing and the tire slashing took place in March.

Millionaire Will Break Up 'Dare To Be Great' Firm

ORLANDO, Fla. (UPI)— Multimillionaire Glenn W. Turner said Thursday he will break his controversial Dare To Be Great firm into 500 smaller companies which will be sold or given to "little people" around the nation.

"This will comply with any judges' orders," Turner told a crowd of some 800 supporters, "But I will keep one part so I can keep fighting for what I think is right."

Turner was arrested this week and charged with 86 counts of violating Florida's uniform sale and security laws, and he said he and his numerous firms are under legal fire in at least 38 states as well as from the federal government.

Turner said he has changed his system five times in five years to satisfy the judges and the states. Now, he said, he is going to scatter his operations.

"Let them go after 500 companies instead of just one," he said. "If they get 400, I will start 500 more."

Turner, 37, addressed employes of his Koscot firm and other sales people of the Turner conglomerate from around the nation who were in Orlando for a series of seminars on sales training.

In Newark, N.J., Thursday, a Superior Court judge fined Turner and Koscot $25,000 each, and ordered him to stop selling the cosmetic sales firm's distributorships in New Jersey.

Hearing Delayed

HARTFORD, Conn. (UPI)—A court hearing for Mrs. Bonnie Ferranti, a school teacher, was postponed indefinitely Thursday. Mrs. Ferranti was seeking a court order to force school officials to allow her to teach as long as she was physically able before the birth of her child. But she had her baby, a girl, Wednesday.

Petaluma Candidates File Papers

Three more candidates have filed papers for election to the Petaluma Hospital district board on Nov. 7.

In addition to Dr. Crinella, the terms of Dr. Hamza I. Munib and Clyde Nelson will expire.

Dr. Crinella, 34, was appointed to the board last year. He is a staff psychologist at Sonoma State Hospital and lives at 7 La Cresta Drive, Petaluma.

Beatie, a retiree, lives at 4480 Skyview Drive, Penngrove. Burke, 940 Fifth Street, Petaluma, is employed as maintenance manager at St. Luke's Hospital, San Francisco.

A PROSPECTIVE purchaser looks over a terrarium in a glass water jug, one of many unusual containers being used to bring greenery indoors. A new interest in plants and terrariums has been shone by college students on thier way to campuses this fall.

'WE LOVE THEM'

By MARILYN HOFFMAN
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

LOS ANGELES — Living plants will be part of the gear that college students, both men and women, haul back to their campus living quarters this year. It's all part of the ecology wave, but students have also discovered not only that growing things transform a dull dorm room, but that it is fun to cultivate one's own green thumb.

A couple of university shoppers we saw selecting plants here in Bullock's, Willshire's new first-floor greenery emporium, said, "Plants are very important to us. We love them."

Seventeen magazine, which visits a variety of colleges all over the country each year to find out what students are doing to their rooms, says, "The current fascination with ecology and in everything natural and organic means that almost every student wants plants." They are booming business at dime stores, plant shops, nurseries, and flower shops.

At the greenhouse annex of Cost Plus in San Francisco, students and young marrieds are going through checkout lines with bushles of house plants popping out of their baskets.

ONE STUDENT showed me an antique sugar bowl (which she bought for 50 cents minus its lid) soon destined to hold a flourishing philodendron in her room.

Finding interesting containers —from antiques and old pottery, to woven baskets — is part of the current adventure of hunting through junk shops, flea markets, and handcraft fairs. Even a plant grown from an avocado seed deserves an attractive setting. And hanging arrangements are great favorites in many dorms and small apartments.

For those without much skill in bringing nature indoors, terrarium kits are available that take the guesswork out of indoor growing. At the David L. Swartz showroom in the Los Angeles home furnishings mart, we saw dozens of terrarium kits by Christen of St. Louis, shaped like flying saucers, balls, domes and mushrooms, and retailing for $7.98 to $59.98, depending on sizes and bases.

Each terrarium comes with glass container, special potting soil, rocks, charcoal, and instruction booklet for assembling your very own self-contained miniature garden. This showroom already has sold 20,000 terrariums in the Los Angeles area alone and sees the future "alive" with possibilities.

AT THE SAN Francisco market, a new company called Terra Systems is showing such terrarium "environmental accessories" as cubes to sit on your desk and terrarium end tables and coffee tables, all very lush with plantings planned by a horticultural expert.

Kits are even available for inserting plant material down the narrow neck of glass water jugs — a pastime only somewhat less tricky than building a ship in a bottle.

If you prefer not to bother with a kit, you can buy an already-planted terrarium at most florist shops at prices ranging from $7 to $75. These have the advantage of being professionally planted and established. You choose the type of planting you prefer — desert, woodland, or tropical.

One terrarium we saw, planted with tropical flora, contained baby's tears as low ground cover, Neanthe Bella palm, ruffled Boston ferns, a podocarpus, a pickaback, and a tiny bromeliad, with moss covering the soil to help retain water.

PEOPLE BENT on do-it-yourself terrariums are using every kind of glass container, from cannisters to bulbous brandy snifters or old fish bowls in which to build their "indoor ecological systems."

Besides plants — and rock, mineral, and bottle collections — the items that will go back to school this fall are big, bold decorative sheets, cardboard furniture, and bean bag chairs.

"Sheets," says Seventeen, "are this year's answer to all kinds of school decorating problems." The wilder they are, and the more supergraphic in scale, the more the kids love them.

TO USE sheets as curtains, loosen the side of the hem on the bottom of the sheet, put a tension rod through, and hang!

As for the cardboard furniture, it is the small chests, the tuckaway storage boxes that slide under beds, and round tables that are most in demand. The "draped table" look that Bates has encouraged with its numerous round wash-and-dry table fashions, is made possible with a $5 (postpaid) 72-inch round table of corrugated paper-board, which holds up to 50 pounds in weight, and is available by mail from Bates Fabrics, Inc., Dept. FP 2, P.O. Box 576, Midtown Station, New York, N.Y., 10018.

Red Cross—There When It's Needed

By BARBARA HOSMER

"We chew the rag or read a book most of the time," says Juliette Quinn of staffers at the Red Cross emergency aid station, but when they are needed, they're ready.

Cut fingers, scratched knees, heat stroke and sprains are common problems the trained first aid volunteers treat each year at the Marin County Fair in the emergency aid station. They are on duty throughout the fair hours at the Civic Center.

Mrs. Quinn has been volunteering first aid wherever the crowds are in Marin for some 15 years. A registered nurse from San Anselmo who works night shifts at a convalescent hospital, she said that she took first aid training from the Red Cross when her son was a baby.

When he became pre-school age she began to volunteer in the emergency first aid stations. "He always went with me," she said. And as soon as he was old enough, he began to drive for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Quinn has been a mainstay at the Fair emergency aid station for years, but she and a corps of other trained volunteers, largely nurses, follow the crowds to the Mountain Play each year, the Grape Festival, the Dipsea Race, the walk-athons that Marin teen-agers have staged, the recent bike-a-thon and the Special Olympics. They also were on hand during the San Anselmo Fair last weekend.

WITH WALK-A-THONS they set up a mobile first aid station aboard a Red Cross wagon, often driven by her son. The Mountain Play means a full day for one crew of first aiders, rather than the four-hour shifts they usually take, she said. There is a a doctor with them because of the distance to the hospital from Mount Tamalpais and the rangers there are all first aid-trained, Mrs. Quinn said.

One of Mrs. Quinn's favorite events to staff is the Special Olympics, a physical competition for mentally and physically handicapped children. "I never miss that," she said emphatically.

Red Cross policy requires that an R.N. and one or two first aid-trained assistants be on duty. There is always a doctor on call, as well.

"We strictly do just first aid. For any serious injury or condition we call an ambulance and send the patient to the hospital," she explained. "Sometimes there are doctors in the crowd, if we need immediate medical help."

Mrs. Quinn's responsibility includes finding a suitable place for an aid station for an event, after the request comes in to the Red Cross chapter in San Rafael. Then she rounds up the trained nurses and assistants, and "we could always use more," she said.

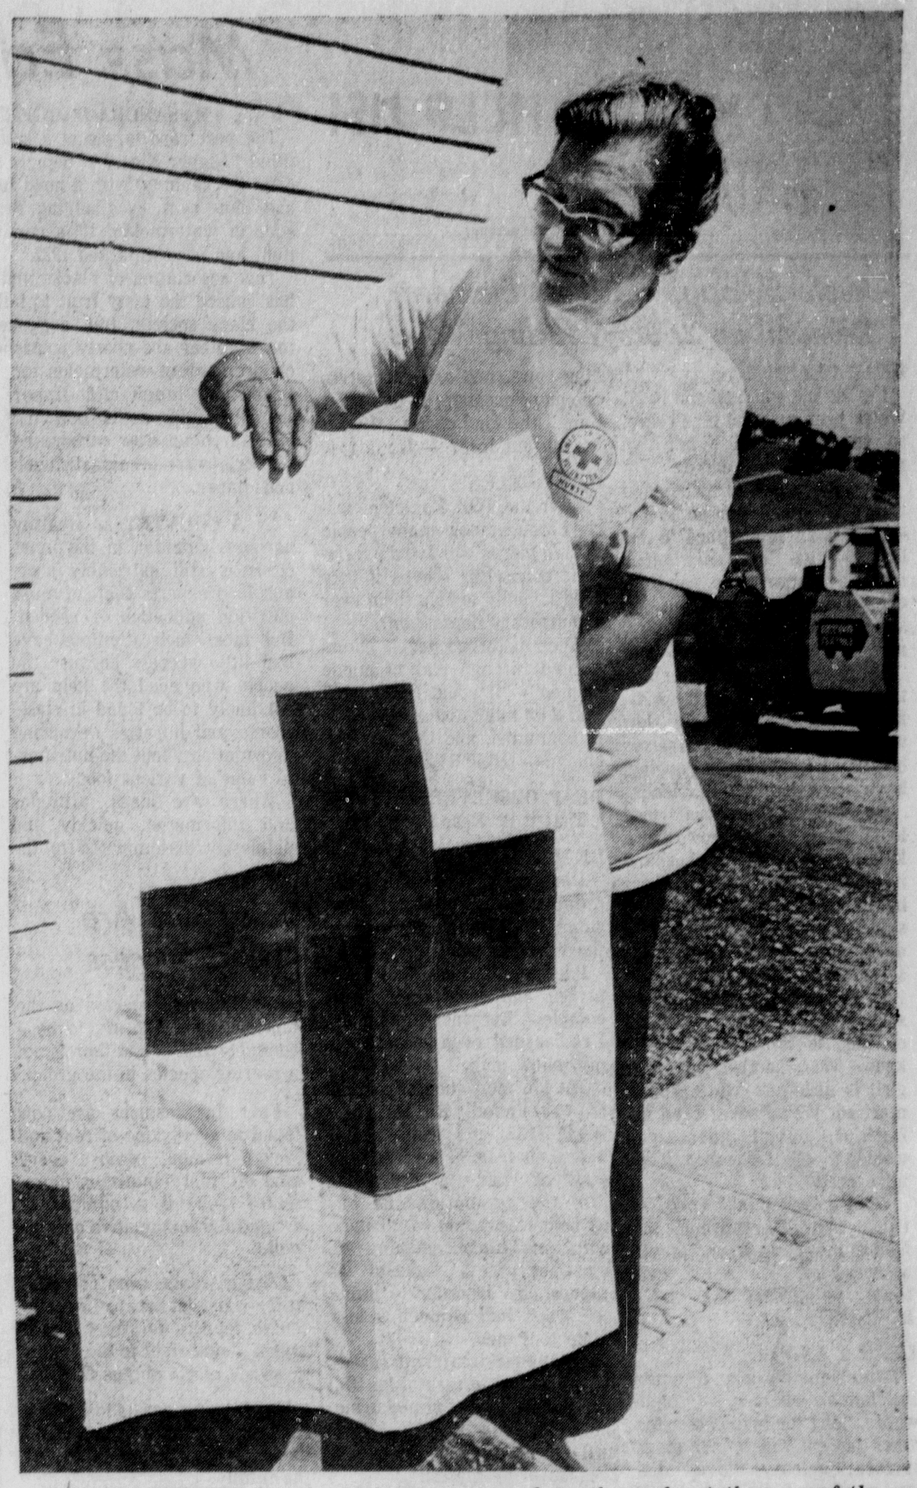
SHE BELIEVES that emergency aid training and experience is good for more persons to have in case a disaster should strike in Marin.

"It's nursing that's all together different from hospitals — the poeple are in a different emotional state." A member of the California Nurses Association Emergency Help Preparedness, she feels that emergency aid station experience is especially good for nurses.

Most the injuries are minor — sprains, minor cooking burns among cooks at the food booths, splinters and blisters on the feet. But, Mrs. Quinn pointed out, in a charity walk-a-thon "It's important they they be able to walk that extra mile for that money," and a blister treated on the scene allows the youngster to continue the walk.

"Sometimes kids will step on a nail," and once a child fell off a bleacher at a high school playing field and suffered a spinal injury.

"There are some sad things and some funny ones," Mrs. Quinn related. One boy split his pants up the middle and had to be taped together until he could get home.



A VOLUNTEER for the 15th year at the Marin County Fair, Juliette Quinn hangs the Red Cross flag yesterday at the opening of the fair. The registered nurse will be on duty throughout the run of the fair at the Marin County Civic Center. Each year she finds and schedules volunteers to staff the Red Cross station.

An early spring wedding is planned.

The bride-elect, who is also the daughter of the late Mr. Thompson, is a mathematics teacher at Tamalpais High School, and Mullaly teaches social studies at the Mount Carmel School in Mill Valley. He is the son of Pierce J. Mullaly of Alhambra and the late Mrs. Mullaly.

Chemise Is Back For Day, Night

It's been missed and now it's back. The chemise. This easy, beloved silhouette shows up in daytime wear as well as in evening wardrobes.

Seen almost everywhere, it can be a very full tent or with light body shaping.

How To Achieve Identity

I-J Special Report
By FRIEDA KAYE
(Information Center on the Mature Woman)

PHILADELPHIA — When a woman comes from a family of "achievers" — but isn't expected to achieve herself "because, she's a girl" — she's in a bind, Ernesta Drinker Ballard said, speaking from her own experience.

However, Mrs. Ballard decided belatedly to accomplish something on her own and did. She now is executive director of the 5,000-member Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, the largest organization of its kind in the country.

"When I was growing up," Ernesta Ballard recalled, "career aspirations for girls were never discussed."

Her mother was a volunteer "preoccupied with all sorts of social and cultural activities;" her father was "a successful lawyer who worked hard and never relaxed." But he maintained that "women didn't have men's brains and were not capable of men's achievement."

He believed that "women were meant to be lovable and clever, but not much else," she said. From her father's side of the family, however, she feels she inherited her capacity for hard work, the ability to make up her mind quickly, and a good feeling for detail.

AT 15, Mrs. Ballard attended "the same fashionable boarding school" her mother had. At 18, she made her debut, did volunteer work, married a young lawyer and subsequently had four children. It wasn't until she reached her 30s that she decided to have her "second coming out," as she calls it.

"I wanted to achieve an identity as a capable person in my own right," she said. "I wanted to make the change from housewife to professional. I wanted a paying job because I felt that earning money was a tangible form of recognition, an indication of one's worth."

Mrs. Ballard trained in horticulture, realizing that although many women were involved in garden club activities, few specialized professionally in this field. Six weeks after beginning her studies, however, she became quite ill. Since her doctor could find no physical basis for her symptoms — which included a severe difficulty in swallowing — he suggested therapeutic counseling.

"I discovered that the process of preparing for independence was the cause of my symptoms," she said. "I had apparently resented my father's refusal to appreciate what a woman could do on her own. but I felt selfish and guilty at the same time for not choosing to be the kind of woman he wanted me to be."

Once she could acknowledge this conflict within herself, she was able to return to school and complete her training.

In addition to her administrative responsibilities with the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society, Ernesta Ballard writes and lectures extensively on horticulture and travels frequently to meetings throughout the country. She sees her accomplishments as demonstrating to other women what can be done if they set their vocational sights high.

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

DEAR HELEN:

I'm 22 and my husband is 27. We've been married nine years, so you can see I didn't live much before the wedding.

We have two children, six and two, a nice, well kept home and — this may seem hard to believe — we love each other more and more. We can talk openly and to the point on any subject without embarrassment.

Up to this year, we've spent time off mostly with the kids, having fun on picnics, etc. Now we've decided to give ourselves one day a week. We go dancing, have a few drinks with friends.

But there's this real good looking guy in our crowd. In a kidding way, I told my husband it would be fun to date him, as he turns me on. My husband said, "Okay, if we make it a double date." In other words swap mates for a night.

What started as kidding now sounds real tempting. It's kind of sad, to think you'll never know what another man (or girl) is like, just 'cause you're married. We've never been unfaithful, but I guess you wouldn't call it cheating if we all agreed.

What do you think? Could we trust each other? Would this lead to more swaps, and maybe a break-up? We don't want that! — TEMPTED AND BURNING

DEAR T AND B:

I think mate-swapping omits the human element — somewhere along the line, one or the other of you will let emotions surface: jealousy, "love," disgust perhaps. Relationships seldom stay purely physical for long —and then the marriage problems start.

Remember back to your wedding vows, and ask yourselves one more question: Is this "new thing" the kind of life I'd want for my children? — H.

DEAR HELEN:

After the Tom Eagleton fiasco, I wonder how many people in high places will avoid psychiatric counseling —even if they need it badly to help them over a temporary depression?

When disturbed people go untreated through fear of public opinion — it could mean we'll find a lot more disturbed people in command, and that's frightening. — OBSERVER

DEAR OBSERVER:

That it is. Read on:

DEAR HELEN:

I entered a psychiatric treatment center voluntarily because I felt my nerves were at the breaking point.

I learned a great deal about myself and consider the cure complete. But since coming out, I've learned even more about my fellow man.

The former mental patient isn't shunned. Rather, he's WATCHED. and while people hide their fear, he sees it. They "protect" him (by not giving him the promotions he has earned). They put a "handle with care" label on him. He must act twice as "normal" as anyone else in order to prove he's worth half as much as less competent men.

Psychiatric treatment speeded my return to mental health, but it may have brought me more problems than if I had pulled through my nervous breakdown by myself.

We still aren't out of the dark ages when it comes to illnesses of the mind. People never quite believe you can get over them. — STALLED CAREER

ON BEING BLACK

Mass Education Is Needed

By SANDRA HAGGERTY

The post card is one of a series of 40 and titled "Nigger Kids." It depicts a little black child (pickaninny) with a head full of pigtails and white rags, eyes bulging, drooling over a slice of watermelon. It is now a collectors' item and is postmarked 1922.

This association of blacks and watermelon has caused the tasty fruit to fall in status in the black society. But, doggone it, I would much rather see poorly nourished inner-city children eating watermelon for breakfast, lunch and dinner than I would, as is now the case, drooling over carbonated soft drinks for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

IN A COUNTRY as wealthy as ours, nutrition in the inner cities is still extremely poor, and food experts contend mass nutrition education is needed. But most such attempts have had little success because the people who need the help are not likely to be found in classrooms and libraries devouring information about the nutritional value of various foods.

Those who don't read nutrition handbooks and health charts do watch TV, and that's exactly where a lot of the encouragement to drink these non-nutrients comes from. All day long we're bombarded with the propaganda that these drinks will help bring about peace and brotherly love. According to these commercials, you'll look like a knockout in a bikini and attract the guys like flies with a soft drink in hand.

THE NEED to quench one's thirst is legitimate, so why not advertise watermelon? It's unquestionably liquid and a thirst quencher. It is sweet and colorful. Right now it's in season and reasonably priced. There are 590 units of vitamin A in 100 grams of watermelon and some vitamin C.

And there are unending food possibilities with watermelon. Even the rind can be made into pickles and pies —talk about tasty rejects! Furthermore, you can't get fat eating it.

This is not necessarily a plug for watermelon, but rather a plug for any fruit or vegetable more nutritious than a liquid non-nutrient.

Americans are supposedly concerned about the health of the nation and the world, but TV advertisers' dogged promotion of these non-nutrients produces some of the most contradictory and obscene viewing on our home screens.

Money is the master in this situation, of course, but I still say "Eat a watermelon and attract the guys!"

Carol Harriman Married In Elks Club Ceremony

A garden wedding at the Elks Club in San Rafael on Sunday united in marriage Carol A. Harriman of Greenbrae and Kenneth M. Levin of Larkspur.

Linda Rae Cerutti of San Rafael attended the bride as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Justine Harriman and Janet Harriman of Greenbrae and Lynn Claxon of Terra Linda, all sisters of the bride, and Shelly Levin of Larkspur, the bridegroom's sister.

Gary Levin served as best man for his brother. The guests were seated by John Clinch and Steve Giovannone of Larkspur, Mitch Boxar of Santa Rosa and Michael Mills of Sacramento.

After the reception in the club gardens, the couple left on a wedding trip to Hawaii. They will live in Davis, where both Carol and Kenneth are seniors at the University of California.

Carol is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas R. Harriman of Greenbrae. She is a graduate of Marin Catholic High School.

Kenneth is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney M. Levin of Larkspur. Mrs. Esther Levin of San Francisco is his local grandparent. The bridegroom is a graduate of Redwood High School.

Fake Furs Are A Big Success

New howling success on the fashion scene appears to be a complete zoo — and there's not a roaring species in the group.

Fake fur fashions are now found in every kind of coat and jacket fashion. Almost every kind of "real" animal is represented — and a number of delightfully imaginative ones as well.

The fake fur seems to be here to stay, to be worn from dusk to dawn — but every member of the family.

Mrs. Tait Is New Head Of Parenthood Group

Mrs. Richard G. Tait of San Rafael will be installed president of the Planned Parenthood Auxiliary of Marin on Sept. 21.

The auxiliary supports the work of Planned Parenthood by participating in clinic staffing, community education and fund raising activities, Beverly Tait explained.

"Since its founding in 1968 the auxiliary has contributed nearly $20,000 to the San Rafael clinic," the three-year-member said. "Our main fund raising activity will be the third annual Stitchery Faire, and our program for this year will include speakers on the subjects of pregnancy counseling, legislative action in the area of birth control and abortion, parent effectivenes training and contraceptives of the future."

Mrs. Tait has served as education chairman and corresponding secretary of the auxiliary. Membership is open to all who show willingness to actively support the purposes of the auxiliary, she said. At present there are 50 active and 20 associate members.

The new president is also a member of the Mills Club of Marin, the Lucas Valley Racquets, the Sierra Club and Zero Population Growth, Inc. She attended Mills College and the University of California and received a B. A. degree from San Francisco State College. Her husband is a civil engineer. The couple, who are the parents of Richard, 4, and Tommy, 1 year old, have lived in Marin for four years.

Beverly Tait's hobbies are skiing, tennis and substitute teaching.

Plaid Upbeat-Bigger, Bolder

There'a a new upbeat in the menswear fashion tempo this season. Plaids. Bolder and bigger, they can be seen in the most casual attire or the most career-minded models.

Glen plaids, many appearing in knits, have a sober but not-too-serious look in business suits. Weekend and country jackets feature outsize windowpanes, block plaids and oversized checks.

Hacking jackets, flapped pocket models, patch-and-flap pockets are a few of the distinctly non-cliche styling details.

FINALLY HOME — Barbara Clark talked to newsmen yesterday at New York's Kennedy Airport after arriving home with a band of American tourists who had been stranded in London. Tony Steed, 14, of Hollywood, holding the placard, had no money or passport in London and was taken under the tourists' collective wing.

Stranded Tourists Home, Rip U.S.

NEW YORK (UPI)—A group of angry American tourists Thursday denounced the U.S. Embassy in London for failing to come to their assistance when they were penniless and stranded for four days at Gatwick Airport because of a canceled charter flight.

At the same time the 157 Americans praised British authorities and private citizens for their "unbelievable" hospitality in getting them welfare payments and offers of food and lodging.

The tourists, most of them teachers, arrived at Kennedy Airport on a special flight paid for by the British Caledonian Airlines and Whimpy International, a hamburger firm based in Britain.,

The group, including 140 from one canceled charter and 17 from a number of other canceled flights, was relatively lucky.

Another group of 100 Americans was still stranded in Madrid where airline officials said there was not much chance of finding seats for them back to the United States. Some of them had been stuck in Madrid for as long as five days and many said they were broke and hungry.

The travelers returning here were especially incensed by American Embassy warnings to "expect no help" and by what they interpreted as threats to call the Marine guard to evict them from the embassy.

Vance Stephens, an art teacher at Jersey State College in Jersey City, N.J., said, "all we got from the embassy was a mimeographed sheet which said 'expect no help.' The British welfare group gave each of us a couple of pounds ($5) which we intend to send back."

A delegation of five passengers went to the embassy Monday to seek aid. In the foyer they were approached by a London bobby, they said, who told them the embassy threatened to call out its Marine guard and have them evicted if they did not leave voluntarily. The passengers said there were some Marines there "making a presence" lending credence to the threat. Finally the passengers left.

The embassy officials were quoted as saying there was no help available because they had no funds to meet such situations.

The passengers said they suggested the use of military planes or that the embassy could advance them airfare using their passports as security. None of the suggestions was accepted.

"It wasn't the money so much, it was that they just didn't care. It's amazing to me that the United States, one of the richest countries in the world, can't take care of its own people in a situation like this."

The travelers, who had spent four days sleeping on benches or floors at Gatwick said hundreds of offers of food and lodging had been made to them by Englishmen living near the airport. Other British citizens brought soup and sandwiches to feed the hungry Americans.

The tourists elected, however, to stay together at the airport. A spokesman for the group said they planned to set up a fund to help any future air passengers who may become stranded at Gatwick.

Barbara Clark, a New York school teacher, said telegrams for help had been sent to President Nixon and Sen. Jacob Javits, R-N.Y., but no replies were received.

Paul Lynn, 32, of Boston said he made a collect telephone call to Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., "because I was broke." Lynn said he was unable to contact Kennedy personaliy but did speak to a member of his staff who "showed concern."

Oil Firm Geothermal Drilling In Wildlife Area Is Approved

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Efforts to develop new sources of power in California have received a boost with state approval of exploratory geothermal drilling at a wildlife area in Imperial Valley.

The state Lands Commission Thursday unanimously approved a three-year permit for the drilling by Atlantic Oil Co. The action came after the panel received an environmental report from its staff saying that the area had "great geothermal potential."

A number of geothermal wells have already been drilled in Imperial County but none has resulted in major production of electricity.

The staff report also declared that "prospecting in the Imperial Wildlife Management Area for geothermal sources of power will not have a significant detrimental environmental effect."

The Sierra Club, however, opposed granting the permit on the grounds it would create environmental damage.

In a telegram to the commission, the group warned the drilling in the area north of Niland could "jeopardize wildlife and wildlife habitat."

The 3,900-acre Wister Unit of the wildlife area is a haven for 70 species of migratory birds. It provides good hunting for ducks, geese, quail, pheasant and dove.

The Sierra Club also complained, "Adequate guarantees against possible (earth) subsidence and seismic activity have not been made." The contention was denied by F.J. Hortig, executive officer of the commission.

The telegram was written by Harriet Allen of Spring Valley, chairman of the club's Southern California regional conservation committee.

Scientists regard the Imperial Valley, an agricultural area in the southeastern corner of California, as a major potential source of geothermal energy, which could prove to be an alternative to oil or coalburning power plants.

Robert W. Rex, professor of geology at the University of California at Riverside, has estimated there is enough steam and super-heated water in the vast geothermal field beneath the Imperial Valley to supply electricity to southern California for 30 years.

The steam would be used to produce electricity by being fed into power-generating turbines.

In the environmental impact statement on Atlantic's application, the commission's staff said, "It would be performing a great disservice to the electrical power-using public to cancel the application to explore for geothermal steam at this location.

"Denial of the permits could necessitate a search for power elsewhere. This could result in construction of fossil fuel (oil or coal) plants that have far greater effects upon the natural environment than the proposed comparatively clean geothermal steam operation."

Under the terms of the permit, Atlantic will be required to take steps to prevent damage to the wildlife area adjacent to its drilling locations. The surface drilling operations will be located at least 400 feet from the boundary of the wildlife area and tap the underground sources through slant drilling.

If the company does not find a commercially usable source of geothermal energy, it will be required to restore the area to its original state.

If there is a viable source of energy, Atlantic would then have to return to the commission for permission to construct production facilities.

Chinese President

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—Ambasssador Huang Hua, China's permanent representative to the United Nations, takes over as president of ths Security Council today. Under the monthly rotation system, he succeeds Ambassador Edouard Longerstaey of Belgium.

One Youth Is Charged In Robbery

Only one of two 18-year-old Southern California youths earlier charged with kidnapping, robbing and taking the car of a Petaluma man in Novato on July 16 has been charged in Marin Superior Court.

David Wyatt Miley of Venice, Los Angeles County, pleaded innocent yesterday to the three felony charges and a jury trial was set for the week of Oct. 2.

His companion, Dale Robert Minot, also of Venice, who had been arrested with Miley was released, however, after the district attorney's office said there was not enough evidence to prosecute him.

Minot had been a backseat passenger during the events which led to the charges.

The Petaluman, Terry M. Schenbert, 20, had picked up Miley and Minot as hitchhikers in San Francisco.

Schenebert said he was forced to drive at knifepoint to an orchard near Novato where his clothes, money and car were taken.

Miley and Minot were arrested later in Humboldt County reportedly in Schenbertz's car.

Special features you'll enjoy:

What was life like in Marin County in the Gay Nineties and the earliest years of the 20th Century? The ones who can best answer that question are those who lived those years. But now they are becoming few in numbers. One of them, however, the late Meriam Stetson, left a legacy to Marin County history students of a handwritten account of his recollections from those times. Independent-Journal history writer Dorothy Gardiner uses it to re-create what it was like in Marin in the 1890s in a feature story in tomorrow's I-J Marin Magazine.

The start of another school year is almost upon us. And one of the most unusual of the Marin schools making preparations for a new term is Sausalito's North Bay School. It represents a blending of educational philosophies that have sometimes been regarded as conflicting and impossible to merge. And it reflects, too, the unusual ideas of its young director, Tom Justice. You will want to read about this original approach to elementary grade education, how it fared in its first year, and what it plans for its second year just ahead.

A WAITING CROSSROADS

Rustic lanes, their quaint names inscribed upon this signpost, stretch emptily through sheltering groves of oak, stretch emptily now, but not for long. Tomorrow, with the opening of the sixth annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire at 10 a.m., they will be thronged with colorfully costumed folk, garbed in the mode of the Elizabethan era. The fair will be open six consecutive weekends from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. off Highway 37 at Black Point.

FAMILY

"101 Dalmatians" — Clever takeoff on the British detective yarns with dogs playing the important parts. Fifteen puppies are dognapped and the hunt and chase is suspenseful.

Snoopy Come Home" — Based on Charles Schulz's beloved Peanuts comic strip this narrative follows Snoopy's adventures when he leaves his friends at the beach to visit his former owner, Lila, who is in the hospital. Eight new songs.

"What's Up, Doc?" — Set in San Francisco, treated with a sophisticated touch, this fast moving slapstick, nutty comedy revolves around a mixup with feur identical suitcases.

"Who Says You Can't Ride a Rainbow!" — Jack Klugman plays the part of a man who adores children and loves animals. He builds a small animal farm in the middle of an industrial district in New York City. There is great opposition but the solution will delight the entire family.

ADULTS AND TEENS

"Big Jake" — Raiders kidnap Big Jake's grandson and hold him for ransom. The rescue party follows them into Mexico and a cut-throat, no holds barred cat and mouse game with continuous bloody fights occur. Much violence.

"Joe Kidd" — Caught between a land fight of Mexican inhabitants and powerful landowners, Joe Kidd agrees to work for the landowners and then switches sides. Considerable violence (Boxoffice Magazine).

"Love Story" — Two young college students marry causing a rift between the young man and his father. When they decide to have a child they discover the wife has a fatal illness. Some sex scenes and strong language.

"The Man" — The intriguing question of what happens when a black man becomes president is posed in the film. The script by Rod Serling explores the situation with insight and wit.

"Salzburg Connection" — An American lawyer on business in Salzburg becomes involved in international espionage to recover a sunken chest containing names of Nazi war criminals. (Boxoffice Magazine)

"Sometimes A Great Notion" — A tense, dramatic adventure about the dangerous logging operation in a timber wilderness of Oregon. A family feud adds to the situation. Some violence and rough language.

BORDERLINE
(Most sources say Adults Only)

"Cabaret" — Set in Berlin in 1930 a zestful young American girl singer at a cabaret proclaims herself the symbol of "divine decadence". Her love affairs lead to a pregnancy where paternity is unsure. Well made film but sophisticated and bawdy with foul language and sex.

"Frenzy" — Hitchcock brings us a necktie murderer who is a sexual psychopath and on the loose in London. Very suspenseful with nudity and cursing.

"Harold And Maude" — A heavy handed film about an old woman who teaches a young man how to enjoy life. For those who can laugh at funerals, old age, suicide and mental disturbance.

"Play It Again, Sam" — In this sex comedy, Woody Allen is a dedicated movie buff and as a writer lives in a fantasy world where he gets advice from his favorite actor, Humphrey Bogart, on how to solve his sex problems.

ADULTS ONLY

"Clockwork Orange" — This film hypothesizes a state where violence is the rule that can only be broken by means of Pavlovian conditioning. A London teenage gang that hates anyone different from them roam the streets and rob, rape and terrorize. A very brutal film with sex and nudity.

"Godfather" — Gripping epic gangster film filled with excessive violence. The head of Mafia leads two lives, as a kindly head of a family and then as a leader of a mob whose business is killing.

Student Health Laws Get Tougher

All pupils under 19 years of age who will be entering school in California — public or private — for the first time this September will have to meet new immunization requirements.

Parents should get verification of their children's immunization histories to present to school officials at the time of registration, according to Marin County Health Officar Carolyn B. Albrecht.

Immunizations may be obtained from private physicians or for a nominal fee at the public health immunization clinic at 920 Grand Avenue, San Rafael from 1:30 to 4 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays and Fridays.

Independent Candidate Storer Takes Ballot Plea To Court

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — California election law unconstitutionally bars independent candidates from the ballot, former Marin County Supervisor Thomas T. Storer yesterday told the U.S. District Court.

Storer wants to run as a nonpartisan candidate on the November ballot in the Sixth Congressional District, but says the election law makes it impossible to qualify for the ballot.

The law requires independent candidates to collect 9,322 signatures between Aug. 15 and Sept. 8, and no registered voter signing can have voted in the June primary election.

Storer's attorney, Paul T. Halvonik of the American Civil Liberties Union, told the three-judge panel that "nobody's supposed to quality as an independent candidate. Nobody ever has, because there are no procedures that make it possible."

The law was defended by Deputy Atty. Gen. Clayton Roche, who argued the state has a "compelling interest in protecting the party system." The law was designed to maintain the integrity of political party affiliation, he said.

Deputy Marin County Counsel John M. Cohan argued that changing he law at this late date would "result in such severe disruption of the election process as to prevent its orderly functioning."

He said the state's write-in procedures satisfy constitutional requirements for allowing voters to ballot for their choice.

The court took the issue under submission, and an early decision was expected. Marin officials said the court had the power to extend state deadlines for independents to qualify for the ballot.

The judges considering Storer's case are Robert H. Schnacke of San Francisco, William G. East of Portland and retired Court of Appeals Judge Oliver D. Hamlin.

Storer, an attorney residing in Point Reyes Station and with offices in Novato, had announced last October he would run for the seat held by Republican William S. Mailliard of San Francisco. The district includes Marin. Storer was a Democrat, but reregistered to a "declined to state" party preference category.

He said in January that partisan politics "is a thick jungle infested with poisonous vipers and man-eating monsters, most of whom don't give a damn about the average citizens."

Cash Box Looted

Cash totaling $220 was taken yesterday or today from Gene's Chevron station, 101 Red Hill Avenue, San Anselmo, by a thief who broke in through a back door and looted a cash box, police reported today.

Tax Reform Will Be Key In McGovern's Campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. George S. McGovern and running mate Sargent Shriver met for more than an hour today in an effort to tie up what the Democratic presidential nominee called "some loose ends" of the campaign organization.

The South Dakota senator told an impromptu news conference on the driveway of his home in northwest Washington, near Georgetown, that he and Shriver will hammer away at the issue of tax reform throughout their campaign against President Nixon.

McGovern conceded there were organizational problems in the Democratic camp: "I don't think there is any doubt about it that we have to continue to improve."

McGovern conceded that he and Shriver are underdogs, but predicted victory despite Nixon's seemingly commanding lead in the public opinion polls.

"We are trying to tie down some of the loose ends this week," McGovern said.

The candidate occasionally tried to change the subject to campaign issues —especially taxes —but each time, newsmen returned to the campaign's organizational problems.

Showing some irritation, McGovern demanded: "When was the last time you asked questions like this of Richard Nixon?" He said Nixon is unavailable to the public and news media while "we are wide open."

"I think Mr. Shriver and I both found ... that the one issue Americans are concerned about is tax reform," McGovern said. "Both of us are going to hammer on that issue from now until November."

Shriver stood at McGovern's side during the meeting with newsmen, but most of the questions were directed at McGovern. Shriver did say he thought the organizational problems were "greatly exaggerated."

McGovern said Thursday he expects to begin closing the gap in the polls—34 points in the most recent Gallup Poll—by Oct. 1 and move steadily up until the Nov. 7 election.

"I think we will win," he said.

"The poll situation is much better now than it was when I was seeking the nomination," he said. "We thought it was a good day when we hit 5 per cent in the Gallup Poll.

"The polls don't mean very much two months before the election," he added.

But there was little doubt that the Democratic campaign was having its trouble. Lawrence F. O'Brien, who has the title of campaign chairman but whose duties are loosely defined, complainedthat the whoe operation was disorganized and uncoordinated.

An aide to O'Brien said the organizational problems were discussed during a stormy three-hour meeting of McGovern's top associates at the candidate's home Wednesday night. He said O'Brien was encouraged by the tone of that session.

Brown Hits Reagan On Spending Program

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. yesterday charged the Reagan administration's effort to cut state spending has given California the "most inefficient and costly" government in the state's history.

In a speech to the Barristers Club of San Francisco, Brown said Reagan is "striving for economy" but has adopted "outmoded management policies" which are costing the state money.

"Our state budget has increased by 78 per cent since Reagan took office," Brown said. "Ironically, much of this money is being spent on cumbersome bureaucratic procedures initiated by the governor in an effort to cut down government spending."

The Democratic secretary of state said the state's departments and agencies must "fight their way through a bureaucratic maze" when they want to purchase supplies, install telephones or hire a temporary clerk.

As an example, he cited the state's general policy of requiring agencies to purchase furniture such as desks and chairs, from a state agency which makes furniture.

"I have found that we can purchase better furniture for less money from private sources, yet we are forced to spend more for the more flimsy state-made furniture," he said.

"The governor obviously wants to hold down government costs but his methods have backfired and had just the opposite results," he added.

UBAC Sets Schedule Of Fund Events

The United Bay Area Crusade has announced a schedule of events marking its 15th anniversary fund raising campaign.

Next week, contests will be hald in each of the five UBAC counties to select an outstanding Crusade-supported agency representative. The five chosen will later compete for the title of "Golden Crusader".

The Marin contest will be held in the board of supervisors chambers at the Civic Center at 10 a.m. Thursday. Agencies competing are: Camp Fire Girls, Inc.; Marin Family Service Agency; St. Vincent's School for Boys; YMCU and the American National Red Cross.

Judges in the Marin Competition will include Peter R. Arrigoni, chairman of the board of supervisors; Robert Dinsmore, general manager of radio station KTIM; J. Galen Foster, Marin UBAC chairman; Mrs. Robert W. Miller and Mrs. August B. Rothschild.

The Crusade's fiftieth anniversary dinner will be held Oct. 5 in the St. Francis hotel in San Francisco.

UBAC has proclaimed Oct. 22 at "50th Anniversary Crusade Day," and will be celebrated simultaneously from noon to 4 p.m. in Stern Grove in San Francisco and at the bandstand in Lakeside Park at Lake Merritt in Oakland.

Agency exhibits, tennis exhibition matches, an antique car parade, balloon races and other events will be featured at both locations. The Oakland Symphony Orchestra will perform at Lakeside Park.

On Nov. 21 the overall winner of the Golden Crusader contest will be announced at a final campaign report dinner, at a location yet to be named.

Mill Valley Given Grant To 18-Acres

I-J Special Report

SACRAMENTO — The State Lands Commission yesterday gave the City of Mill Valley a permanent grant of 18 acres in the city's long-stalled small-craft harbor.

There was no opposition, the commission's staff reported.

The commission granted the tidelands to the city more than 10 years ago on condition that they be "substantially improved" within 10 years. The staff recommended the permanent grant, reporting that the city has met this condition by improving public access to the shoreline.

The fact that the public is forbidden use of the harbor area because of gross pollution from the city's sewage system was termed a temporary condition by the commission's staff.

Speeding Car Loses Control, Heavily Damages Gas Station

Traveling at an estimated 60 miles an hour, a Corte Madera women's car hit a curb on Paradise Drive yesterday, careened 280 feet, smashed into a water hydrant, then bounded off and demolished the gasoline pumps of Schardt Brothers Mobil station, setting them afire.

Using fire extinguishers and hoses, gas station personnel doused the potentially disastrous fire before the Corte Madera Fire Department arrived.

The driver, Betty Jane Butscher, 46, of 5 Windward Drive, was taken by ambulance to Marin General Hospital where she was reported today in satisfactory condition with multiple fractures.

The crash wiped out the station's entire service island, and estimated the cost of the damage at $1,800 for a double pump, $900 for a single pump, and $250 for the light fixture and island.

Corte Madera police said the accident happened at 5:03 p.m. Witnesses reported Mrs. Butscher traveling at around 60 miles per hour from San Clemente Drive then hitting a curb in front of Paradise Shopping Center.

Her car swerved back onto the road, hit the water hydrant near the entrance to the gas station, then smashed into the front island. Her car was extensively damaged and she was pinned inside the car for a while.

Explosion Blackens Hospital Restroom

A plastic "electro-match" manufactured in Hong Kong briefly turned into a Molotov cocktail at Marin General Hospital yesterday when it exploded into flames in a ground floor women's restroom.

Kentfield fire chief Kenneth Kamp said a volunteer in the hospital gift shop in the foyer was handling the $13 automatic lighter when fluid leaked over her hands.

She ran to the restroom and threw it into a sink — where it ignited. The fire was out by the time Kentfield fire department arrived, he said, but had blackened the restroom.

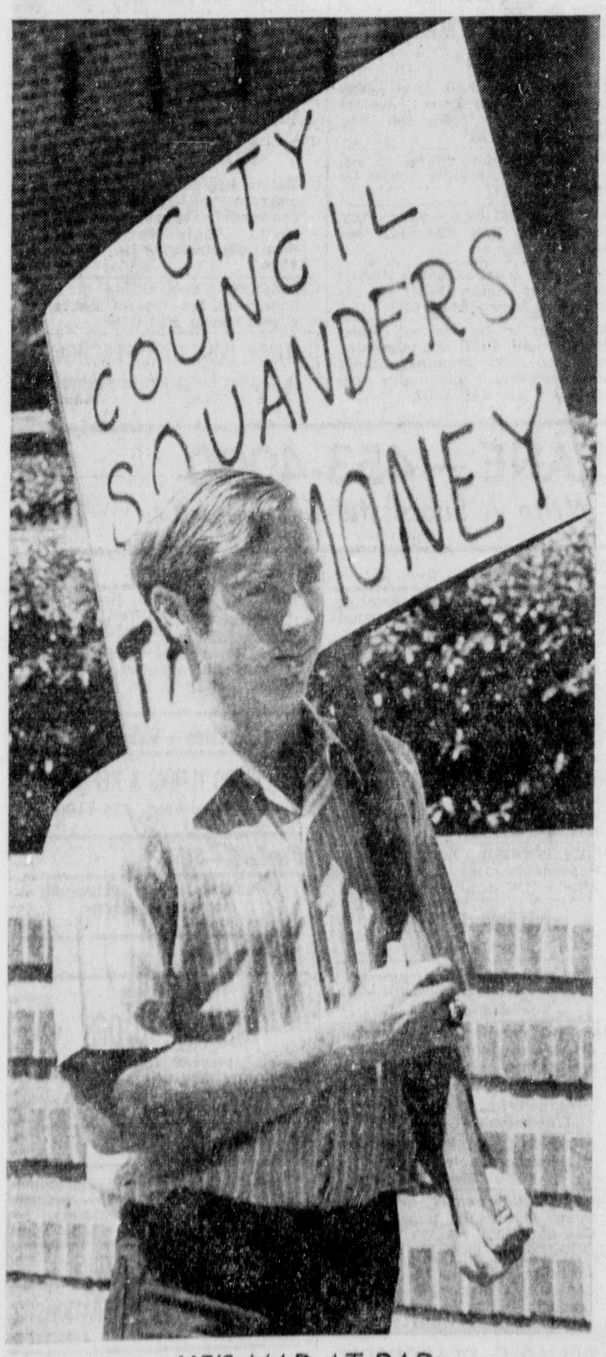
Chief Kamp said he considers the battery operated electro-match unsafe for sale in a hospital and is securing some to determine the fire hazard. He said they are round devices, some four or five inches in length, and when a metal rod is pulled from the top it becomes a hot match, the ignition caused by an electrical arc. They are widely sold in department and specialty stores.

Yesterday's fire at Marin General Hospital came right on the original deadline the Marin Hospital District Board had been given by the Kentfield Fire District to approve a $10,059 proposed contract for fire protection for 1972-73. Protection hitherto has cost a token $1.

No agreement has yet been reached on the contract and the deadline has been extended to Wednesday, said Chief Kamp.

On that date the board of the Kentfield Fire Protection District will meet at 7:30 p.m. at the Kentfield fire station to consider its negotiations with the hospital board. Meanwhile, fire protection will continue to be furnished.

As an exempt organization in county territory, the hospital doesn't pay taxes to the fire district.



HE'S MAD AT DAD

San Rafael Patrolman Harry A. Barbier Jr., son of the San Rafael city councilman, marches in front of city hall with a sign complaining that his father and fellow councilmen squander tax money. San Rafael safety personnel — irate because the council rejected a mediation team's report which cost the city $2,125 — have been picketing city hall since Wednesday and plan to continue their vigil through next week. Police and firemen want a 5 per cent salary increase retroactive to July 1 and a $15 increase in monthly insurance benefits, as recommended by the mediators.

Pre-School Sets Parent Meeting

The beginning school in Marin City will hold open house for parents of prospective students Thursday at 8 p.m. at the school in St. Andrew's United Presbyterian Church, Drake and Donohue streets.

Director Jerri Coleman and her staff will meet with parents and accept registrations for children aged 3 to 5.

BUILDING POLICY

San Anselmo Planners Seek Temporary Ban

By LARRY MOWELL

Although avoiding the word "moratorium," the San Anselmo Planning Commission last night asked for a draft of what would be one of the strictest temporary bans on building, rezoning and subdividing in Marin County.

The commission asked the city attorney to draft an ordinance for public hearing Sept. 11 to cover all undeveloped parcels, large and small, and all commercial lots, already developed or not.

However, the commission proposed to leave an out for builders by setting up a variance procedure and waiving the $25 variance fee for applicants who could develop without a variance in the absence of the proposed emergency ordinance.

The four-month measure aimed at giving the city a breathing spell to draw up its general plan and determine what parcels it wants to keep open, could be extended for a period of two years.

Although the moratoriums adopted by other cities in Marin have concentrated on the larger parcels of land, the ordinance proposed last night would prevent any permanent change to undeveloped land without ause permit.

But commissioners and some in the audience of nine said the ordinance would not prevent building, but would stop denser building than is now allowed. "It is not stopping the use of the land. It is just stopping the change of the use," spectator Conrad Williams said.

Although the commissioners present unanimously backed the ban, two spectators dissented, even from two less stringent proposals the commission started with.

Alma R. Wiederhoeft of Butterfield Road said, "I'm against the moratorium. I just don't like the idea. I think you have enough tools as it is now."

And Attilio Segale of Holstein Road said, "What do you want to do? Kill everything, shut down the town? I think we should leave everything status-quo. Leave everything the way it is. You guys can take care of it."

He contended San Anselmo doesn't have enough open space left to worry about and suggested leaning on the county to slow development in nearby unincorporated areas.

Commissioners answered that the ban would not hurt property value and said the best way to deal with the county would be to enforce a ban in San Anselmo first.

Others in the audience urged the commission to move quickly. "Anything you do is almost too late," Williams said. "There has got to be a stop to this frenzy of quick developing everything." Four others backed his argument.

Consideration of a rezoning ban began in July when Councilman Dr. Martin R. Blinder proposed an immediate stop to all rezoning that would increase density on parcels larger than an acre, on subdividing any large parcels and on using steep areas at all.

But Commissioner David A. Strassman said the proposal "smacks of getting on the bandwagon" and said San Rafael's ordinance seemed to be better thought out.

The commissioners favored the San Rafael ordinance as a format. San Rafael currently bars any permanent change to parcels of more than two acres or to five adjoining parcels without a use permit.

But the commission then went even further to reflect the sentiment of one spectator who said, "There is really no argument against it. Property once developed cannot be undeveloped. If you develop it now and then change your mind, there is not much you can do about it."

Absent from the meeting were commissioners Allen J. Creighton, John H. Colteaux and Daniel Goltz.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Borderline Anemia May Cause Fatigue, Dizziness Or Numbness

Borderline anemia may cause a variety of symptoms, including fatigue, dizziness, nervousness, headache, numbness, or shortness of breath. In many instances, iron brings relief even before the blood count has a chance to improve. This is puzzling, because this form of anemia is not severe enough to cause too much trouble.

Many victims are women who have been on iron-deficient dietsбfor years. Meanwhile, they may have lost iron during menstruation or bleeding from other sources. Regardless of cause, the body has responded by using up stored iron in bone marrow. Apparently, this supply must be depleted before the blood count demonstrates signs of anemia.

Special isotope tests show that the best response is obtained by women who have very little iron in the bone marrow. When given iron tablets, the majority become peppy and are relieved of distress. But treatment must be continued until the "storage bins" are also filled.

IN OUR COUNTRY iron deficiency is primarily a problem of rapidly growing infants and children and of women during the childbearing years. Iron needs are greater at these times. But anemia occurs also in persons suffering from chronic and repeated blood loss, especially from the gastrointestinal tract and uterus. These secondary iron-deficiency anemias are best treated by prophylaxis or eliminating the cause of bleeding. If this is not possible, prolonged administration of iron is necessary.

IRON PREPARATIONS cause abdominal distress and diarrhea in some people. If the shortage cannot be made up with iron-rich foods, the physician may prescribe injections of an iron-dextran product. Some people do not absorb iron that is obtained in foods or taken in tablet form. This rare cause of anemia is corrected via iron injections. Iron plus the oral use of dilute hydrochloric acid is often beneficial.

ORANGE BINGES

M. L. writes: I get home from work at 10 p.m. nd look at TV until midnight. During this time I eat one dozec oranges. Will this hurt my teeth or any part of my body?

REPLY

No, but brush your teeth before you go to bed. Some people have peculiar reactions to large amounts of citrus fruit. However, if you are not bothered, there is no harm in the practice, provided you can afford it.

SMOKING AND WRINKLES

Miss M. writes: Is smoking deleterious to the complexion?

REPLY

Recent studies implicate smoking in the development of crow's-feet and wrinkles. Yellowed fingers result when the cigaret is held upside down, allowing the smoke to curl between the digits. Occasionally a smoker's lip becomes irritated.

BEFORE THE PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

Application of Pacific Gas and Electric Company for authority to revise its gas service tariff to offset the effect of increases in the price of gas from Pacific Gas Transmission Company and El Paso Natural Gas Company.

APPLICATION
No. 53552

PACIFIC GAS AND ELECTRIC COMPANY hereby gives notice that in Application No. 53552, filed with the California Public Utilities Commission on August 28, 1972, it has requested authorization to revise its gas service tariff to offset the effect of increases in the price of gas purchased from Pacific Gas Transmission Company, caused by an increase in the price of Canadian gas, and from El Paso Natural Gas Company. Should reductions and refunds be ordered pertaining to these increases, PGandE proposes to reduce its offset rates accordingly and to make appropriate refunds to its customers.

PGandE proposes (a) to increase its gas rates on October 1, 1972, to offset an increase in the cost of gas purchased from PGT which becomes effective on that date, and (b) to increase its gas rates on January 1, 1973, to offset an increase in the cost of gas purchased from El Paso which becomes effective on that date.

The proposed PGandE offset rate increase to be effective October 1, 1972, amounts to 1.7% for firm industrial customers and 1.2% for general service customers, including domestic customers. The proposed offset rate increase to be effective January 1, 1973, amounts to 0.3% for firm industrial customers and 0.2% for general service customers, including domestic customers.

A copy of the application and related exhibits may be examined at the offices of the California Public Utilities Commission, State Building, 350 McAllister Street, San Francisco, California 94102; at Pacific Gas and Electric Company, 77 Beale Street (Room 3107), San Francisco, California 94106; and c/o the Division Managers in PGandE's Division Headquarters in Eureka, Red Bluff, Chico, Marysville, Sacramento, Auburn, San Rafael, San Francisco, Oakland, San Jose, Salinas, Fresno, and Stockton.

A $600 Million Surplus

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state of California ended the fiscal year on June 30 with a surplus of $600 million in taxpayers money, Controller Houston Flournoy said yesterday.

Flournoy also told a news conference he has named a task force to recommend changes in the state's accrual accounting system to make it less confusing to the public.

The controller said the state had an accumulated surplus of $600,340,742 at the end of fiscal 1971-72. The figure was based on revenues accrued but not actually received by June 30.

THE SURPLUS

After deducting $34 million as a reserve for continuing appropriations, Flournoy said, the state's general fund had an unappropriated surplus of $565,654,491.

He said the figures included a June 30 cash balance of $256.2 million and $309.4 million which under state law must be held in reserve to meet any cash flow problems.

Flournoy said he ordered the task force study because of the law which requires that the working capital reserve ($309.4 million) be determined as the difference between the cash surplus and the eventual unappropriated surplus.

The controller said the current method of determining the reserve produces an "artificial figure" which has no direct relationship to what the actual fiscal needs of the state are.

'COULD FAIL'

He said the reserve figure "could fail to meet the ongoing cash needs of the general fund, or it could grow out of all proportion to what is needed."

Flournoy said the laws prescribing current accounting methods have become so complicated and confusing that the public has "difficulty understanding the true fiscal situation of state government."

He said the task force, to be headed by Chief Deputy Controller Kirk West, will study the current system and, if needed, recommend a new formula for determining working capital reserve that is "more compatible with sound cash management."

Julia Childs Show May Be Dropped

David O. Ives, president of WGBH in Boston which has produced the show for nine years, said Thursday unless new funds become available only four new shows can be produced for the season starting Oct. 1. The rest of the season will have to be reruns and the program will be dropped entirely if a new underwriter is not found by January.

By PETER TONGE
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

BOSTON — Eileen J. is fairly representative of the more than four million passengers who flew the "little airlines" of America last year. She loves them. Indeed she considers them indispensable.

Their names don't stare up from the glossy pages of travel and other magazines; they advertise very little, in fact. And at the major airports they are generally confined to some out-of-the-way corner.

Nevertheless they have become an established and increasingly important segment of the United States airline industry.

They're the commuter or third-level carriers; the little companies with the even-smaller aircraft, not well known in the cities but needed and respected in the outlying communities they serve.

The rapid decline of the railroads and the frequently indifferent bus service to non-metropolitan America has enchanced this importance.

As Eileen tells it, she barely knew third-level carriers existed until her husband was transferred to a small town in Maine. She was moving "to the back of beyond," in her opinion. Even so, to visit her family in Indianapolis still takes little more than a four-hour journey — because the service offered by a comuter airline from the Maine town to Boston cuts what would otherwise be a five-hour bus ride into a 35-minute hop. Moreover the 10-seat plane puts her down right at the airport from where the major airlines depart.

Eileen's experience is repeated a thousand and more times throughout the U.S. every day. In fact of the 4.4 million passengers enplaned by third-level carriers last year, fully 80 per cent were connecting with major airlines, according to a Department of Transportation survey.

As an industry spokesman puts it: "In effect we're a feeder industry. We operate largely to transfer business passengers and freight to the major airlines."

Third-level importance is further high-lighted by these figures: The United States has more than 10,000 airports. Some 3,000 are paved and lighted. Yet not many more than 500 are served by the big-plane operators.

In fact, though trunk (long-haul) and local service (short-haul) carriers have grown explosively during the past 25 years, they are serving fewer airports today than they did in the early 1950's, according to the National Air Transportation Conferences, Inc. (NATC), the national body of the commuter lines. A Brookings Institute researcher, George C. Eads, confirms this in his study, "The Local Service Airline Experiment."

Growth of the commuter airlines, then, has been largely outside the Civil Aeronautics Board's (CAB) certified local service carriers. The advent of the jetliner with its greater seat capacity and its long-run, high-flying economy had made its operators increasingly reluctant to make short runs. They have become uneconomical despite federal subsidies ($1 billion over the past 25 years) designed to maintain service to small communities.

Says an airline executive: "In many instances the revenue from the few passengers we would pick up at these airports wouldn't even pay for the additional fuel a plane used up in landing and takeoff, let alone cover the landing fees."

By contrast, a small plane (third-level carriers have been using anything from 2 to 20-seat planes) can frequently operate economically under these circumstances. Thus what had begun as an air taxi business with perhaps three or four companies operating — in the Boston, New York City, and Los Angeles areas — quickly developed into an airplane business with regularly scheduled runs. In 1960 there were five such companies; today there are 99, plus another 70 or so in the freight-carrying or charter-taxi business.

Despite the apparent opportunities and despite the spectacular growth of the commuter airline business, this is not a "money-for-jam" type of business. The industry has a sizeable share of problems. Last year little more than half of the operators reported a profit.

Commuter airlines are not granted the CAB's certificate of public convenience and necessity. This means among other things that they are not obliged to keep servicing an unprofitable route. They can abandon it without appeal to the CAB.

On the other hand they are not eligible for subsidies and receive no route protection. The size of the aircraft, too, is limited — tough restrictions have just been eased to allow for 30 passengers and a payload capacity of 7,000 pounds — and they are not permitted to engage in joint fares with the certificated airlines.

Rep. Bob Wilson, R-Calif. has introduced the Commuter Air Carrier Bill in the House of Representatives. It is designed to grant a limited form of certification to those commuter carriers seeking it.

Route protection would be the principal advantage. "We don't seek a monopoly on any particular route," says an industry spokesman. Indeed CAB would grant flying rights to as many commuter airlines it felt a route warranted.

Banks, too, would be more interested in advancing loans to airlines enjoying reasonable route protection. Banks in the local communities serviced by the small carriers have expressed an eagerness to join in such ventures but "not until route protection takes much of the risk out of the operation."

Candidates' Name Policy Due Review

The Marin County Board of Education's difficulties over its previous policy of not releasing names of candidates for board vacancies will occupy much of the board's meeting Tuesday at 8 p.m. at the county schools office, Corte Madera.

Members are slated to act on procedures for board appointments and vacancies under which all names will be released.

Also on the agenda is discussion of the successful suit by Pieter Toal challenging the board's policy against disclosure and his request for attorney's fees. Deputy Supt. Byron Mauzy said if a favorable decision on the fee request by Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson is handed down by Tuesday, board members will decide whether to pay or appeal.

An emergency, 60-day appointment to the County Schools Personnel Commission will be made at the meeting to enable the commission to carry on business. Two of its three members recently resigned. Permanent appointments to the commission will be made at a future meeting.

Three From Marin Earn Davis Degrees

Three Marin County residents received bachelor of arts or science degrees at the summer session of the University of California at Davis.

They were Luana E. Long and Herbert M. Rowland Jr., both of San Rafael, and Richard P. Hewitt of Mill Valley.

NO WAY TO TREAT A DOLPHIN

Soviet Union's Borzov Triumphs Over Depleted 100-Meter Field

Hart, Robinson Of U.S. Disqualified In Mixup

MUNICH (UPI) — Valeri Borzov broke in front at the start and breezed home with easy winner today to become the first Russian in Olympic history ever to win the 100-meter dash.

Borzov's triumph became a foregone conclusion yesterday when United States stars Eddie Hart and Ray Robinson were disqualified after missing their quarter-final heats.

The victory enabled the Soviet Union to add to its lead in Olympic medals. The Russians' Lakov Zhelizniak shot a world record 569 hits in the moving target rifle shoot to bring the team total to 15 golds and 37 total, compared to 12 and 32 for the U.S.

In track and field, Steve Smith of Torrance, Calif., who is one of the six pole vaulters in the world who has cleared 18 feet, failed to make the qualifying height of 16-5 and was eliminated.

Also put out was 18-footer Kjell Isaksson of Sweden, who was hampered by a pulled hamstring muscle.

And Kathy Schmidt of Long Beach, Calif., provided the 32nd medal, a surprise bronze for third place in the women's javelin.

U.S. lightweight boxer James Busceme of Beaumont, Tex., was awarded an unpopular decision over Prai A Nan Vichit of Thailand, to score the 10th American victory in 11 bouts.

Borzov was timed in 10.14 seconds to defeat Robert Taylor of Houston, Tex. and Lennox Miller of Jamaica.

Miller, the former University of Southern California star, finished in 10.33.

It was only the sixth time in 20 Olympics that an American runner has not captured the shortest event of the track and field competition.

The other went to Ruth Fuchs of East Germany, who set an Olympic record in the javelin of 209 feet, 7 inches.

The silver medal went to Jaqueline Podten of East Germany with 205-2 and third was Kathy Schmidt of Long Beach, Calif., with 196-8.

Borzov's victory was the first in the 100 for a non-American since the 1960 games in Rome where Armin Hary of West Germany was the victor.

Meanwhile, U.S. runner Vince Matthews said he and fellow 400-meter star Wayne Collett were almost thrown off the team by coach Bill Bowerman, apparently because the duo did not want to run in pre-Olympic warmup meets and adhere to Bowerman's training methods.

"There were reports that he (Bowerman) was going to put myself and Collett off the team," said Matthews. Bowerman said in a news conference prior to the games that he almost sent one unnamed athlete home.

With the exception of two gold medals by swimmer Mark Spitz, the most sensational performances by U.S. athletes Thursday were in wrestling where the Americans won six medals, the first time they had done this well since 1924.

Golds went to lightweight Dan Gable of Waterloo, Iowa, welterweight Wayne Wells of Norman, Okla., and light heavyweight Ben Peterson of Comstock, Wis. Peterson's brother, John, a middleweight, and Rick Sanders of Lakeview, Ore., won silvers and 400-pound Chris Taylor of Dowagiac, Mich., won a bronze.

San Rafael High School physical education teachers Tom Dooley and Goetz Klopfer finished back in the pack in the 20kilometer walk Thursday. Dooley, from San Carlos, was 15th, while Larkspur's Klopfer was 19th.

49er-Raider Clash: More Than Exhibition

Time has come for that annual exhibition game between cross bay rivals 49ers and Raiders and I don't hear too many people breaking down doors trying to put their bankroll on the 49ers.

Although it's just an exhibition thing, the closeness — in proximity, not feelings — of the two teams has a way of making the game mean more than your ordinary pre-season game. Even if the players don't say it, you can feel more excitement in the air when these two football powers collide.

Sunday's game will be in Candlestick Park so the slight advantage of the homefield goes to the 49ers. They will need every advantage they can muster. The way I hear some Raider fans talk the game won't even be close. It will be a rout, say the Raider people. The 49er fans, wisely, are saying nothing. But many are expecting the worst.

After all, injuries have stolen some of the best and meanest players from the 49er lineup. When you lose players like Jimmy Johnson, Ken Willard and Cedrick Hardman it's pretty hard to make up the loss. In all, 11 veterans had some form of injury this week.

The Raiders are having a grand time knocking off opponents on the exhibition schedule. The silver and black team, lovingly referred to as The Organization by bossman Al Davis, has beaten New England, Baltimore, Los Angeles and Buffalo for a 4-0 record. San Francisco beat Cleveland but stumbled against the New York Jets, San Diego and Denver.

Oakland has a 4-1 edge in the preseason series against the 49ers. In the only regular season meeting, San Francisco won, 38-7, but the thrill of triumph was bittered because the Raiders had already clinched a division title and the Raider fan shout before the game was: "Who cares?"

I haven't called Jimmy the Greek in Las Vegas but I don't think he is favoring the 49ers in this one.

Oakland is neck deep in talent, especially in the department responsible for catching passes. If the Denver Bronco no-name receivers were able to beat the 49er secondary, wait until the likes of Fred Biletnikoff, Warren Wells and Raymond Chester get their chance.

San Francisco fans will get their first look at No. 1 draft choice Terry Beasley, the boyish looking wide receiver from Auburn University. Out of action with a broken toe, it will be Terry's first game test as a 49er.

The Raider coaching staff will also be taking a long, hard look at a wide receiver — Warren Wells. He hasn't been his old self since coming out of jail so his job is in jeopardy.

NINER NOTES — The Protectors are back. The S.F. offensive line has blocked so well in the first

Waivers Withdrawn For Wells

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — The Oakland Raiders have withdrawn wide receiver Warren Wells from their National Football League waiver list and will play him Sunday against San Francisco. But his future is still uncertain.

"We'll play him against the 49ers and see what happens," said managing general partner Al Davis Thursday. "We really don't know what we're going to do about him at this point ... He doesn't seem able to concentrate. That year away does something to you."

Wells missed the 1971 season serving a sentence for probation violation after conviction on an attempted rape charge.

Wide receiver Rod Sherman, in his sixth pro season, was waived to Denver. "Rod wanted to come to camp," Davis said, "but coach John Madden didn't want him up here."

Although the Raiders keep their waiver list confidential, it was believed there were about 15 names on it — three or four more than needed to out the squad to the limit of 49.

49ERS CUT THREE FROM THE ROSTER

SANTA ROSA (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers Thursday cut safety Jackie Walker, defensive end Steve Setzler and kicker Tom Wittum to lower the club's roster to 49 players.

Walker was a sixth-round draft choice from University of Tennessee, Setzler was from St. John's of Minnesota and Wittum from Northern Illinois.

The 49ers said Wittum would join the taxi squad.

Softball Results

Night Club scored nine runs in the fifth inning before any men were retired to rally from an 11-5 deficit and defeat Don Rumpf Golf Shop, 14-11, last night in a San Rafael Recreational Department adult softball league game at Albert Park. In other action, New York Life belted McKee's, 13-1.

FUTURE IN DOUBT

Marichal Taken From Rotation

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants open a three-game series against the Pittsburgh Pirates tonight with Juan Marichal on the shelf.

Marichal, 5-15 and winding up his poorest season in the majors, was taken out of the pitching rotation by Manager Charley Fox after reinjuring a groin pull in his last outing against St. Louis. It was the latest in a series of injuries which have befallen the proud right-hander this season.

Juan said he will make a decision this winter on whether to retire from baseball. He is already signed to a $100,000-plus contract for next season.

"Assuming I'm still owned by the Giants, and I honestly, truly pray that I will be, then if I find out next spring a return to my high leg kick isn't possible, I quit," said Marichal.

He owns hundreds of acres of produce land in his native Dominican Republic and says he won't need his baseball income. Marichal also revealed he and fellow countryman Felipe Alou are thinking of buying the Escondido baseball club in the Dominican Republic League.

Left-hander Ron Bryant (10-6) will open for the Giants tonight against Dock Ellis (11-7 . San Francisco follows with Sam McDowell (8-7) and Jim Barr (6-7).

Outfielder Gary Matthews has been called up from Phoenix by the Giants and will join the club Monday in San Diego. Matthews set a Phoenix club record with 104 runs batted in while hitting .323 with 21 homers.

2 Marinites In Net Wins

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Sharon Walsh of San Rafael and Mike Machette of Belvedere won first round matches yesterday in the U.S. Open Tennis Championships.

Miss Walsh turned back Lita Liam of Indonesia, 7-6, 3-6, 6-3 and tomorrow faces Sue Stap of Deerfield, Ill., a 4-6, 6-4, 6-3 winner over Mary Ann Beattie of St. Louis.

Machette, a member of the University of Southern California tennis team, advanced after a slow start against Milan Holecek of Czechoslovakia. He lost the first set, 1-6, and then came back, 7-6, 6-4, 6-4.

THE FIELD

As the fields of 148 men and 80 women battled through first round tests Wednesday and again on Thursday, only the mild upset of 15th seeded Jimmy Connors by Tom Gorman on opening day detracted from the manner in which the top players were supposed to advance.

Today, however, defending champion Stan Smith can run into serious trouble against unseeded Clark Graebner. Smith, the winner over Jan Kodes in last year's final and the Wimbledon winner in July over Ilie Nastase of Romania, was far from impressive in defeating 15-year-old Billy Martin in four sets in nis first round, and Graebner, in-and-out in many matches, is a fine grass court player.

Stan played erratically at Wimbledon, before hitting his real stride in the five-set final with Nastase. But the draw in England was an easy one for Stan and he had time to get accustomed to grass after leading the U.S. to victory over Chile on clay immediately prior to Wimbledon.

GIRLS DOMINATE

Thursday's play was dominated by the girls, and there wasn't a ripple of excitement among the class performers as all nine seeds swept through without the loss of a set.

The crowd gave third-seeded Chris Evert, their darling of a year ago, a great welcome, and Chris proceeded to hand Laurie Tenney of Los Angeles a 6-1, 6-1 beating. Previously, her arch rival Evonne Goolagong, second seeded, had made a determined debut here by refusing to "walkabout" in disposing of South Africa's Brenda Kirk, 6-2, 6-2.

The self-proclaimed "old lady," Billie Jean King, tested the court grass for six games, then whisked away to a 6-3, 6-2 win over Patti Hogan of LaJolla, Calif.

ROSIE CASALS

Nancy Richey Gunter allowed Marilyn Aschner of Queens, N.Y. only one game in the second set but Francoise Durr was a bit more charitable in a 6-4, 6-1 win over Brenda Garcia of Lafayette, Calif.

Virginia Wade, eighth seed but the winner of te first open in 1968 over Mrs. King, looked fine as she tested her strokes in defeating Isabel Fernandez of Colombia, 6-4, 6-3 and Kerry Melville of Australia, the ninth seed, took out Russia's Marina Kroshina, 6-2, 6-4.

SCORES

Nastase, the fourth seed, got to business by walloping Venezuela's Jairo Velasco, 6-0, 6-2, 6-0 and Marty Riessen of Evanston, Ill. ninth seeded, put out Geoff Masters of Australia, 6-3, 7-5, 3-6, 6-3.

So little attention was paid the men that a meeting of two former champions, Australians Fred Stolle and Roy Emerson, played in the stadium to a silent audience. Stolle won it, 67, 6-4, 6-2, 6-2.

A's Host Showdown Vs. Tigers

Bolstered by the acquisition of slugger Frank Howard from the Texas Rangers, the Tigers open a three-game set tied with Baltimore for the lead in the American League East. Oakland is nursing a 1½-game bulge over the Chicago White Sox in the AL West.

Detroit manager Billy Martin says he will platoon Howard, who has hit 369 home runs, at first base with Norm Cash.

For the rest of the series, Vida Blue (5-7) faces Mickey Lolich (19-11) on Saturday and Jim Hunter (17-7) goes against Woody Fryman (3-1) Sunday.

In the last confrontation between the teams, the A's won two of three games in Detroit Aug. 21-23. But the Tigers were without Howard at the time.

The 36-year-old veteran, who led the American League with 44 homers in 1968 and 1970, was used sparingly at Texas this season. He appeared in only 94 games and hit nine homers while batting .247.

But Martin feels the mammoth first baseman will give the Tigers needed longball power for the stretch drive for the pennant.

San Diego Boy In Junior Golf Tourney Lead

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)— Jack Renner of San Diego retained his two-stroke lead in the 72-hole Junior World Golf tournament with a two-over-par 74 Thursday in the third round at the Torrey Pines south course.

The tournament, involving 540 youngsters from 26 nations, was to end Friday on the same links with Renner leading Richard Friedman of suburban Spring Valley, 219-221. Friedman, who recently returned here from Seattle, also carded a third-round 74.

Maxvill Hits .220, But He's Valuable

ST. LOUIS — When was the last time a .220-hitting shortstop was saluted as Sportsman of the Year outside his own family? It happened just a couple of days ago here in St. Louis at the South Side Kiwanis Club's annual shindig when Dal Maxvill was so honored.

That may not sound like big stuff elsewhere but locally it gets a big play in the Post-Dispatch and Globe-Democrat. Maxville must be quite a guy to get the Kiwanis Club's 1972 silver tray which in past years was awarded to such St. Louis Baseball greats as Terry Moore and Stan Musial.

NOW, MAXVILL brings his team spirit and fielding talent to the Bay Area as a newly-acquired member of the Oakland A's

Red Schoendienst had this to say about Maxvill: "I can't say enough about him. He's willing to do anything he can for the team." Then, slipping in a light touch, the manager of the Cardinals added: "My only criticism of him is that he's a lousy shot when he goes hunting."

Musial, now senior vice president of the Cardinals, commented this way about Maxvill: "He always gives 100 per cent. He's not only a good player but the mainstay of our infield."

JOE MONAHAN, super scout of the Cardinals who signed Maxvill in 1960 fresh out of St. Louis' Washington University for $3,000, which covered his first season salary and bonus, said: "I'm very proud of him. He thought he wasn't getting anywhere after four years in the minors and was going to quit but let me talk him out of it."

A hip injury to Julian Javier in the next-to-last game of the 1964 season gave Maxvill an opportunity to play in a pennant-clinching contest and in all seven games against the Yankees in the 1964 World Series.

A YEAR LATER, following the trade of Dick Groat to Philadelphia, the shortstop job of the Cardinals was wide open. Jerry Buchek temporarily won it but Maxvill took it away from Buchek following a slow start by Buchek at the outset of the 1966 season.

Ever since, Maxvill has been the Cardinal shortstop. In 1967-68 the Cardinals again won pennants and in 1968 Maxvill for the first time was voted a Sporting News Golden Glove emblematic of fielding supremacy, by managers and coaches. Bob Gibson and other St. Louis pitchers heartily approved of that, saying they liked Maxvill playing behind them.

THE REACTION of Cardinal pitchers to Maxvill's glove work was understandable. In 1968 he led all but two National League shortstops in fielding (13 errors). Only Bobby Wine (10 errors) and Larry Bowa (11 errors) made fewer than Maxvill in 1968.

Although his bat hasn't improved through the years (.219 lifetime average), his glove has. In 1970 he led NL shortstops with a .982 percentage, 12 errors in 654 chances.

Maxvill is a brainy fellow. He has an electrical engineering degree from Washington University. Now 33, he doesn't have any worries whatsoever when his playing days are over. He presently is a sales engineer during the off season for a St. Louis electrical firm. He's come a long way since his original $3,000 contract.

four games that quarterback Steve Spurrier has been sacked just once and Brodie not at all in the first four pre-season games, compared to 12 sackings administered by the 49ers rushers . . . Jim McCann and rookie Tom Wittum, fighting for the job as team punter, each kicked seven times for 272 yards in the first four games, an identical 38.8 yard average. Since McCann has a year of experience on Wittum, he got the job and Tom got the spot on the taxi squad.

RAIDER NOTES — A knee injury might keep 13-year-old all-pro center Jim Otto out of the game. Since it's only exhibition, his string of 168 consecutive league games will remain intact. Otto has missed only one game in his pro career, a pre-season game against Boston in 1963 . . . If you're wondering what happened to ex-49er running back Dave Kopay, you can see him now as a member of the Raiders . . . Dallas (5-0) is the only other NFL team besides Oakland undefeated in pre-season play.

Gabriel Is Latest Ailing Ram

LONG BEACH (AP) — Quarterback Roman Gabriel's the latest victim of a wave of preseason injuries that has struck the Los Angeles Rams.

Gabriel, who has played in the last two National Football League exhibition games after missing the first two with a collapsed lung, may go back to the sidelines Saturday night when the Rams travel to San Diego to meet the Chargers.

The Rams said Thursday that a bruised knee Gabrielsuffered last Saturday against Kansas City wasn't responding to treatment.

"If he's going to play, he will start and we will see how he progresses," said Coach Tommy Prothro. Pete Beathard is the No. 2 quarterback.

Brown Gets Heat For Two Claims

WILMINGTON, Ohio (UPI)— Cincinnati coach Paul Brown says he has been "getting a lot of heat" for placing claims on tackle Bob McKay of the Cleveland Browns and defensive end Bubba Smith of the Baltimore Colts.

The action by Brown forced the Browns and Colts to take McKay and Smith off the injured waiver list and keep them on the active roster even though they can't play.

"It's within the rules," said Brown. "It's just a matter of trying to help out my team."

"They might not like me for doing it," said Brown. "But the truth of the matter is, we've done the same kind of thing with other teams."

Smith recently underwent surgery on his knee and is expected to miss most of the season.

"Wouldn't you claim Smith if you had a chance," Brown asked. "We'd be willing to wait till next year if we had to. We'd be willing to pay his salary and bring him back next season."

INGLEWOOD — Jim Cleamons, a 6-4, 185-pound reserve guard for the National Basketball Association champion Los Angeles Lakers was traded to the Cleveland Cavaliers Thursday for future draft picks.

Cleamons, an Ohio State University star, saw limited action with the Lakers last season, playing in 38 games and scoring 98 points.

Auto Racing

ONTARIO — If Mario Andretti is worried about being without a victory for more than two years on the U.S. Auto Club championship trail, he doesn't let it show.

"Perhaps, it might bother me if I hadn't had any wins at all during that time but that's not the case," said the 32-year-old Italian immigrant, who is here for the California 500 Sunday.

He qualified in the middle of the second row — fifth spot — at 191.449 miles per hour, almost 10 m.p.h. slower than Bobby Unser's 201.374.

Dan Gurney's No. 2 driver, Jerry Grant, captured the pole in last Saturday's qualifying at 199.600 m.p.h. qualifying a day late because of engine problems, Bobby Unser earned 23rd place in the field.

DARLINGTON, S.C. — Bobby Allison piloted his Chevrolet around the Darlington Raceway at a record speed of 152.228 miles per hour Thursday to capture the pole position for the Southern 500 stock car race on Labor Day Monday.

State Champion Cooper Defeats Boxer Bryant

OAKLAND (UPI)—California middleweight champion George Cooper scored a majority decision over Gene (Honey Bear) Bryant in a non-title 10-round bout Thursday night.

It was the second time in three years Cooper defeated the 159-pound Las Vegas veteran, the last by a knockout three years ago.

Cooper, 156, Oakland, started slowly and showed the rust of an eight month layoff. But he warmed up midway through the bout and scored enough times with combinations to the head to win the votes of two officials, 6-2 and 7-2, while another judge voted 3-3.

Stanford, Cal Teams Work Out

By Associated Press

SANTA BARBARA — It's afternoon workouts only for the University of California's Golden Bears from now until their opener in Boulder against Colorado a week from Saturday — no more two-a-day drills.

Coach Mike White said he will have two-deep lineups determined by Monday, using film of Saturday's upcoming scrimmage and Wednesday's scrimmage, to make decisions.

He said Thursday he is pretty well set on these starters: wide receivers Steve Sweeney and Mike Shaughnessy; defensive backs Scott Stringer, Bob Curry, Bill Amstrong and Clarence Duren, and offensive linemen Mark klink, Steve Lawrence, Ted Seifert, Kevin O'Dorisio. Either Scott Hudgins or Ray Volker will be paired with Siefert at guard.

Two candidates for the Stanford football team will be out of action following injuries, team officials say.

First-team free safety Dennis Bragonier was kept out of Thursday's workouts with a slight concussion but is expected back next week.

Reserve defensive end Mark Ferguson, who had knee surgery last year, twisted his right knee again and will be out at least a week.

The Cardinals, formerly the Indians, held their first two football practices with full pads Thursday. The offense concentrated on pass blocking and the defense on pass rushing.

Jury Still Out On Durocher

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Leo Durocher has in his previous stints as manager gained the reputation as being a man of decision but despite a five-game winning streak, the jury is still undecided in Houston regarding the Astros' newly-appointed pilot.

Lee May and Bob Watson hit two-out singles in the third inning to drive in two runs and Larry Dierker scattered seven hits Thursday night to extend Houston's winning streak to five games as the Astros downed the Philadelphia Phillies, 5-1.

The victory was the fourth straight for the Astros under the leadership of Durocher, who was named manager of the club last Saturday by Houston General Manager Spec Richardson. Durocher, who managed the Chicago Cubs from 1966 until July 25 of this season, replaced Harry "the hat" Walker.

"We can't say Durocher is better than Walker," said third baseman Doug Rader. "We don't know yet. We're just getting to know him, but it's an exciting change. He's a strong individual who doesn't hem and haw. I like that."

"We are playing good but I don't know if its because we have a different manager," said Houston star Cesar Cedeno. "We are just playing good ball and everybody is happy with him."

Durocher himself would take no credit for the Astros' current success. "I'd take no credit for it at all. They're playing the way I like to see a club play—they are going out to win. They have a lot of spirit, more than I've seen in a long time."

May and Watson hit back-to-back singles and Rader hit a bases-loaded double to score the two runners and climax the four-run outburst. Cedeno doubled in the sixth inning to drive in Roger Metzger, who had walked and stolen second.

Dierker improved his record to 14-7 as he yielded one walk and struck out four.

Los Angeles defeated Chicago 5-3 in the only other National league game scheduled. In the American League, California shut out Detroit 4-0, New York blanked Texas 7-0 and Milwaukee beat Kansas City 7-3.

Nolan Ryan hurled a three-hitter for his ninth shutout and the Angels erupted for four runs in the first inning to knock the Tigers out of first place in the American League East.

By completing a sweep of the three-games, California dropped the Tigers a half-game behind idle Baltimore. The slumping Tigers were able to collect only 10 hits in the three contests as California increased its winning streak to five straight.

Claude Osteen, helping himself with a two-run single, overcame a shaky seventh inning to pitch the Dodgers past Chicago. Osteen had a two-hitter and a 4-0 lead until the last of the seventh when Billy Williams lined a one-out single. Osteen then issued a walk to Jim Hickman and Ron Santo followed with a three-run homer.

Bobby Murcer's 100th career home run, a three-run shot in the second inning, was all the support Fritz Peterson needed to record the 18th shutout of his career in New York's win over the Rangers.

Murcer, who became the 20th Yankee to achieve 100 or more homers in a career, hit his 25th homer off Rich Hand following a walk to Horace Clarke and a single by Thurman Munson. Munson's single had driven in Celerino Sanchez, who opened the frame with a single and was sacrificed to second by Peterson.

FISH AND GAME

Top Trout Fishing In Lakes Expected

By AL GIDDINGS

With the weather cooling in the Sierra, many of the lakes will now begin to provide the season's best trout fishing. Davis Lake in Plumas County is improving.

Last year, while dove and sage grouse hunting in Lassen County, we eventually landed in Webber Lake country near Truckee. We fished two lakes called Meadow Lake and White Rock Lake, but took only a few small fish. Later, on Sept. 26 through 29, the entire area was covered with snow. The sun soon came out again melting most of the snow, but the nights were generally cold — almost freezing.

The fishing took an unbelievable change for the better. One particular day, Marty Medin, Mary and I took 26 kamloops that all were about 14 inches long. They were the fat, red-meated fish that fight so well and taste so good. The brown trout in Webber went on a real biting spree also. The year before, the same thing happened, and I ended up catching an 8½-pound brown on a trolled Rapala lure. So don't put your trout rods away, the best fishing is yet to come.

WE HAD SOME questions on what to expect for this year's dove season which opened today. Good summer nesting conditions has resulted in excellent productions of young. Upland Game Coordinator Harold Harper called the prospects "the best in years." Prime hunting opportunities should be found in the Imperial Valley-Colorado River areas, the western Sacramento Valley and the San Joaquin Valley areas around Fresno, Madera, Merced, Kern, King and Tulare counties. Other good bets are the coastal counties of Monterey, San Benito and San Luis Obispo. Prospects for northeastern California are poor. Leading counties for dove last year were Imperial, Fresno, Kern, Tulare and Riverside in that order. I've noticed but a few doves in Marin County — I believe limits will be hard to come by.

Prospects are rated "good" for sage grouse in the three-day season tomorrow through Monday in Modoc, Lassen, Mono and Inyo counties where hunting is permitted. Best bets for hunting is in Modoc and Lassen and the northern part of Mono county in the Bodie area, and around the Walker and Carson River drainages.

According to Harper, populations of the lightly hunted Sierra and ruffed grouse have remained stable, and fair hunting should prevail. Best bets are in the northern California counties and in the meadowareas of the high sierra.

Recently two bears, one with an uncontrollable taste for honey and the other with a penchant for disturbing campers, have been removed from their former haunts in Napa and Lake counties and today are exploring new territories in the Mendocino National Forest.

THE BEAR with a taste for honey was trapped by the Department of Fish and Game near Angwin in Napa County after it had destroyed 16 of 24 hives belonging to a commercial bee keeper.

The 300-pound male was transported to an area in the Mendocino National Forest near Covelo and released.

The second animal, a 175-pound female with a fondness for the public campground at Lake Pillsbury in Lake County was trapped after a number of campers said they found the bear's habits somewhat disconcerting.

THIS BEAR also was trapped unharmed and released in the National Forest near Covelo.

The bears were trapped and relocated in keeping the Department of Fish and Game policy which provides that whenever possible bears causing extensive property damage or posing safety problems will be trapped alive. They are released in other areas instead of being killed.

SCOTT HORTON, 14, of San Marin, shot himself a 100-pound buck last week near Cloverdale. He was on a hunting trip on the John Ratto ranch with his brother, Greg, and grandfather, Andy Bottini.

St. Louis Blues Sell Pair To Islanders

Lavender, 6-foot-1 and 180 pounds, reported to the Blues in midseason last year from the Denver Farm Club. He scored five goals in 46 games with the Blues.

Pulkkinen, 23, spent the entire season with the Kansas City Blues last year.

Suburban One-Hits San Francisco Foe

Morey Swarm and Joe Nystrom combined for a one-hitter last night as Suburban Auto Repair on San Rafael defeated Morey's, 11-0, in a San Francisco "A" League softball game.

Jess Munyon hit two home runs and Dennis Staub one for Suburban, while Staub drove in four runs and Phil Gambucci had three hits.

Net Tourney Entry Deadline Is Slated

Ticket Holder Suit

NEW ORLEANS (UPI)—A New Orleans Saints season ticket holder filed a $50 million anti-trust suit against that professional football team Thursday, saying he was forced to buy tickets to two pre-season home games in order to be eligible for regular season tickets.

William Skye filed in the suit in federal district court on behalf of all season ticket holders for Saints games since the team's first season in 1967.

In filing the suit, Skye contended that "since the Saints hold a monopoly on professional football within a 300 mile radius of New Orleans, it is an illegal tying agreement to force purchase of exhibition game tickets in order to be able to purchase regular season tickets."

Allen Undecided On No. 1 Quarterback

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

George Allen is still undecided as to whom his starting quarterback will be but Curt Knight has left very little doubt as to who will be kicking Washington's field goals this season.

Knight booted field goals of 51 and 24 yards in the final period Thursday night that enabled the Redskins to rally from a 101-yard kickoff touchdown return by Miami's Charley Leigh and edged the Dolphins 27-24 in a pre-season contest.

Knight's winning boot came with only 36 seconds left in the see-saw contest which saw the Redskins raise their exhibition record to 4-1.

Head coach Allen again divided playing time between Billy Kilmer, who led Washington into the championship playoffs last season, and Sonny Jurgensen, the No. 1 active passer in the National Football League.

Leigh, who had touchdown returns of 99 and 57 yards called back on penalties in Miami's contest last week, tied the game 21-21 with his electrifying run late in third quarter.

In games this weekend Baltimore plays Detroit Friday night. Saturday's schedule features Denver vs. New England, Kansas City vs. Dallas, Atlanta vs. New York Jets, New Orleans vs. Pittsburgh, San Diego vs. Los Angeles, Green Bay vs. St. Louis, and the New York Giants vs. Philadelphia. In Sunday contests its Chicago vs. Buffalo, Cincinnati vs. Cleveland an San Francisco vs. Oakland. Houston is at Minnesota is the single Labor Day clash Monday night.

In other player developments Washington announced it traded defensive back Willie Germany to Atlanta for a future draft choice. Germany was drafted on the seventh round last season from Morgan State.

U.S. Olympians Put Down: A Claim

By MILTON RICHMAN

Don't go by the gold medals or only by what U.S. competitors are doing on the field. They're getting murdered off it.

Everytime there's any question over who should get the shoddy end of the stick or the sharp end of the pole, the answer always comes out the same. Stick it into the good, old U.S.A. So what else is new?

For those at home keeping score, the U.S. has gotten it in the neck four times here already since the Olympics began a week ago.

Four times highly "questionable decisions" have gone in favor of other countries and against the U.S. Once could be an oversight; twice, a mistake; three times, possibly some computer error. But four straight times?

The latest slap-down has to do with a new-type American fibre glass pole.

"It's called a "catapole" and Bob Seagren of Pomona, Calif., used it to set a world record of 18 feet 5-3-4 inches in a pole vault event this summer at Eugene, Ore. Many of the world's foremost vaulters, Sweden's new sensation, Kjell Isaksson, to name one, like the pole and used it, too.

But after Seagren set his record, the International Amateur Athletic Federation (IAAF) banned the catapole, as far as these Olympics were concerned, anyway, because it said the pole had not been available to everyone around the world for at least a year before the Games.

Seagren didn't let the matter drop there.

He came here and appealed to the technical committee of the IAAF.

He talked, he pleaded, he demonstrated.

He taped the catapole so that nobody could detect any difference between it and any other pole. He showed where it was actually four ounces heavier, not lighter. The technical committee agreed with him there was no advantage in using the pole and lifted its ban.

That was four days ago.

Now the IAAF says the pole is banned again.

Why did East Germany protest?

It seems that Wolfgang Nordwig, its top vaulter, tried using the catapole and didn't do very well with it. East Germany saw the handwriting on the bleacher wall, Goodbye gold medal. If their boy, Wolfgang, couldn't win it, why should the American Seagren?

That was only one decision that cost the U.S. They also came out badly in three others.

Tim McKee of Newtown Square, Pa., finished in a dead heat for first place with Sweden's Gunnar Larsson in the 400-meter individual medley swim, but Larsson got the gold medal, not McKee.

Generally, in all international swimming competition the times are taken to 100th of a second. For some unexplained reason, they were taken to 1,000th of a second this time. Larsson's time was 4:31.981 and McKee's 4:31.983 so it was decided the U.S. had finished second—despite the dead heat.

Reggie Jones, a light middleweight from Newark, N.J., was another American "loser" in pretty much the same way Tuesday.

All he did was stagger his Russian opponent three times in the third and last round, bloody his eye and practically dispatch him to Berlin. Two of the judges voted for Jones. One voted for the Russian, while another judge and the referee called it a draw but gave the decision to the battered Soviet because of, now get this, "superior style."

Probably the most flagrant example of what is happening here to the U.S. occurred in last Sunday's wrestling match between Chris Taylor of Dowagiac, Mich., and Russia's Alexander Medved.

The referee, a Turk, not only gave Medved all the better of it, but also the nod, after which he was expelled for poor officiating.

Naturally, there was a protest about that.

So whadd'ya think happened; the referee was quietly reinstated. His very next assignment involved another U.S. wrestler.

Business Is Booming For Demolition Firm

Jack Loizeaux founded Controlled Demolitions, Inc., of Towson, Md., in 1960. The rising cost of labor for tearing down old buildings had sent wrecking contractors looking for cheaper ways to clear away old structures. They were doubtful about blasting at first, and Loizeaux could only get insurance from Lloyds of London — American insurers wouldn't touch the business.

However, after a few jobs like blasting hardened concrete out of a concrete mixer without damaging the machine, the confidence and the jobs rolled in.

Controlled Demolitions still has only three regular employes: Jack and sons Mark and Douglas, plus Jack's wife who serves as secretary and treasurer. A few other part-time employes, two of them sons-in-law, work occasionally on drilling and leading dynamite into the holes.

Jack has refused to hire more full-time employes, he recently told Engineering News-Record, because he fears they would not be as careful as his standards demand. He is equally demanding with the contractors for whom he works because "it's dangerous when we work for someone who is not concerned about safety and takes short cuts."

The senior Loizeaux was graduated in forestry from the University of Georgia in 1941. He worked in forestry and wood technology, then founded his own tree service firm in the Baltimore area.

Trading Is Sluggish As Stocks Rise

Stock analysts attributed the slow trading to pre-Labor Day weekend indifference. However, they added, some investors probably were heartened by the decision of the Federal Reserve not to raise its discount rate to 4 3-4 per cent from 4 1-2 at the end of Thursday's trading.

The morning advance today was across a broad front.

Prices also were higher on the American Stock Exchange.

Teleprompter led the most active stocks on the Amex and was up 1-4 to 40 5-8 on 19,900 shares.

On the Big Board, Bankers Trust led the most active stocks, unchanged at 62 7-8 on 58,500 shares. Curtiss-Wright, holder of the exclusive North American rights to the Wankel engine, was second, off 1-2 to 54 1-4 on 51,900 shares. Revere Copper was third most active, off 1-4 to 11 1-4 on 43,800 shares.

A number of selected glamour issues posted good-sized gains in early trading. Among them, Dupont was up 2 1-2, Eastman Kodak 1 1-8, Superior Oil 2 1-2, IBM 1 1-4, Walt Disney 1 3-8 and Texas Instruments 2 points.

Steel issues were mostly mixed. U.S. Steel was up 5-8.

In the motors, General Motors and Ford each added 1-8 while Chrysler eased 1-8.

In addition to Superior, Getty gained 1 and Pennzoil 5-8.

Rail issues were firmer, as were airlines and aircraft stocks. American Airlines picked up 3-4 and Eastern 1-2.

Artisan Plaza In San Anselmo

Particia Barbara and her son Tony Barbera of Sleepy Hollow remodeled the 18,000-square-foot building, both inside and out.

Decoarted in an outdoor motif, the shops are set among two groves of living redwood trees and a gazebo.

Here are the shops in Artisan Plaza:

Petals and Pods Flower Shop — Owner is Mrs. Bobbi Lorentzen of Santa Rosa, who took formal training as a designer in a florist shop in Hampton, Va. She has been a florist in Petaluma for the past two years. Her specialities are terrariums, dried and artificial arrangements as well as fresh floral arrangements.

Bow-Arts Shoppe — Owners and operators are Warren and Katherine Bowden. Their principal business is decoupage, but they also have a selection of other gift items including handmade Christmas ornaments. Decoupage is a 17th century European art of cutting out prints, designing them on objects, and burying them under at least 30 coats of varnish.

Their shop is also their studio where they do their work as well as display. The have decoupage on furniture, lamps, trays, boxes and plaques.

Pax — It is owned and operated by artist Pat Mallory, who has been working almost exclusively in batik for three years. At this time, her work primarily explores hidden landscapes expressing togetherness, loneliness, isolation, and abounding joy.

The Wickery — Owned and operated by Pat Kennedy, the shop specializes in both Victorian and contemporary wicker and accessories. For the opening, she will display a large 19th Century wicker chaise lounge with ashtray and drink receptacles.

Sumner Art Gallery — Artist Sumner George Anderson owns and operates this gallery. A Mill Valley resident, he is known for his "nature in motion" studies. Anderson designed the commemorating medallion that was chosen to represent San Francisco's Golden Gate Park centennial anniversary. His paintings are currently displayed in galleries in Mill Valley, Tiburon and Ghirardelli Square.

Unique Antiques — Owned and operated by Patricia Barbera, Unique specializes in Victorian furniture and decorator items. Displayed are a pair of hand-carved Dentzel carousel horses, a real 114-year-old stuffed lion, an antique two-seat buggy, and an antique sleigh.

Artists currently showing at the Artisan Plaza are David L. Auerbach, who has paintings, sculptures and frescos; Donna Bell, who specializes in weaving; and George H. Johansen of Fairfax, whose medium is primarily acrylics.

SUCCESSFUL INVESTING

Utility Issues Offer Capital Protection

By ROGER E. SPEAR

Q. We hold 200 Public Service Electric & Gas (NYSE) common, bought way back at $27.50. Also we hold 34 of the preferred. Should we continue to hold these stocks as we are long retired? Those shares never go up like other stocks. — T.K.

A. Utility issues as a group have failed to keep pace with stocks in other industries, and the gap between them has been spreading since early 1971. Behind the declining multiples which investors have accorded utility stocks, is the growing conviction that their growth rate has been seriously curtailed by the massive debt burdens carried by the industry. As a whole, utilities are currently selling on a yield basis in a manner similar to such fixed income securities as bonds. A further problem which has long plagued the industry is strict rate regulation and the unwillingness of most regulating agencies to grant much-needed increases. Public Service E & G is a case in point. In March, 1970, the company filed a request for $72 million in increases, nine months later $41 million was granted on an interim basis. Not until March (two years later) did the New Jersey PSC see fit to add another $24 million to the rate adjustment; this was still $7 million below the amount judged necessary two years and about 10 per cent worth of inflation earlier.

Because of a rights offering on a one-for-nine share basis, per-share earnings comparisons for the twelve months ended June showed a 12 per cent year-to-year decline. Total revenues were up 12 per cent, however, due in good measure to the rate adjustment. A 2c-a-share increase in the quarterly dividend rate, the first boost in 3½ years, was paid in June. Shares have considerable appeal for capital protection.
